FOREWORD

I have read Professor C. S. Upasak's Dictionary of Early Buddhist Monastic Terms, and am satisfied that this is a thorough and comprehensive work, rather in the nature of an encyclopaedia than a dictionary. Professor Upasak has carefully studied every significant term in the Pali Vinaya texts and has thus produced a work of reference which will prove of great value to all students of the subject. The work is scholarly and accurate, and I whole-heartedly recommend it to a potential publisher.

PREFACE

While teaching the Vinaya Piṭaka in the Post-graduate classes at Nava Nālandā Mahāvihāra I was confronted with a number of problems connected with the monastic rules and ecclesiastical terms. The former were difficult to understand as we were cut off from the main stream of Buddhist monastic tradition, and the problems presented by the latter were mostly semantic. I had to grapple with these problems and the present Dictionary is the outcome of my sustained effort to explain them.

It is now fully established that the Pāli Vinaya Piṭaka is the earliest available text dealing with the monastic life of the Buddhist Saṅgha in ancient India. The Vinaya Piṭaka is 'a collection of rules regulating the outward conduct of the Bhikkhus and the Bhikkhunīs'. This Piṭaka comprises five books, viz., the Mahāvagga, Cullavagga, Pārājika, Pācittiya and Parivāra. While the Mahāvagga & the Cullavagga are comprehended under the title 'Khandhaka', the Pārājika and the Pācittiya together are called the 'Sutta-vibhaṅga'. The Mahāvagga and the Cullavagga are supposed to be the collections of the 'words of the Buddha', and contain the historical accounts of the 'dos' and 'dents' prescribed by Him for the Order. The Sutta-vibhaṅga (Pārājika and Pācittiya) bears closest relations to the Pātimokkha, the earliest text of the 'Code of Discipline' of the Buddhist Saṅgha. The Pātimokkha is a collection of various monastic rules (contained in the Vinaya Piṭaka) meant for being recited on every fortnightly congregation on the Uposatha day collectively by the Saṅgha. There are two parts of the Pātimokkha, viz., the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha and the Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha. The former consists of 227 ecclesiastical rules and the latter 311 rules. The Sutta-vibhaṅga in its two books (Pārājika & Pācittiya) presents the explanation along with the historical background of the Pātimokkha rules. The Parivāra, as the name suggests, is the compendium or digest of the Vinaya Piṭaka. Undoubtedly this is a later work, as rightly suggested by some scholars, a work of a Sinhalese monk.

If we make a survey of the Vinaya Pitka it is abundantly clear that the commandments of the Buddha were essentially needed for the smooth running and development of the Saṅgha established by the Great Teacher, the Buddha. The violation of any rule of the Pātimokkha makes a member of the Order 'impure' and needs 'expiation'. The other texts of the Vinaya Piṭaka not only prescribe rules for initiation like Pabbajjā and Upasampadā but also prescribe the duties of a 'preceptor' or 'teacher' towards his 'disciple' or 'pupil' and vice-versa. They also contain the rules for the fortnightly congregation of Upostha and recitation of the Pātimokkha rules on this occasion; rules for the 'rainy season-resort' (vassāvāsa) and Pavāraṇā; rules for the construction of a Vihāra or Kuṭī; rules for the robe and robe-cloth (civara); rules for accepting meals, eatables, drinks, medicines, etc.; rules for levelling a charge and framing a 'case' (adhikaraṇa) against a monk and its disposal (samatha) by the Saṅgha; rules for the legal procedure to be followed in the case of a 'schism' in the Saṅgha and such other rules necessary for the effective and peaceful running of the Saṅgha. In short, the Vinaya Piṭaka is an account of the 'Code of Conduct' for the Buddhist Order.

The Pātimokkha is sometimes called 'Adhisīla' (Special moral rules) and the other texts of the Vinaya Piṭaka are comprehended by the term 'Ajjhācāra' (General moral rules). The whole Vinaya Piṭaka, in fact, is a law-book meant exclusively for the members of the Order. Throughout these texts the legal style is apparent. Many terms used therein are highly technical and bear particular ecclesiastical connotations. In order to bring out the exact meaning of these terms a need was naturally felt in the past. As a result the 'commentaries' known as Atṭhakathās were written to fulfil this need and to obviate the difficulties in reading the texts. The Samantapāsādikā is a most comprehensive commentary on the Vinaya Piṭaka. The Kaṅkhāvitaranī is another commentatorial text on the Pātimokkha. The authorship of both these texts is ascribed to Buddhaghosa who flourished in about 4th Century A. D. With the passage of time necessity for further exposition of these terms was felt and consequently the Ṭīkas or the sub-commentaries were written. The Sāratthadīpanī, the Vimativinodanī and Vajirabuddhi Ṭīkā are important sub-commentaries on the Samantapāsādikā. The Khuddasikkhā and its two commentaries, viz, Khuddasikkhāṭṭhikā and Khuddasikkhā-abhinava were also written in order to make the Vinaya texts more clear. Similarly to memorise the Vinaya texts the Vinaya-vinicchaya and Uttaravinicchaya were composed in verse for the use of the Buddhist monks and nuns. The Abhidhānappadīpikā, a lexicon in Pali also presents the interpretation of certain monastic terms.

Buddhism and Buddhist Saṅgha are the cultural heritage of many countries of South-East Asia. Buddhism is a living religion in these countries. The Buddhist fraternity has been zealously scrupulous in the observance of the rules laid down in the texts. The Theravāda countries cannot even dream of deviating from the 'Code of Conduct'. The monasticism as practised today in these countries is in conformity with the rules laid down in the Pātimokkha and the Vinaya Piṭaka. There may be a few variations from one country to another but basically the rules are the same. For a modern scholar these traditional practices of the Pāli Buddhist Countries are in no way less helpful in understanding the technical terms than the Atṭhakathās and the Ṭīkās.

I was fortunate enough to have a few Buddhist monk-scholars who work as teachers at Nava Nālandā Mahāvihāra (Nalanda Institute of Buddhist Studies & Pali). They enabled me to get over many difficulties which confronted me in the preparation of this work. Among them I am particularly indebted to Venerable Dr. U. Zaggaravibhamsa, M. A., Ph. D. who unreservedly helped me by his encyclopaedic knowledge of Pali. I must confess that this work would never have been complete if I would not have got his constant and sustained help and encouragement. Venerable Dr. U. Dhammaratana, M. A., D. Phil., another monk-professor of this Institute had always been a source of inspiration and information on many matters. I cannot forget my colleague Sri D. K. Banerjee, Lecturer in Pali and Ancient Indian & Asian Studies, who in fact remained like an associate with me. Dr. Mahesh Tiwary, M. A., Ph. D. and Sri AngRaj Choudhary, Lecturer in English were very kind to help me in many ways. I take this opportunity to express my most sincere gratitude to these learned colleagues. Professor A. L. Basham of National Australian University has been kind enough to write the foreward of this Dictionary. I do not find words to express my deep sense of gratitude to him for his encouragement in completing this work. I am deeply indebted to him.

Saṅghanāyaka Venerable Bhikkhu J, Kashyap has been my preceptor and teacher at whose feet I could learn Pali and Buddhism. I was in fact inspired by his saintly monastic life and this awakened in me the zeal to take up a study in the monastic life as described in the Pali texts. This Dictionary is the fruitful achievement of his blessings. I cannot express how much I owe to him.

The Vinaya Piṭaka texts utilised by me are the Nālandā Devanāgarī edition edited by Bhikkhu J. Kashyap. References to the Samantapāsādikā given in this Dictionary are also from the Nālandā edition in the Devanāgarī characters. Some Pali texts in the Burmese characters of the Chaṭṭha Saṅgāyanā edition and some in the Roman characters of the Pali Text Society have also been used wherever found necessary.

I must not claim that the present work is an exhaustive and final work in the field. In fact, when I took up this project, I found myself greatly handicapped because I had no first-hand knowledge of the Buddhist culture and monastic traditions at present prevalent in the Tharavāda Buddhist countries of South-East Asia where Pali studies are carried on in the Pariveṇas and Vihāras under the guidance of learned monks. But my lack of knowledge of the tradition was amply made good by the information I was able to elicit from the monk-scholars of different Buddhist countries at present studying at Nava Nalāndā Mahāvihāra and in the end I have the satisfaction that I have been able to explain the technical terms and the monastic rules as found in the texts and could bring out their implications and connotations. I would certainly feel my labour amply rewarded if this Dictionary of Pali Vinaya Terms proves of some value to Indologists in general and Pali scholars in particular.

DICTIONARY OF EARLY BUDDHIST MONASTIC TERMS

Aṃṣabaddhaka

A string, generally to hang the bowl down from the shoulder. Its use was approved by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 203). The bags for the thimble or medicine or shoe etc. used to have such strings. (Ibid. pp. 206-207).

Akaṭayūsa

The semi-cooked Mugga-gruel (Phaseolus mungo). (Asiniddho muggapacita-pāṇīyo—SP. Vol III, p. 1156; Cf. Anabhisaṅkhatena muggayūsenā—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 186). The Buddha allowed its use as a medicine for the monks. (Mv. p. 225).

Akatamallaka

A kind of soft scrubber. (Dante acchinditvā kataṃ—SP. Vol. III, p. 1280). Its use was allowed only to those monks who suffered from itches (Kacchurogābādho). (Cv. p. 194).

Akālacivara

A robe or a robe-cloth (Cīvara) received at a time which does not fall within the 'prescribed period of receiving the robe or the robe-cloth' (Cīvarakāla). The Cīvarakāla ordinarily lasts for one month after Pavāraṇā; but for the monk who has been bestowed upon with the Kaṭhinacivara, it is of five months after the Pavāraṇā, i. e. from Kattika to Phagguna. (Akālacivaraṃ nāma anattthate kaṭhine ekādase māse uppannam; attthate kaṭhine sattamāsuppannam, kāle pi ādissa dinnam; etaṃ akālacivaraṃ nāma.—Pārā. p. 297; Pāc. p. 333). Even if during the Cīvarakāla the robe or the robe-cloth is expressively offered as the Akālacivara, it should be treated so. In case a nun distributes this kind of robe or robe-cloth considering it as a Kālacivara and takes her own share, she commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule No. 2; Pāc. p. 333).

If the robe-material is received outside the Cīvarakāla, it may be kept to a maximum period of one month. If this exceeds, the monk or the nun commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 3; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 15; Pārā. p. 297).

Akiriya to Samuṭṭhitā Āpatti

The 'offence' which is committed on account of not observing the 'prescribed rule'; for instance, not taking up the 'resolve' (adhiṭṭhāna) before the use of a robe. (Yaṃ akaronto āpojjati. Cīvara-anadhiṭṭhānāpatti viya—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419; Cf. Pari. p. 211).

Akkanāḷa

A dress made of the stalk of Akka (Catotropis gigantea, swallowert). The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 320-321; Cf. Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol II. p. 201).

Aggaḷaṃ

Patching up the robe with a piece of old cloth. (Aggaḷaṃ acchupeyyaṃ chiddaṭṭhāne pilotikakhaṇḍaṃ laggāpeyyaṃ.—SP. Vol III, p. 1197). The Buddha recommended the monks to do so whenever necessary. (Mv. p. 306).

Aggisālā or Agyāgāra

A room for fire. The Buddha recommended a separate room for keeping fire in a Vihāra as he found the monks making the Pariveṇa (courtyard) dirty by spattering fire, ashes etc. here and there. (Cv. p. 248).

When Anāthapiṇḍika constructed the Jetavanārāma at Sāvatti for the Buddha, he made the provision of an Aggisālā there. (Ibid. p. 253). Perhaps the mendicants of other sects used to have separate rooms for fire; for instance, the Jāṭilas had such rooms. (Mv. p. 31).

A Saddhivihārika or Antevāsika is expected to keep the Aggisālā neat and clean. (Mv. pp. 46, 60; Cv. pp. 335, 339).

Aggaḷavaṭṭikā

The bolt-fastener of a door. (Dvārābhāya samappamāṇo eva aggaḷathambho vuccati yattha tīṇi cattāri chiddāni katvā sūciyo denti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Agghasamodhāna-Parivāsa

In case a monk has committed more than one Sanghādisesa offences and has concealed each, he is required to undergo a Parivāsa for that offence which has been concealed for the longest period. And then all 'such other offences are combined together and the penances go concurrently. This kind of Parivāsa is known as Agghasamodhāna-Parivāsa. (Cv. p. 109). See also PARIVĀSA.

Agyāgāra

Aṅguliicchinna

A person whose finger or fingers are cut. (Yassa nakhasesaṃ adassetvā ekā bahū aṅguliyo chinnā honti. Yassa pana suttalantumattam pi nakhasesaṃ paññāyati tam pabbājetum vaṭṭati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1080). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Aṅgulimuddikā

A finger-ring. The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks. If anyone used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Acelaka

A naked ascetic. A monk should not offer any food or eatable to an Acelaka by himself. If he does so, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 41; Pāc. p. 128; Cf. Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. IV, p. 116).

Acceka-Cīvara

A robe received extraordinarily. This cīvara may be offered by a person who decides to donate it on some importunate occasions; such as, when he is going to the battle-field, or going to a long journey, or when he is seriously sick, or when the lady-donor is carrying a baby, or when the person has received the initiation in the Dhamma recently. (Accekacīvaranti gamikagilānagabbhinīabhinavuppanna-saddhānaṃ puggalānaṃ aññatarena vassāvāsikaṃ dassāmīti evaṃ ārocetvā dinnaṃ.—Kv. (M), p. 187).

If such a robe is received the day before the Kattika-puṇṇimā (i.e. Pavāraṇā day), the Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī is allowed to keep it upto the end of the Cīvara-Kāla. (See CĪVARA-KĀLA). If this cīvara is retained for more than this period, the Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 28; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 29; Pm. (B), pp. 10 & 38; Parā. pp. 368-369).

Acchakañji

Thin rice-gruel. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it as a medicine. (Taṇḍulodakamaṇḍo—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156; Mv. p. 225).

Acchinnaka-Civara

A robe prepared without cutting the robe-cloth into pieces (three, five or more). Such a robe (of one piece of cloth) is not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. The robe-cloth, if it is of one piece, must be cut into three or more pieces and then the robe should be prepared. If one uses the robe of one piece of cloth, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 303).

Acchinnadasā-Civara

A robe with the fringe. A robe with the fringe is not allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. If one uses a robe with fringe, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. The fringe, therefore, must be removed before the robe is prepared. (Mv. p. 303).

Ajinakkhipa

The hide of a black antelope, used as a garment. The Buddha prohibited the monks to use it as a robe. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. It was, indeed, used by other sects as their garments; and so it is called 'Titthiyadhaja'. (Mv. p. 320).

Ajinappaveṇī

A bed-cover made of the hide of black antelope. (Ajinacammehi mañcappamāṇena sibbitvā katā paveṇīti.—SP. Vol. III, pp 1049-50; Cf. Ajinamigaśammānaṃ atisukhumattā dupaṭṭatipaṭṭāni katvā sabbantīti vuttaṃ ajinappaveṇī ti—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M) Vol. II, p. 148).

It is regarded as the Uccāsayanamahāsayana and so it is not allowed for the use of monks. If one uses it, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting but never for sleeping even if it belongs to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Añjana

Eye-ointment; such as Kalañjana, Rasañjana, Sotañjana, Gerukaṃ, Kapallaṃ. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Mv. p. 221).

Añjanī

A pot, with lid and a string, to keep the eye-ointment (Añjana). The Buddha allowed it for the monks. The pot may be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit, iron or conch. But it should never be made of gold, silver or of any precious material. If one uses a pot-made of any such costly material, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 221-222).

Añjanithavikā

A bag to carry the Añjanī (the pot for collyrium). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. Strings to carry or to tie were also provided. (Aṃsabaddhakam, Bandhanasuttakam.—Mv. p. 222).

Añjanisalākā

A small stick or pencil for applying the collyrium. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Mv. p. 222). But it should not be made of gold, silver or of any precious metal; otherwise an offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. It may be made of bone, ivory, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit, iron or conch-shell. (Ibid.).

Añjanupapimsana

Preparation of collyrium (Añjana) by grinding the medicinal ingredients. The ingredients as mentioned are sandalwood, Tagara, Kālānusāriya, Tālisa, and Bhaddamuttaka (Hindī—Bhaṅgarailā). The Buddha allowed the monks to prepare and use such a collyrium. (Mv. p. 221).

Aññavādaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who does not reply relevantly to the questions put to him. For instance, when interrogated about an offence committed by him, he, instead of replying to the point, evades and retorts thus: “Who has committed it, what has been committed, where has it been committed, how has it been committed, whom are you asking, what are you asking for ?” (Ko āpanno, kiṃ āpanno, kismiṃ āpanno, kataṃ āpanno, kaṃ bhaṇatha, kiṃ bhaṇatha ?—Pāc. pp. 56ff.). When the questions are put, one should not so behave as to embarrass the Saṅgha (vihesakam). In case a monk does not reply relevantly or keeps himself silent in order to embarrass the Saṅgha, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 58). And if the Saṅgha takes an action for this improper behaviour against a monk and declares him an Aññavādaka Bhikkhu or Aññavādaka Vihesaka Bhikkhu (as the case may be) and even after that the monk does not reply relevantly, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. The same is applicable in the case of nuns also. (Aññavādake pācittiyam; Aññavādakvihesake pācittiyam—Bhikkhu Rule No. 12; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 108; Ibid. pp. 56-59).

Aṭṭāna

A plank kept at the bathing ghats for the purpose of scrubbing. It is something like a bath-grate especially designed with scratches or quadrangular figures. (Rukkham phalakam viya tacchetva aṭṭhapadākārena rājiyo chinditvā nahānatitthe nikhaṇanti. Tatiha cuṇṇāni ākiritvā manussā kāyam ghaṃsanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). The Buddha disallowed its use for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 194).

Aṭṭhagarudhammā

The “EIGHT IMPORTANT RULES” which ought to be observed by the nuns most scrupulously and sincerely throughout the whole life. These are: (1) Respect must be paid to a monk, even if he has been ordained just a day before, by a nun who is even hundred years old. (2) A nun must not spend her ‘rainy resort’ at a residence where there is no monk. (3) On every fortnight a nun must ask the Bhikkhu Saṅgha the date of Uposatha and the day for ‘exhortation’ (Ovāda). (4) After the ‘rainy resort’ a nun must ‘invite’ (pavāraṇā) in the presence of both the Saṅghas (Bhikkhunī and Bhikkhu Saṅghas) for the three things: viz. what was seen, what was heard, and what was suspected against her. (5) If a nun happens to commit a ‘grievous offence’ (Saṅghādisesa), she should undergo a Mānatta lasting for a fortnight before both the Saṅghas. (6) When a Sikkhamānā (probationer) has trained herself in ‘six rules’ for full two years, she can then seek for Upasampadā from both the Saṅghas. (7) A nun must not abuse or revile a monk on any account. (8) Monks can alone admonish or exhort the nuns but never a nun can admonish or exhort a monk. (Cv. pp. 374-75).

The above rules were laid down by the Buddha when Ānanda advocated for the inclusion of the women-folk in the Saṅgha. The Buddha with much reluctance granted the admission of the women-folk in the Buddhist Order but with the conditions mentioned above. (Ibid. pp. 376-377).

On every Uposatha day the Bhikkhu Saṅgha admonishes the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha with these ‘Eight Important Rules’ before the Uposatha ceremony is held. This is known as Bhikkhunī-Ovāda. (Ibid. pp. 374-375; Pāc. pp. 78, 430).

Aṭṭhapadaka

It is a mode of darning by making small squares like the chess-board squares. (Aṭṭhapadakacchannena pattamukhaṃ sibbitum. —SP. Vol. III, p. 1198; Cf. Vimativinodanīṭikā (M) Vol. II, p. 199). The Buddha allowed the monks to do so, (Mv. p. 313).

Aḍḍhakusi

Intermediate cross-seams in the Bhikkhu’s robe. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. Antarāntarā rassapattānaṃ nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1196).

Aḍḍhadukam

Keeping the chest-hair trimmed in a line. (Udare lomaraṇṇajīṭhapanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1293). The hair on the chest should not be removed by a monk; and so the trimming of it was also disallowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 224).

Adḍhapallaṅka

Sitting in a posture with one leg crossed. (Ekam pādamaṃ ābhujitvā katapallaṅkam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1388). Ordinarily the nuns are not allowed to sit in the cross-legged posture (Pallaṅka). But if a nun is sick or does not feel comfortable, she can sit in Adḍhapallaṅka posture. (Cv. p. 401).

Adḍhamanḍala

A Bhikkhu's robe is generally prepared by cutting a cloth into three, five, seven, nine or more (odd) pieces and then stitching them together.

Each such piece is sub-divided into two pieces, one small and the other big. The former is known as Adḍhamanḍala and the latter as Manḍala. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1196; Cf. Mv. p. 304).

Adḍayoga

A kind of lodging for the Buddhist Order. It is a kind of building having its roof sloped to one side or both but without a wall on any side. Its shape is compared with the crooked wing of the Garuḍa bird. (Supaṇṇavaṅkageham.—SP. Vol. III, 1298).

It was allowed by the Buddha as one of the Senāsanas for the monks, the others being the Vihāra, Pāsāda, Hammiya and Guhā. (Cv. p. 239).

Atiritta (—Bhojana)

The leavings or the remains of a meal. A 'Pavārita Bhikkhu' (i.e. one who has declared to have taken full meal) can eat this food if it is declared so by another monk, but under certain conditions. The conditions are: (i) The food is 'fit' for a monk (Kappiyakatam); (ii) the food is 'accepted' one (Paṭiggahitam); (iii) the accepted food is lifted up (Uccārikatam); (iv) the monk offering the 'remains' and the monk accepting it are at a distance of 2½ hands from each other (Hatthapāse ṭhito). 'Fresh' or Anatiritta food is not allowed to a 'Pavārita Bhikkhu' (as he has already declared to have taken his meal). If a monk takes up an Anatiritta food ('Fresh' food), he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 35; Pāc. p. 116; Pm. (B), p. 13).

Atirekacivara

An 'extra robe'; i.e. a robe which has neither been 'resolved' nor 'assigned' for use (Anadhiṭṭhitam avikappitam). If a monk receives an 'extra robe', he cannot keep it for more than ten days. If he keeps it longer than this, he commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 1, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 13). For the expiation of this offence that extra robe should be abandoned in the presence of a Bhikkhu or a group of monks or Saṅgha. (Parā. p. 288).

Atirekapatta

An 'extra bowl'; i.e. a bowl which has neither been 'resolved' nor 'assigned' for use (Anadhitthito avikappito). If a monk receives an 'extra bowl', he cannot keep it for more than ten days. If it is kept for a longer period than ten days as 'unresolved' or 'unassigned', he is liable to commit an offence of Nissaggiya-Pācittiya, (Rule No. 21; Pārā. p. 346). A Bhikkhunī cannot keep it even for one day. If she does so, she commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule No. 1; Pāc. p. 330).

Attādāna

To present his own 'case' (Adhikaraṇa) before the Saṅgha by himself so that the Saṅgha may remain 'clean' and the Pātimokkha may be recited. It is known as Attādāna. (Sāsanam sodhetukāmo bhikkhu yaṃ adhikaraṇam attanā ādiyati taṃ attādānam vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, 1378). The Buddha has laid down that under the following circumstances a Bhikkhu can present his 'case' before the Saṅgha by himself: (i) He knows the proper time to present his 'case' before the Saṅgha. (ii) He is definite that the 'case' actually exists. (iii) He knows that the 'case' when presented will be of some use. (iv) He possesses the idea that his fellow-Bhikkhus would take the right stand in accordance with the Dhamma and Vinaya. (v) He knows that if the 'case' is presented before the Saṅgha, there would not arise any 'dissension' or 'schism' in the Saṅgha. (Cv. pp. 367-68; Cf Pari. p. 334-35).

If a monk so presents his 'case' by himself before the Saṅgha, the recitation of the Pātimokkha may be postponed on this account. (Ibid.).

Athullavajjā Āpatti

Light offence. Same as Lahukāpatti. (Athullavajjā ti lahukāpatti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1420; Pari. p. 211).

Adasaka Nisīdana

A spreading without fringe. It was one of the ten points which were pleaded by the Vajji monks as valid for the use of the monks. But in the Second Saṅgīti it was found improper for the use of the monks as it involved an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 89; Cv. p. 430).

Adinnaṃ (I)

Anything not formally offered; i.e. a thing belonging to another person and which is not offered. (Adinnaṃ nāma anisaṭṭhaṃ aparicattam rakkhitaṃ gopitaṃ mamāyitaṃ para-pariggahitakaṃ vuccati.—Pāc. p. 57). If a monk or a nun takes anything not formally offered by the owner, he or she is liable to commit an offence of Pārājika. (Rule No. 2; Pm. (B), pp. 1, 27). If the value of the thing taken without permission or not formally offered is less than a Pāda (a kind of coin); i. e. trifling, it should not be regarded as Adinnaṃ. The thing taken must be, therefore, of some value, at least of a Pāda or more than a Pāda.

Adinnaṃ (II)

This word if applied in relation to food, refers to that food which has not been formally handed over (by a person other than a Bhikkhu). (Adinnaṃ nāma apaṭiggahitakaṃ vuccati.—SP. Vol. II, p. 864; Pāc. p. 126).

If a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī takes the food (even belonging to one's own) without being formally handed over by a person other than a Bhikkhu, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 40; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 122; Pāc. p. 126; Pm. (B), pp. 14 & 47).

Adinnādāna

Taking away a thing not given; i. e. stealing, robbing, cheating etc. It is the Second Pārājika, which if committed, the monk ceases to remain a monk and falls from monkhood for ever and is never eligible for re-ordination. (Pārā. p. 56). It is also mentioned that the value of the thing stolen must be at least worth a Pāda (a tiny coin of ancient India) or more. (Ibid. p. 58).

In the Aṭṭhakathā some 25 kinds of stealings are mentioned; and each may be regarded as Pārājika, if committed. (SP. Vol. I, pp. 298-303 ff.) (Also Cf. A V A H Ā R A; viz. Theyyāvahāra, Passayhāvahāra, Parikappāvahāra, Paṭicchannāvahāra, Kusāvahāra.—Pari. p. 231).

Aduṭṭhullā—Āpatti

These five offences; viz. Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Dukkata, Paṭidesanīya and Dubbhāsita are called Aduṭṭhullā-āpatti. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1368, 1419). They are also known as Lahukā-āpatti or Desanāgāminī-āpatti. The other two offences namely, Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa are grouped under Duṭṭhullā-āpatti or Garukā-āpatti or Adesanāgāminī-āpatti. (Ibid.; Cf. Pāc. pp. 51, 173).

Adésanāgāminī—Āpatti

An offence which cannot be redressed by confession; i. e. the Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa. It is the same as Garukā-āpatti. (SP. Vol. III, 1419; Pari. p. 211).

Adhikaraṇa

A 'legal question' or 'case' arising out of a 'dispute', or 'censure' or 'offence' or 'obligation'. Thus there are four kinds of 'legal questions': (1) Arising out of ‘dispute’ (Vivādādhikaraṇa). (2) Arising out of ‘censure’ (Anuvādaḍdhikaraṇa). (3) Arising out of ‘offence’ (Āpattādhikaraṇa). (4) Arising out of ‘obligation’ (Kiccādhikaraṇa).

The Vivādādhikaraṇa or legal question arising out of ‘dispute’ (vivāda) may be in relation to eighteen topics; viz. Dhamma or Adhamma (just or unjust); Vinaya or Avinaya (ecclesiastical or unecclesiastical); Bhāsitaṃ or Abhāsitaṃ (words of the Buddha or not); Āciṇṇaṃ or Anāciṇṇaṃ (practised or not practised); Paññattaṃ or Apaññattaṃ (laid down by the Buddha or not); Āpatti or Anāpatti (ecclesiastical offence or not); Garukāpatti or Lahukāpatti (grievous offence or light offence); Sāvasesa-āpatti or Anavasesa-āpatti (Pārājikā or non-Pārājikā); Duṭṭhulla-āpatti or Aduṭṭhulla-āpatti (whether the Pārājikā and the Saṅghādisesa or the others).

The ‘legal question’ arising out of ‘censure’ (Anuvāda) may occur on the occasion when a monk has fallen away from the ‘moral habits’ (Sīla vipatti); or fallen away from ‘good habits’ (Ācāra vipatti); or fallen away from the ‘right views’ (Diṭṭhi vipatti); or fallen away from the ‘right mode of livelihood’ (Ajīva vipatti).

The ‘legal question’ arising out of ecclesiastical offences (Āpattādhikaraṇa) may be related to all kinds of offences whether grouped under ‘five’ (i.e. Pārājikā, Saṅghādisesa, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya and Dukkaṭa) or under ‘seven’ (i.e. the above five and Thullaccaya and Dubbhāsita).

The legal question arising out of ‘obligation’ (Kiccādhikaraṇa) may be related to any ‘formal act’ of the Saṅgha (Kiccayatā or Karaṇīyatā); or to a ‘formal act’ which needs intimation to the Saṅgha (Apalokana-kamma); or to the Ñattikamma (motion), Ñattidutiya or Ñatticatuttha Kamma (resolutions). (Cv. pp. 170-171; Cf. Pari. pp. 172, 226, 265).

The ‘settlement’ (Samatha) of these ‘legal questions’ may be done in seven ways; viz. Sammukhavinaya (verdict in presence), Sativinaya (verdict granted to an Arhanta monk for being vigilant), Amūḷhavinaya (granting special favour to an insane), Tassapāpiyyasikā (verdict on depravity to a sinful monk who has been committing offences one after another and not admitting them and thereby he has been declared as ‘Pāpabhikkhu’ by the Saṅgha), Yebhuyyasikā (a verdict by the majority of righteous monks), Paṭiññātakaraṇa (decision by self-acknowledgement), Tiṇavatthāraka (‘covering up’ the dispute by ‘way of covering up with grass’ on the filth). (Cv. pp. 150-192).

Adhiṭṭhāna

‘Resolve’ in respect of a bowl or a robe to make it formally his ‘own’ before it is used. This may be done either by speech or by gesture. The monk must formally 'give up' (paccuddharaṇa) the old one before he makes the 'resolve' to use the new one. (Mv. p. 312; Pari. p. 215; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 715). Since a new robe or a new bowl cannot be kept for more than ten days by the monks (and one day by the nuns in the case of a new bowl) as it involves an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya (Rule No. 21 & Rule No. 1; Pārā. pp. 345-346; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 34), the 'resolve' must be made within this period. In case a Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī does not wish to make a 'resolve' but wishes to retain a robe or a bowl for longer period, a Vikappanā ('assignment') should be made to formalise the retention. (Pārā. p. 346; Mv. p. 312; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 650).

For the Vassikasāṭikā an Adhiṭṭhāna should be made only for a period of four months of rains. Similarly in the case of the Kaṇḍupaṭicchādi it should be made till the disease is cured. (Mv. p. 312; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 650.)

The 'resolve' for the robe is called Cīvara-adhiṭṭhāna and that for the bowl is called Patta-adhiṭṭhāna. A 'resolve' in the case of a bowl or a robe is regarded as cancelled in the following circumstances (Adhiṭṭhānavijahana): (1) When the bowl or the robe is robbed; (2) donated; (3) taken away by some one; (4) when the monk disrobes; (5) when dead; (6) when formally given up; (7) when sex is changed; (8) when the monk commits an offence of Parājikā; (9) when the bowl or the robe is worn out and the bowl has a big hole. (Acchedadānagāhehi vibbhama-maraṇuddhatā. Līngasikkhāhi chiddena pattodhiṭṭhānamujjahati. —Khuddasikkhā (M), p. 74; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 651, 714-716).

Adhiṭṭhāna-Uposatha

Same as Puggala-Uposatha; i. e. if a monk is living alone, he is required to take up a 'resolve' as to hold the Uposatha. (Mv. p. 126; Kv. (M) pp. 93, 95). See : UPOSATHA.

Anatiritta (—Bhojana)

Food other than the 'remains' or 'leavings' of the meal (Atiritta); i.e. 'fresh'. (Pari., p. 328). Also See ATIRITTA.

Anavajja-Paññatti

An enactment of an ecclesiastical rule which is related to the monks or nuns alone but not meant for the people at large. If such rules are infringed by a member of the Order, it is regarded as 'immoral'; but if committed by the general people, it is not a 'sin'. For instance, Vikālabhojana or taking up the meal in the afternoon is prohibited for the members of the Buddhist Order; but not for the general public. (Cf. Anāvajjapaññatti paṇṇattivajjā. —SP. Vol. III, p. 1419; Pari. p. 211).

Anavasesa-Āpatti

The Parājikā offence is called Anavasesa-āpatti. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1419). The remaining six offences; viz. Saṅghādisesa, Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkata and Dubbhāsita are grouped under Sāvasesa-āpatti. (Ibid.).

Anāmantacāro

If a Bhikkhu gets the Kaṭhina-cīvara, he receives a 'privilege' of going out without telling other follow-bhikkhus even if there stands an invitation or Dāna for him. This is known as Anāmantacāro. (Mv. p. 226; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1172). Ordinarily, if a Bhikkhu who has not received the Kaṭhina-cīvara goes out without telling others, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 46; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 126; Pāc. p. 139; Pm. (B), pp. 14 & 48). This is one of the five 'privileges' which a Bhikkhu is entitled to have by receiving the Kaṭhina. The other 'privileges' are: He can remain without one of the three robes (Asamā-dānacāro); can take 'Group-meal' (Gaṇabhojana); can keep any number of Cīvaras without Adhiṭṭhāna or Vikappanā (Yāvadatthacīvaram); and always gets a share from the Cīvara donated to the Saṅgha (Yo ca tattha cīvarupphādo so nesaṃ bhavissati). (Mv. p. 266).

Anārambha

'Suitability' of a land for the construction of a Vihāra or Kuṭī. The land is considered as 'suitable' for the construction of a Vihāra or a Kuṭī provided it is not the abode of ants, termites, rats, snakes, scorpions, centipedes, elephants, horses, lions, tigers, leopards, bears, hyenas, or any other wild animal or living creatures; or it is not a field of grains or vegetables; or it is not a slaughter-place, an execution block, a cemetery, a pleasure-grove; or it is not a king's property, or the elephant's stable, horse's stable; or it not a prison; or a tavern, slaughter house; or it is not a road, a cross-road, a public rest-house, a busy road. In case the land is found free from the above 'unsuitabilities' and is found fit, the Saṅgha then goes there to give the formal 'approval' for the construction of a Vihāra to a monk for himself (Mahallaka vihāra) or a Kuṭī. If one constructs a Vihāra or Kuṭī without obtaining 'formal sanction' from the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Dukkata. (Pārā. pp. 220-223).

Anāvāsa

A place not particularly built for the monks; or which is not 'suitable' for the residence of the members of the Buddhist Order; i. e. a place other than Vihāra, Aḍḍhayoga, Pāsāda, Hammiya and Guhā. An Anāvāsa may be a Cetiyaghara, a Bodhigara, a Samujjanī-aṭṭaka, a Dāruaṭṭaka, a Pāṇiyamāḷo, a Vaccakuṭī, a Dvārakoṭṭhaka etc. (SP. Vol III, p. 1244). A monk is ordinarily 'required' to stay in a Vihāra but not elsewhere. (Cv. pp. 239 ff., Cf. Ibid. pp. 68-69).

Aniyatā

A section in the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha consisting of two offences relating to the conduct of a Bhikkhu towards a woman. A Bhikkhu may be charged with an offence of Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa or Pācittiya, as the case may be. (Pārā. pp. 278-286; Pm. (B), pp. 5-6). The punishment, therefore, may vary from Pārājika to Pācittiya according to the circumstances and proofs. Since the nature of the offence is uncertain, this section of the Pātimokkha is called Aniyatā Dhammā, i.e. 'to be decided'. (Na niyato Pārājikaṃ vā Saṅghādisesaṃ vā Pācittiyaṃ vā.—Pārā. p. 282; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 150).

Anupasampanna

A person other than a fully ordained monk (Bhikkhu). An Anupasampanna may be a Sāmaṇera, a Sāmaṇerī, a Sikkhamānā or a lay-devotee. Such a person is not allowed to attend any Saṅgha-kamma nor a Bhikkhu is allowed to teach an Anupasampanna the Dhamma letter by letter; or to sleep with him for more than two or three nights; or to tell him about his supernatural attainments; or to report to him about the 'grievous offences' etc. (Pāc. pp. 27, 30, 41, 51).

Anukkhepa

A sort of compensation which a Bhikkhu has to pay when he gets a share of the robe of more value than others have got. The compensation may be paid in terms of anything 'suitable' for a monk. (Mv. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1193).

Anupaññatti

Later changes or additions made to the original enactment of the ecclesiastical rules are called Anupaññatti. (Pārā. pp. 27, 29 etc.; Pari. p. 4; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1369; Kv. (M), p. 110).

The changes may be made in order to lay down additional rule concerning an offence (Āpattikārā); or to intensify the existing rule (Āpatti upatthambhākārā); or to make certain exemption from the original rule (Anāpattikārā). (Kv. (M), p. 113).

Anuppannapaññatti

An enactment of a rule (Paññatti) which is laid down even before the occasion has arisen for its formulation. This is applicable only in the case of the Aṭṭhagarudhammā, which were laid down by the Buddha for the nuns even before the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha had come into existence. (Pari. p. 4; Cf. Anuppannapaññatti nāma anuppanne dose paññattā. Sā aṭṭhagarudhammavasena bhikkhunīnaṃ eva āgatā aññatra natthi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1369; Kv. (M), p. 110).

Anumatikappa

To regard as 'proper' to carry out a Saṅghakamma by an 'incomplete Saṅgha' in anticipation of obtaining the 'consent' of the rest of the monks when they arrive. It was one of the 'Ten Points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as proper. But, however, in the Second Saṅgīti it was declared as improper since it involved an offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 429; Cf. Mv. p. 331).

Anumodanavatta

Benediction given by the monks after having a meal at the house of a lay-devotee. It is a sort of thanks-giving to the donor. The Buddha has suggested that the eldest monk in the company (who took the meal) should give the benediction; but four or five immediate juniors should also remain with him, while others may leave the place after meal, if they so desire. (Cv. pp. 316-17).

Anuvāta

A supplementary stitching of the robe length-wise is known as Anuvāta. (Piṭṭhianuvātāropanamattena.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1176; Cf. Vimativinodanīṭikā Vol. II, p. 193). The Buddha has allowed the monks to do so. (Mv. p. 312; Cv. p. 205).

Anuvādādhikaraṇa

A 'legal question' arising out of 'censure' (anuvāda) against a monk, who has 'fallen away' from 'moral conduct' (Sīlavipatti); or 'fallen away' from 'good habits' (Ācāravipatti); or 'fallen away' from 'right view' (Diṭṭhivipatti); or 'fallen away' from 'right livelihood' (Ājīvivipatti). And whatever is there about the 'censure' (anuvāda); or fault finding (anulapanā); or talking about (anubhaṇanā); or bickering (anusampavaṅkatā); or inciting (abbhussahanatā); or instigating (anubalapadānaṃ) against any monk are included in the Anuvādādhikaraṇa. (Cv. p. 171).

This 'legal question' may be settled in four ways; viz. (i) Verdict in presence (Sammukhavinaya); (ii) Verdict on 'innocence' of an Arahanta monk (Sativinaya); (iii) Verdict on insanity (Amūḷhavinaya) and (iv) Verdict on special kind of depravity (Tassapāpiyyasikā) (against a monk who had been committing offences again and again and refusing to admit and hence had been declared as a Pāpabhikkhu by the Saṅgha). (Cv. pp. 184 ff.).

Anuvijjaka

An 'examiner Bhikkhu' (a Vinayadhara) who has been appointed to cross-examine the 'alleged monk' (Cudita-Bhikkhu) and also to the 'monk who brings the case before the Saṅgha' (Codaka-bhikkhu). This cross-examination is done before the Saṅgha. A monk is selected by the 'Saṅgha for this purpose. This monk must be just and act according to the 'words of the Buddha' and the 'discipline' laid down by Him for the disposal of a 'case'. (Pari. pp. 283, 285, 289-290, 300-301; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1471-1472).

Anuvivaṭṭa

The two sections of the Bhikkhu's robe on the either side of the middle section (Vivaṭṭa). (Mv. p. 304; cf. Tassa ubhesu passesu dve Khandhani.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1196).

Antaravāsaka

It is one of three Cīvaras or robes (others two are Saṅghāṭī and Uttarāsaṅga) of a Bhikkhu as prescribed by the Buddha. (Mv. p. 305). It is the lower garment, something like a sarong which is fastened round by a belt (Kāyabandhana).

The Antaravāsaka must be of single layer if made of new cloth (Ekacciyaṃ). (Ibid. p. 305). If the material is old, there may be two layers; and if the material is rag, there may be as many layers as suit the purpose. (Khuddasikkhā, Gāthā Nos. 52, 53).

The size of an Antaravāsaka, as mentioned in the Khuddasikkhā, is four full-stretched arms and one close-fisted arm in length and in breadth it may be two or two and a half arms. (Anataravāsako vāpi dīghaso mutṭhipañcako. Aḍḍhatīyo dvihaṭṭho vā tiriyaṇṭena vaṭṭati. Gāthā No. 46). In no case the Antaravāsaka should be more than or equal to that of Buddha's robe; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule Nos. 93 & 166; Pāc. pp. 230-31; Pari. p. 16; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52). On certain occasions, as laid down by the Buddha, a monk may remain without an Anataravāsaka (of course, by putting on Saṅghāṭī or Uttarāsaṅga). The occasions may be when a monk is sick; or it is 'rainy season'; or when crossing a river; or if the Vihāra is safe and well protected; or when he has been exempted on account of Kāṭhina. (Gilāno vā hoti, vassikasāṅketam vā hoti, alṭhatakāṭhinam vā hoti.—Mv. p. 314).

The Antaravāsaka must be dyed in the Kasāya colour, the dye recommended for the robes of the monks. (Ibid. pp. 303, 321).

Antarāya

The 'danger' or 'hindrance' for holding ecclesiastical functions, such as Upasatha or Pavāraṇā. The Antarāyas mentioned in the Vinaya Texts are the following: Rājantarāya (danger from the king), Corantarāya (danger from the thieves), Udakantarāya (danger from water), Agyantarāya (danger from fire), Manussantarāya (danger from human beings), Amanussantarāya (danger from non-human beings), Vāḷantarāya (danger from wild animals), Sarīsapantarāya (danger from the reptiles), Jīvitantarāya (danger on account of death or severe illness or enemy's attempt to take life) and Brahmacariyantarāya (danger from being fallen away from the moral conduct (Sīla) under certain compulsion). (Mv. pp. 114-115, 189; Cv. p. 365; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1115).

Antarāyika

'Hindrances' or 'impediments' in the attainment of 'higher life' or heaven or 'emancipation'. Such hindrances are of five kinds: (i) Kammantarāyika (i.e. hindrances on account of committing five heinous acts; viz. murder of father, mother, Arahanta, shedding the blood of the Buddha, seducing the Bhikkhunīs); (ii) Kilesantarāyika (by holding a wrong view firmly); (iii) Vipākantarāyika (by birth such as eunuch or hermaphrodite or born in an animal world on account of previous Kammas); (iv) Upavāḍantarāyika (by deprecating the Ariya-puggalas); (v) Āṇāvītikkamantarāyika (by committing the 'offences' deliberately). (Pāc. pp. 182-83; Cf. Bhikkhu Pācittiya Rule No. 70; Bhikkhunī Pācittiya Rule No. 146; Pm. (B), pp. 17 & 49; SP. Vol. II, pp. 894-896; Kv. (M) p. 248).

For the Upasampadā as many as 13 'hindrances' are mentioned relating to Bhikkhus and 24 'hindrances' relating to the Bhikkhunīs. On the occasion of Upasampadā the person is asked about these 13 Antarāyikas. And when he is found free from them, then only the Upasampadā is conferred upon him. In order to find out the 'hindrances' in him he is asked thus: "Do you suffer from any of the five diseases; viz. leprosy, boil, eczema, consumption, epilepsy (Kuṭṭho, gaṇḍo, kilāso, soso, apamāro)? Are you a human being? Are you a man? Are you not a slave? Are you free from debt? Are you not a king's soldier? Have you obtained permission from your parents? Have you attained full twenty years of age? Have you got your alm's bowl and robes?" (Mv. p. 97). In the case of Bhikkhunīs most of these are common. (Cv. pp. 392-393).

Antimavatthu-Ajjhāpanaka Bhikkhu

A monk who has committed the Pārājika offence. As soon as a monk commits the Pārājika offence he ceases to be a monk then and there; and also his re-ordination is not possible since this offence is the most heinous type and no 'expiation' is provided for it. (Kv. (M), p. 104). Such a person is regarded as a 'prohibited person' (Vajjanīya puggala) and so no Saṅgh-kamma can be held in his presence. If anybody performs any Saṅgh-kamma in his presence, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 122, 141, 170, 321; Cv. p. 296).

Antevāsika or Antevāsī

A pupil under an Ācariya. When the Upajjhāya of an 'ordained monk' is 'lost', he is then required to take up the Nissaya (guidance or tutelage) under an Ācariya. The monk is then known as the Antevāsika or Antevāsī of the Ācariya.

When he was under the 'guidance' of his Upajjhāya, he was then known as Saddhivihārika. It is laid down that an ordained monk must remain as an Antevāsika till he completes his five years after his Upasampadā. (Mv. 83; the same is the case with the Saddhivihārika also). He may remain under the tutelage for a further period or even for his whole life if he is unable to accomplish himself to live without the 'guidance' of an Ācariya. (Ibid.) The Antevāsika receives training in the Dhamma and Vinaya under the Ācariya.

The procedure for taking up an Ācariya is simple. The desirous Bhikkhu goes to an elderly monk and salutes him sitting cross-legged and utters thus for three times : "Please become my Ācariya; I wish to live under your guidance". (Ekamsaṃ uttarāsaṅgaṃ karitvā pāde vanditvā ukkuṭikaṃ nisīditvā añjaliṃ paggahetvā evamassa vacanīyo : "Ācariyo me bhante hohi āyasmato nissāya vacchāmi"). (Ibid. p. 58). If the Ācariya assents to his proposal by speech or by gesture or by both, he is accepted as an Antevāsika. A Bhikkhu who has completed ten years after his Upasampadā and is 'able' and 'competent', is only entitled to accept an Antevāsika. (Ibid. p. 67).

The relation between the Antevāsika and the Ācariya is like that of the son and father. It is enjoined by the Buddha that the Antevāsika must behave with the Ācariya properly and treat him as his father. (Antevāsiko ācariyaṃ pitucittaṃ upatṭhapessati.—Ibid. p. 58). The duties of an Antevāsika are exactly the same as those of a Saddhivihārika towards his Upajjhāya. (Ibid. pp. 42-47; Cv. pp. 328-332).

The Antevāsika is expected to do all kinds of services to his Ācariya. For instance, the Antevāsika should provide him with a tooth-stick, water, Yāgu, keep his robes and alms-bowl, arrange his seat, chair etc. properly, wash his robes, go with him to the village if he so desires, keep always behind him while walking with him and the like. If the Ācariya falls ill, the Antevāsika must attend him till he is recovered. In case the Ācariya develops antipathy to the Dhamma, the Antevāsika must make every effort to dispel it from him. For this purpose he may arrange a Dhammakathā (religious discourse). If the Ācariya happens to commit some grievous offence; or the Saṅgha has to meet to pronounce ordeals against him, it is the duty of the Antevāsika to make every possible endeavour to make him appear before the Saṅgha so that the Ācariya may expiate himself from the offence.

The Antevāsika should take permission from the Ācariya in almost all matters. For instance, without his permission he should not give nor take a bowl or robe from others. He should neither shave nor get himself shaved by others without the permission of the Ācariya; nor should he do any service to others; nor should he go round behind any other monk (Pacchāsamaṇa); nor should he take a monk who goes behind him; nor should he bring alms for others; nor should he cause others to bring for himself. Without the Ācariya's permission he should not go to a village or to the funeral ground or to a journey. (Mv. pp. 58-62; Cv. pp. 336-340).

In case an Antevāsika does not behave properly with his Ācariya, he is liable to be 'expelled' by the latter (Paṇāmanā). If he commits any thing wrong, he must beg pardon, otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed by him. (Mv. pp. 65-67).

When an Ācariya is 'lost', the Antevāsika should look out for another Ācariya. Under the following circumstances an Ācariya is regarded as 'lost' : When the Ācariya goes away; or disrobes; or dies; or changes his religion; or the Antevāsika is 'united' with his Upajjhāya. (Chayimā, bhikkhave, nissayapaṭipassadhiyo ācariyamhā—ācariyo pakkanto vā hoti, vibbhanto vā, kālaṅkato vā, pakkhasaṅkato vā āṇatti eva pañcamī, upajjhāyena vā samodhānagato hoti.—Ibid. p. 67).

The term Antevāsika is explained in the Abhidhānappadīpikā-tīkā thus: Ācariyassa ante samīpe vasanasīlo ti antevāsī (Gāthā No. 408); i. e. one who resides with the Ācariya is the Antevāsī.

Antevāsika-Vatta

The duties of an Ācariya (teacher) towards his Antevāsika (pupil). It is enjoined by the Buddha that the Ācariya should treat his Antevāsika as his own son and should help him in every respect. (For details see: Mv. pp. 62-65; Cv. pp. 341-345). Also see : ĀCARIYA and ANTEVĀSIKA.

Antopakkam (Piṇḍam)

A food cooked inside the Vihāra or room (other than on Kappiyabhūmi) is known as Antopakkam-piṇḍam. It is not sanctioned for the monks. If a monk eats such a food, he commits an offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253). Also See : KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Antovuttham (Piṇḍam)

Any food or food-material, which is not formally allowed by the Saṅgha, stored inside the Vihāra or in the room (other than the Kappiyabhūmi) is known as Antovuttham-piṇḍam. This was not allowed by the Buddha and if any monk stored any food or food-material and utilised it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253). See : KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Andha

A born-blind or a blind person. Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but those who took part in his ordination ceremony including the Upajjhāya and Ācariya are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Andhabadhira

A person who is blind and deaf. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but all those who took part in his ordination ceremony including the Upajjhāya and Ācariya are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Andhamūga

A person who is blind and dumb. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but all those who took part in his ordination ceremony including the Upajjhāya and Ācariya are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Andhamūgabadhira

A person who is blind, dumb and deaf. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but all those who took part in his ordination ceremony including his Upajjhāya and Ācariya are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Anvādhikaṃ

If a monk does not have sufficient cloth to make robe from it, the Buddha has allowed him to stitch an additional strip of cloth for making a proper robe. This additional cloth is known as Anvādhikaṃ. (Mv. p. 313; Cf. Āgantukapaṭṭaṃ pi dātum. Idaṃ pana appahonake āropetabbam. Sace pahoti āgantukapaṭṭaṃ na vaṭṭati chinditabbam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1198).

Apaṭicchanna-Mānatta

See : ABBHĀNA.

Apaṭicchanna-Mānatta

See: MĀNATTA.

Apalokanakamma

A kind of ecclesiastical action in which a formal intimation is given to the following matters; viz. Osaraṇā (Calling back), Nissaraṇā (Expulsion), Bhaṇḍukamma (Shaving before the Pabbajjā), Brahmadaṇḍa (Social boycott by the Saṅgha) and Kammalakkhaṇa (Other matters of such characteristics). (Pari. p. 390; Cf. SP. Vol III, pp. 1521-1529; Kv. (M) p. 256). Such a formal information is announced three times by a monk before the Saṅgha. (e.g. see Bhaṇḍukamma.—Mv. p. 76).

Apassenaphalaka

A bolster-slab for the purpose of leaning against the wall. The Buddha allowed the monks to have a slab when he noticed the walls being soiled. While allowing its use the Buddha also instructed that a cloth should be wrapped, up and down round the edges of the slab in order to protect the floor and the wall from scratches. (Cv. p. 272).

Apesi

A gate in an Ārama, made of wood and thorns in order to protect from the cattle, is called Apesi. (Cv. p. 248; Cf. Dīghadārumhi khāṇuke pavesetvā kaṇṭakasā-khāhi vinandhitvā kataṃ dvārathakanakaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303).

Appaṭikamma-Āpatti

An offence which cannot be redressed; i.e. the Pārājikā. It is the same as Anavasesāpatti. (Pari. p. 211; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1418).

Appamattakavissajjaka(—Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu, who is selected by the Saṅgha to distribute the triflings and such other things like needle, knife, sandles etc. received by the Saṅgha, is known as Appamattakavissajjaka. An 'able' monk is selected by holding the Ñattidutiyakamma for the purpose. (Cv. p. 274).

Abaddha-Sīmā

A Sīmā or 'limit' for ecclesiastical purposes, for which no demarcation or 'sign' (Nimitta) is possible and no Ñattidutiyakamma is required, is known as Abaddha-sīmā. This Sīmā comes into existence by itself whenever the Saṅgha assembles for holding Uposatha or any other Saṅgha Kamma. The following three Sīmās; viz. Gāma-sīmā, Sattabbhantara-sīmā and Udakukkhepa-sīmā are regarded as Abaddhasīmā. (Mv. p. 113; SP. Vol III, pp 1108-1113; Kv. (M), pp. 90-91). See also SĪMĀ.

Abbhāna

It is a formal 'calling back' of a monk who has scrupulously observed the Mānatta for six nights, either in continuation with the Parivāsa or without Parivāsa, which he had to observe for committing the Saṅghādisesa offence. If the Abbhāna is related to that Mānatta which is in continuation with the Parivāsa, it is known as Paṭicchanna-Abbhāna because in this case the Parivāsa presupposes the concealing of the Saṅghādisesa for some time. The other is the Apāṭicchanna-Abbhāna related to the Mānatta only (without a Parivāsa), which had been pronounced by the Saṅgha for committing a Saṅghādisesa not concealed for any time. (Cv. pp. 87 & 91).

The monk, who has completed the Mānatta, approaches the Saṅgha with the request to 'call him back' (Abbhāna). The Saṅgha then holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for the purpose. (Ibid. pp. 87-89; 91-92). In the Abbhānakamma the minimum number of monks in the Saṅgha should be not less than twenty 'clean' monks. If it is performed with less than twenty 'clean' monks, the Saṅgha commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. Those monks who have been condemned of Parivāsa or Mānatta or not yet have been 'called back' are still 'unclean' monks and hence they cannot be included in this number; but they may be present in the Assembly if the number is already twenty. (Ibid. pp. 71, 74, 77, 78).

Abbhānāraha (Bhikkhu)

A monk, who has completed the observance of Mānatta along with the Parivāsa or without Parivāsa (as the case may be) and thereby has made himself eligible for being 'called back' by the Saṅgha, is called the Abbhānāraha-Bhikkhu. As long as the Saṅgha does not formally approve of his penances and does not formally 'call him back', the monk is still 'unclean' and so he is required to observe all the restrictions of Mānatta, except that he need not inform about his 'uncleanliness' everyday to the members of the Saṅgha. (Cv. pp. 81-84, 87, 91). During this period if the monk happens to commit a Saṅghādisesa offence, he has to start the Parivāsa afresh (Abbhānārahamūlāyapaṭikassanā). (Ibid. pp. 97-98).

Amathitakappa

To regard the drinking of that (anātiritta) milk, which has passed the stage of milk but has not yet turned into curd, as 'proper' for a Pavārita (satisfied or eaten up) monk. The Vajji monks pleaded that milk as 'proper' for the monks. But in the Second Buddhist Council held at Vesālī it was declared as improper for the monks, as it involved an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 35; Cv. p. 429).

Amūlḥavinaya

A kind of procedure for the settlement of a 'case' which has arisen on account of the insanity of a monk who might have committed some offences while insane. It is in fact a sort of formal recognition by the Saṅgha of the insanity of a monk and hence to ignore any offence if committed by that monk. No ecclesiastical action is, therefore, necessary against him.

For this purpose the Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatutthakamma and the mad monk is asked to be present before the Saṅgha. The Saṅgha then declares him mad. The formal declaration by the Saṅgha is regarded as legal and just (Dhammikaṃ) only if the monk was actually mad and he did not remember any of the offences committed by him and also that he behaved truly like a mad person. The procedure involves the following three conditions; viz. (i) The Bhikkhu was actually insane; (ii) Some Bhikkhus actually accuse him of some previous offences committed by him; (iii) The Bhikkhu himself requests the Saṅgha for such a 'settlement'. (Cv. pp. 159-162).

When this matter is once discussed and a verdict to this effect is passed, no monk is entitled to reopen the matter again. If one attempts to do so, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 63; Ukkoṭanake pācittiyaṃ.—Ibid. p. 187; Pāc. p. 171).

This settlement of the 'case' comes under the Anuvāḍadhikaraṇa. (Ibid.).

Ambapāna

A sweet-drink of mango-juice. It is one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks (Panāni) allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It is regarded as Yamakālika and so it may be taken even in the afternoon or even in the night. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1166-1167).

Arahantaghāta

A murderer of an Arahanta. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. In case such a person has already got his ordination, it should be cancelled. (Mv. pp. 91-92).

Alajjī

A shameless or unconscientious person who commits the offence deliberately and endeavours to conceal it. Such a person may be led away by anger (Dosa), stupidity (Moha), favour (Chanda) or by fear (Bhaya). (Cf. Saṅcicca āpattiṃ āpajjati, āpattiṃ parigūhati. Agatigamanam ca gacchati, ediso vuccati alajjī puggalo.—Pari. p. 281).

Aḷacchinna

A person whose toes or thumbs are cut. (Yassa catūsu aṅguṭṭhakesu.....eko vā bahū vā aṅguṭṭhakā chinnā honti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1081). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this should not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Avakkārapāti

A pot used for keeping extra food, a dust-bin. (Atireka piṇḍapātataṭṭhapanakam ekam bhājanam.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M) Vol. II, p. 180). (Mv. p. 165).

Avandiya

A person not worthy of reverence. There are ten kinds of such persons to whom a monk need not pay his homage or reverence. These are : (1) One who is younger in age (by Upasampadā); (2) An elderly 'unrighteous' (adhammiko) monk belonging to a different residence; (3) An unordained person (Anupasampanna); (4) A lady (even an elderly nun); (5) A eunuch; (6) A Pārivāsika Bhikkhu; (7) A Mūlāyapaṭikassanāraha Bhikkhu; (8) A Mānattāraha Bhikkhu; (9) A Mānattacārika Bhikkhu; (10) An Abbhānāraha Bhikkhu. An elderly monk, an elderly 'righteous' monk even of a different residence and the Buddha are always to be revered (Vandiya). (Cv. p. 257).

A monk becomes an Avandiya if he is indiscreet in his behaviour with the nuns. For such a monk the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha holds a Daṇḍa-kamma and declares him Avandiya. (Ibid. p. 382; Cf. Pari. pp. 342, 360-61).

Avalekhanakaṭṭha

A scrapping brush used in the latrine. This was recommended by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 231).

Avalekhanapiṭhara

A stand or pot for keeping the Avalekhanakaṭṭha (the latrine scrapper). The Buddha recommended it to be kept in the latrine. (Cv. p. 231; Cf. Avalekhanakaṭṭhānam ṭhapanabhājanaviseso.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M) Vol. II, p. 236).

Avahāra

Taking away something which is not given. Same as ADINNĀDĀNA. (Para. p. 58; also Cf. Pari. p. 231; SP. Vol. I, pp. 298 ff.).

Avippavāsasīmā

The 'limit' or 'boundary' of the 'residences' of the Bhikkhus. The Bhikkhus are allowed to keep away with one of their three Cīvaras in any of the Vihāras within this Sīmā. By doing this no monk commits the offence of Nissaggiya-pācittiya. For this purpose, the Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. It is more or less the Samānasamvāsasīmā, which has been agreed upon by the Saṅgha for the purpose of Uposatha and other ecclesiastical matters. Later, the same Sīmā is declared as the 'boundary' in which the monks can live by putting away one of their three robes for which no offence is committed. In fact, both the 'declarations' are made one after another. (Mv. pp. 111-112).

Avissajjiya

Five groups of articles of the Vihāra, belonging to the Saṅgha as a whole can never be 'given away' either by the Saṅgha or by a group of monks or by an individual monk are known as Avissajjiya. If anyone 'gives away', he is liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. The five groups of articles are : (i) Ārāma and its land; (ii) Vihāra and its land; (iii) Couch (Mañca), chair (Piṭṭha), bolster (Bhisi), pillow (Bimbohana); (iv) Iron or copper pots such as pitcher (Lohakumbhī), iron pots (Lohabhāṇaka), iron jar (Lohavāraka), iron or copper cooking utensils (Lohakaṭṭha), hatchet (Vāsī), large axe (Parasu), axe (Kuṭṭhārī), hoe (Kuddāla) and chisel (Nikhādāna); (v) creeper, bamboo, Muñja, Babbaja grass, earth, wood material for furniture or for building purposes, earth material. (Cv. p. 266). These articles are also regarded as 'Avebhaṅgiya', i.e., not to be 'divided'. (Ibid. pp. 267-268).

Avebhaṅgiya

Five groups of articles of the Vihāra, belonging to the Saṅgha as a whole can never be 'divided' either by the Saṅgha or by a group of monks or by an individual monk. If one does so, he is liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. The articles are the same as Avissajjiya. (Cv. pp. 267-68). See : AVISSAJJIYA.

Asamādānacāro

When a Bhikkhu gets the Kāṭhina, he is then endowed with the privilege (Ānisaṃsa) of remaining without one of the three Cīvaras. It is known as Asamādānacāro. (Mv. p. 266; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1172). Ordinarily if one does so, he is liable to commit the offence of Nissaggiya-Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 2, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 14; Pm. (B), pp. 6 & 35). It is one of the five privileges which a monk is entitled to by virtue of receiving the Kāṭhina. The other privileges are : He can go out without telling others even if there is a general invitation (Anāmantacāro), can take a 'group meal' (Gaṇabhojana), can keep any number of robes without Adhiṭṭhāna or Vikappanā (Yāvadatthacīvaram) and is entitled to get a share from the Cīvara donated to the Saṅgha (Yo ca tattha cīvaruppādo so nesam bhavissati). (Mv. p. 266).

Asamānāsānika

On account of disparity of age (according to Upasampadā) of more than three years, a monk cannot sit on the same bed or chair with another monk who is older than him. This is known as Asamānāsānika. Generally it is applicable to small seats where only one person can sit or sleep. But in the case of large seats there is no such restriction and monks can sit there together, except with a eunuch, a woman or with a hermaphrodite. (Cv. p. 264).

Asādhāraṇapaññatti

Enactment of ecclesiastical rules for the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs separately. (Cf. Suddha bhikkhūnameva hi suddhabhikkhūnīm vā paññattam sikkhāpadam asādhāraṇapaññatti nāma.—SP, Vol. III, p. 1396; Cf. Pari. p. 4). Enactment of common rules is called Sādhāraṇapaññatti.

Assattharaṇa

A cloth spread on the horse-back. It was regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and so it was not allowed for the use of the Buddhist Order. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting but not for sleeping even if it belonged to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Ā

Āgantukavatta

The duties of a new-comer (monk) in the Vihāra. Certain rules have been laid down by the Buddha for the monks visiting another Vihāra. For instance, he should put off his sandals, close umbrella before entering into the premises of the Vihāra. He should look out for the resident monks and approach them and sit there at a proper place. He should then find out the place for water and wash his feet and drink it if he so desires. He should then respectfully pay his salutations to the elderly monks. After getting his seat in the Vihāra, he should arrange everything there neat and tidy. He should observe all such courtesies as to be found essential there. (For details see: Cv. pp. 311-314).

Ācamanakumbhī

A water pitcher kept in the Vaccakuṭṭi (privy) for rinsing purposes. (Cv. p. 232). It must be filled with water and covered. (Ibid. pp. 232, 327).

Ācamanapādukā

A foot-stand or foot-stool fixed in the privy for the purpose of rinsing. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 210; Cv. p. 232).

Ācamanasarāvaka

A cup used for taking out the water from the Ācamanakumbhī for rinsing in the Vaccakuṭṭi (privy). (Cv. p. 232). No water should be left in the Ācamanasarāvaka after rinsing. (Na ācamanasarāvake udakam sesetabbam.—Ibid. p. 327).

Ācarinī

The feminine gender of Ācariya. (Pāc. p. 303).

Ācariya

A 'teacher' or 'guide' of a monk. An Ācariya is 'taken up' when the Upajjhāya of an ordained monk is 'lost' either by going away, or by disrobing, or by death, or by going over to another sect, or by commanding the disciple an 'expulsion'. (Mv. pp. 57-58). It was enjoined by the Buddha that a monk must live under the 'guardianship' of an Upajjhāya; but when the Upajjhāya is 'lost', the monk should live under an Ācariya at least for a period of five years after his Upasampadā. (Ibid. pp. 83, 85). The period may be extended even for the whole life, if the trainee monk does not accomplish himself so well as to live without 'guidance'. (Ibid. p. 83). In fact the Ācariya is the religious guardian next to Upajjhāya when the latter is 'lost'. The act of 'taking up' the 'guidance' or 'tutelage' under an Ācariya is known as Nissaya. (Ibid. p. 58). A Bhikkhu, who has completed ten years since his Upasampadā and is 'able' and 'competent' (Byatto paṭibalo), is entitled to become the Ācariya of a monk and may allow him to live as his Antevāsika. (Anujānāmi, bhikkhave, byattena bhikkhunā paṭibalena dasavassena vā atirekadasavassena vā nissayaṃ dātum ti.—Ibid. p. 67).

The procedure for 'taking up' the Nissaya or 'guidance' under an Ācariya is simple. The desirous monk approaches an elderly monk and salutes him squatting on the ground and utters three times thus : "Please become my Ācariya. I (wish) to live under your guidance". (Ekamsaṃ uttarāsaṅgaṃ karitvā pāde vanditvā ukkuṭikaṃ nisīditvā añjaliṃ paggaheṭvā evamassa vacanīyo—'Ācariyo me, bhante, hohiĀyasmato nissāya vacchāmi'.—Ibid. p. 58). The proposal is taken to be granted if he assents to it by speech or by gesture or by both.

It is enjoined by the Buddha that the Ācariya should treat his Antevāsika as his son; and the Antevāsika should treat him as his father. (Ācariyo, bhikkhave, antevāsikamhi puttacittam upatṭhapessati, antevāsiko ācariyamhi pitucittam upatṭhapessati.—Ibid. p. 58). It is the duty of the Ācariya to preach him the Dhamma and train him in the Vinaya and arrange for his requisites such as bowl, robe etc., if he needs them. If the Antevāsika falls ill, it is the duty of the Ācariya to do every thing possible and serve him till he is recovered. For instance, if the Antevāsika is ill, the Ācariya should offer him tooth-stick, water, wash his robes, offer him medicine, food, arrange his bed etc. The Ācariya must take special care if the Antevāsika is found to have developed antipathy towards the Dhamma and Saṅgha and is in a mood to disrobe himself. He should preach the Dhamma to him; and if necessary, he should send for others to preach him in order to remove the antipathy from him. If some false view has crept into the mind of the Antevāsika, the Ācariya must make every effort to dispel it from his mind. In case the Antevāsika happens to commit a Saṅghādisesa offence or any such grievous offence, it is the duty of the Ācariya to induce him for 'expiation'. Necessary instructions should also be imparted to the Antevāsika in respect of washing, stitching and dyeing of the robes, etc. (Mv. pp. 62-65; Cv. pp. 341-345). The duties of the Ācariya and the Upajjhāya are the same in relation to their pupils. (Cf. Mv. pp. 48-51).

In case the Antevāsika does not behave properly and disobeys him, the Ācariya should 'expel' him (Paṇāmanā); otherwise an offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. But if the Antevāsika admits his mistakes and begs pardon, he should be excused and taken back as his Antevāsika (Khamāpanā). If the Ācariya does not take him back after he has begged pardon, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. pp. 65-67). Similarly the Ācariya must be very considerate in 'expelling' the Antevāsika. A dutiful and obedient pupil should never be 'expelled'; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. pp. 65-67).

A Bhikkhu ceases to remain an Ācariya under the following circumstances: If he goes away, or disrobes, or dies, or changes his religion, or when the Antevāsika is 'expelled', or when the Antevāsika is 'united' with his Upajjhāya again. (Chayimā bhikkhave nissayapaṭipassaddhiyo ācariyahmā—ācariyo pakkanto vā hoti, vibbhanto vā, kālaṅkato vā, pakkhasaṅkanto vā, aṇatti yeva pañcamī, upajjhāyena vā samodhānagato hoti.—Ibid. p. 67).

In the SP. (Vol. III, p. 1034), however, the term Ācariya is explained thus : Ācārasamācārasikkhāpanakam ācariyam; i.e. one who teaches or trains up is the Ācariya. And so, one who ordains is the Pabbācariyo, one who confers the Upasampadā is Upasampadācariyo, one who offers Nissaya is the Nissayācariyo (as the present one), one who teaches the texts is the Uddesācariyo and one who 'admonishes' the Bhikkhunis is the Ovādācariyo. In the above interpretation the term Ācariya is used in a general sense. And so, an Upajjhāya may also be regarded as an Ācariya. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1494).

Ācariya—Vatta

The duties of an Antevāsika towards his Ācariya (teacher). It is instructed by the Buddha that the Antevāsika should treat his Ācariya as his father and should show the same respect towards him. He should do all the necessary services to him. (For details see: Mv. pp. 58-62; Cv. pp. 336-340. Also see: ANTE-VĀSIKA & ĀCARIYA).

Ācāravipatti

The 'offences' which create 'danger' to the 'good conduct' of a monk or nun. These offences are: Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa, Dubbhāsita and abusing even in joke. (Pari. p. 259).

Āciṇṇakappa

To regard all the customary practices of one's Upajjhāya or Ācariya as unmis-takenly right. It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as legal for the monks. This matter was discussed in the Second Buddhist Council held at Vesāli and it was decided that all the customary practices observed by one's Upajjhāya or Ācariya could not necessarily be right nor all the practices could be wrong. Some of the practices might be proper and some might not be so. And hence, all the customary practices of one's Upajjhāya or Ācariya should not be followed blindly. (Cv. p. 429).

Ājīvavipatti

The offence which creates 'danger' to the 'right living' of a monk or nun. Telling about his supernatural attainment fictitiously, or visiting the laymen or laywomen for the sake of some gain, or reporting to some one falsely that in that particular Vihāra the monks are Arahantas, or taking the meal by self-asking are regarded as Ājīvavipatti. All these create danger to the 'right living' of a monk; because all these actions are done with a view to gaining unrighteously a comfortable living. (Pari. p. 259).

Ānicolaka

A small piece of cloth or rag used as a pad for blocking haemorrhage during menses. This was allowed by the Buddha for the nuns. (Cv. p. 391).

Āpatti

An ecclesiastical offence. It is the injunction of the Buddha that all the members of the Saṅgha must observe the set of 'precepts' (Sikkhāpada) laid down in the Pātimokkha, in the Sutta-vibhaṅga and in the Khandhaka. And if any member of the Saṅgha happens to act against these 'precepts' deliberately (Sacittakena or Saññāvimokkhena), he is liable to commit an Āpatti. (Kv. (M), p. 112).

According to the Pātimokkha rules, the Āpattis are classified into five groups: Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa, Nissaggiya-pācittiya, Pācittiya and Pātidesaṇīya. Besides these five groups of Āpattis, mention is made of three others, viz. Thullaccaya, Dukkaṭa and Dubbhūṣita. The Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa are known as Garukāpatti (severe or major offences) while others are regarded as Lahukāpatti (light or minor offences). These are also known as Adesaṇāgāmini āpatti or Duṭṭhullāpatti and Desaṇāgāmini āpatti or Aduṭṭhullāpatti respectively. (Pāc. p. 173; Cv. pp. 170-171, 178).

The Pārājika is also known as Anavasesāpatti while others are grouped as Sāvasesāpatti. (Sāvasesāti ṭhapetvā pārājikaṃ sesā. Anavasesāti pārājikāpatti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419).

Āpattādhikaraṇa

The 'legal question' arising out of the ecclesiastical offence (Āpatti). This may be related to all kinds of offences whether grouped under 'five' (i. e. Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya and Dukkaṭa) or under 'seven' kinds of offences (i.e. Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa, Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa and Dubbhāsita). (Cv. p. 171).

This kind of 'legal question' may be settled by three ways (Samatha), viz. Verdict in presence (Sammukhavinaya), Verdict by self-acknowledgement (Paṭiññātakaraṇa), Verdict by 'covering up grass' (Tiṇavatthāraka). (Ibid. p. 188).

Āpatti—Āvikaraṇa

If a Bhikkhu remembers an offence (which he has not yet expiated) just before he is to join a Saṅgha-kamma, he should then make his offence known to the other Bhikkhu or Bhikkhus around him. This is known as Āpatti-āvikaraṇa. Soon after the Saṅgha-kamma is over, he must make amends for his offence whenever he gets a chance to do so. (Mv. p. 127).

Āpattipaṭikamma

Making amends for the 'light offences' by a Bhikkhu before another Bhikkhu in order to make himself eligible for attending the Upasatha or any other Saṅgha-Kamma. This is known as Āpattipaṭikamma. For this purpose the Bhikkhu who has committed the offence approaches another Bhikkhu and after saluting him confesses his offence and promises not to commit the same in future. (Mv. pp. 126-127). In case many monks have committed the identical offences, they are not allowed to make amends for their offences among themselves (Sabhāgāpatti). (Ibid. p. 127; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1122-1123).

Āmalakavaṭṭikāpīṭha

A multi-legged chair. (Āmalakākārena yojetvā bahupādapiṭhaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1300). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

Āmisakhāra

Raw lye. It was prepared from the burnt rice. (Sukkhodanaṃ jhāpetvā tāya chārikāya paggharitaṃ khārodakaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156; Cf. Vimativinodanīṭika (M), Vol. II, p. 186). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks when suffering from stomach disorder. (Mv. p. 225).

Āyoga

'A binding cloth'. When sitting in the Palatthi posture, a piece of cloth is clamped or even hands are clamped together in order to relax. This is Āyoga.

The monks are not allowed to sit in this posture when they are in the village. But a sick monk can sit in this posture anywhere, even in a village. The Buddha allowed the monks to prepare this 'binding cloth' (Āyoga) of any material. But the Saṅghāṭī should not be used for this purpose. If it is used, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Cv. p. 225).

Ārañṇaka-senāsana

The forest-residence of the monks. This may be situated in the outskirts of a town or a village at a distance of not less than five hundred Dhanus. (One Dhanu is equal to about 6ft.). (Kv. (M), p. 187; Pāc. p. 242; Pārā. p. 371).

Ārañṇikavatta

Duties of a forest-dweller monk. The Buddha has laid down certain rules which should be observed by the monk living in the forest. For instance, when going round for alms, he should dress himself properly and arrange his articles and close the Vihāra. When entering into a village, he should remove his sandals and keep them into the bag; he should be careful about his movements there. When receiving alms, he should be courteous and should not look at the face of the person offering the meal. While living in the forest the monk should set out the water for drinking and washing; set out the fire and the kindling wood; set out the walking stick; should learn the positions of lunar mansions either wholly or partly; should be skilled in the quarter. (For details see: Cv. pp. 321-323).

The nuns are not allowed to live in the forest. The above rules, therefore, are related to the monks only. (Ibid. p. 399).

Ārāma

(I) A pleasure-garden or a private pleasure-park or a villa. (Ārāmo nāma yattha katthaci manussānaṃ kīlitaṃ ramitaṃ kataṃ hoti.—Pāc. p. 407; Āramaṃ ti kīlanu-pavanaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 975; Kv. (M), p. 330). For instance, the Vajjis had as many as 7707 Ārāmas in Vesālī for their pleasure-trips. (Mv. p. 286). Since the Ārāmas were the pleasure-parks for merry-makings, the Bhikkhunis were not allowed to go there, even for sight-seeing. If they went there, they committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 41; Pāc. p. 407; Pm. (B), p. 41).

(II) When such private pleasure-parks, Ārāmas or Uyyānas were donated to the Buddha or His Saṅgha, they were naturally transformed into the residences of the monks and regarded as the Ārāmas of the Buddhist Order. For instance, King Bimbisāra donated his Veḷuvanuyyāna to the Buddha when the latter visited Rājagaha for the first time after his Enlightenment. After its acceptance by the Buddha the Veḷuvanuyyāna became known as Veḷuvanārāma. On this occasion the Buddha allowed the monks to accept the Ārāma if offered to them. (Mv. p. 38).

The Ārāmas are said to have been of two kinds; viz. the Pupphārāma (An Ārāma of flowering trees) and the Phalārāma (An Ārāma of fruit trees). (Parā. p. 60; SP. Vol. III, 1321).

In fact the Ārāmas were those gardens which were donated for the Buddha or His Order for their use. Bhikkhus used to hold there religious meetings or discuss some ecclesiastical matters. These were the places where the Bhikkhus used to live under the shady trees. It is also found in the texts that these Ārāmas were changed into Vihāras or residential buildings for the Buddhist Order. Sometimes in the Ārāmas, the buildings like a Vihāra, Pariveṇa, Koṭṭhaka, Upaṭṭhānasālā, Aggisālā, Kappiyakuṭi, Vaccakuṭi, Caṅkamana, Caṅkamanasālā, Udapāna, Udapānasālā, Jantāghara, Jantāgharasālā, Pokkharāṇi, Maṇḍapa were also constructed. (Cv. p. 253). At Sāvattthī, Anāthapiṇḍika had provided all such buildings in Jetavanārāma. (Ibid.). Generally speaking the entire compound of a Vihāra is known as Ārāma. It includes all kinds of structures and land therein. The Ārāma may have a fencing of bamboo (Veluvāṭa) or thorns (Kaṇṭakavāṭa) or may have a ditch (Parikhā) around it. The fencing may have a gateway (Koṭṭhaka) and also an intermediate passage (Toraṇa). (Cv. p. 248).

A Sāṅghika Ārāma (or Sāṅghārāma) cannot be 'given up', nor can it be 'divided'. If so done, a grievous offence like Thullaccaya is committed. The Ārāma is one of those few things which are not to be 'given up' (Avissajjiyāni) or to be 'divided' (Avebhaṅgiyāni). (Ibid. pp. 266-267). The land attached to the Ārāma also should not be 'given up' nor should be 'divided'. (Ibid.).

A Bhikkhunī is not allowed to enter into the Ārāma of the Bhikkhus without the permission of the monks living there. If she enters, she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 51; Pāc. p. 420).

Ārāmavatthu

The land earmarked for the purpose of an Ārāma; or the land of an old Ārāma which is now in a dilapidated condition, is called Ārāmavatthu. (Ārāmavatthu nāma tesam eva ārāmatthāya paricchinditvā ṭhapitokāso; tesu vā ārāmesu vinatṭhesu tesam porāṇakabhūmibhāgo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1321).

The Sāṅghika-ārāmavatthu is one of the few things of the Saṅgha which cannot be 'given up' nor can it be 'divided' or 'distributed'. It is an Avissajjiyavatthu and Avebhaṅgiyavatthu. If it is 'given up' or 'divided', an offence of 'grievous type' like Thullaccaya is committed. (Cv. p. 266-267).

Ārāmika

An attendant of the Ārāma, who looks after the Ārāma and also serves the Bhikkhus living there. Such an attendant was allowed by the Buddha for an Ārāma. (Mv. p. 266; Parā. p. 354). King Bimbisāra gave away as many as 500 Ārāṃikas to Venerable Pilindavaccha. Latter on, the village where these Ārāṃikas lived became known as Ārāṃikagāma and also as Pilindavacchagāma. (Ibid.). (Modern: Aramā and Pilliccha villages in Biharshariff Sub-division of Nalanda District, Bihar State).

Usually the Ārāṃika has to look after the Ārāma and the monks; but sometimes he is also allowed to accept the money or anything given for the purpose of the monks. He can keep the money given for the purpose of the *Civara*s of the monks. (Pm. (B), p. 8).

Ārāṃikini

A female attendant of the Ārāma. (Mv. p. 266-67). See: ĀRĀMIKA.

Ārāṃika-Pesaka (Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu who is in-charge of the Ārāṃikas (attendants of the Ārāma). He is to allot duties to these attendants and to take work from them. It is enjoined by the Buddha that only that monk should be made in-charge of these attendants who is not led away by favour, or by anger, or by indolence, or who does not yield to fear and one who knows how to give orders. (Yo na chandagatiṃ gaccheyya, na dosagatiṃ gaccheyya, na mohagatiṃ gaccheyya, na bhayagatiṃ gaccheyya, pesitapesitaṃ jāneyya.—Cv. pp. 274-75; Pari. p. 359).

Ālambanabāha

The railing of the staircase in a Vihāra. This was allowed by the Buddha in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 245).

Ālinda

A varandah, probably in the inner part of the Vihāra. (The outer one is called Osāraka). The Buddha allowed an Ālinda in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 246).

Ālokasandhi

The window or sky-light. (Vātapānakavūṭakā vuccanti.—SP. Vol. II, p. 801; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 207; Pac. p. 72; Cv. p. 268).

Āvaraṇa

A kind of Daṇḍakamma, (punishment) which is pronounced against a nun or a Sāmaṇera for unmannerly behaviour towards the monks. In that case the nun is not allowed to enter into the Vihāra and the Sāmaṇera is not allowed to go into his own room or the place where he lives.

The entire Saṅghārāma should not be barred for the Sāmaṇera; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. Similarly he should not be debarred from the 'community meal' (Saṅghabhatta); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Cv. pp. 382-83; Mv. pp. 87-88; Cf. Āvaraṇaṃ ti vihārapavesane nivāraṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, 1384).

Āvasatha (I)

A dwelling place for the nuns. This is usually with a door. (Kavāṭabaddho Vihāro.—Pāc. p. 416). It is laid down by the Buddha that a Bhikkhunī should not leave the Āvasatha without entrusting it to some one when she has to go out on a journey (Cārikā). If she does so, she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 48; Pāc. p. 416; Pm. (B), p. 42).

Āvasatha (II) Or Āvasathāgāra

A resting-place built by a meritorious person for the free use of the tourists, sick persons, ladies carrying babies and the mendicants. It was a kind of large building with many rooms and adequate furniture. Arrangements were provided for free food as well. This food is known as Āvasatha-piṇḍa. Special rules were framed for the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs in respect of this food. (See: Pāc. pp. 101-102; Pm. (B), pp. 13 & 47). (Samantā parikkhittaṃ addhikagilānagabbhinīpabbajjitānaṃ yathānurūpaṃ paññattamañcapīṭhaṃ anekagabbhapamukhaparicchedaṃ āvasathaṃ katvā tattha puññakāmatāya piṇḍo paññatto hoti.—SP. Vol. II, p. 829).

It is something like a modern Indian Dharmaśāla.

Āvasathacīvara

A piece of cloth used as a pad by the nuns during the period of menses. (Cv. p. 391). It is laid down that this cloth should be used only during the menses and after that it should be washed and given to others for use. If not so done, the Bhikkhunī is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 47; Pāc. p. 414; Pm. (B), p. 42; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 333).

Āvasatha-Piṇḍa

The food (prepared out of five kinds of cereals, including medicinal food) kept ready at a 'public place', the Āvasatha, by a meritorious person is called Āvasatha-piṇḍa. This food was served free to any person up to any quantity (particularly to the mendicants, the sick, the ladies carrying babies and old persons). A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī who is not sick may eat this food for once only. If this food is taken more than once, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No 31; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 117; Pāc. pp. 101-102; Pm. (B), pp. 13 & 47; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 215; SP. Vol. II, p. 829).

Āvāpaka

A big bag to keep anything collected. (Borā (?) in Hindi). (Mv. p. 262; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1168).

Āvāsa

A place fit for residing the members of the Buddhist Order; viz. a Vihāra, an Aḍḍhayoga, a Pāsāda, a Hammiya and a Guhā. (Mv. pp. 55, 100; Cv. pp. 68-69, 239). It is the same as Senāsana. (Āvāso nāma vasanattāya katasenāsanaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1244).

Āvāsakappo

To regard it as 'proper' to holding the Uposatha or any other ecclesiastical act separately in different Vihāras by the monks living within one sīmā (boundary). It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks of Vesālī pleaded as 'proper'. But in the Second Buddhist Council it was regarded as 'improper'; because it involved the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cf. Mv. p. 110; Cv. p. 429).

Āvāsikavatta

Duties of the 'resident monk' towards the new-comer monk (Āgantuka bhikkhu). The Buddha noticed that the new-comer monks had to experience inconveniences if they were not properly looked after by the 'resident monks'. He, therefore, laid down certain rules which should be observed by all the 'resident monks'. For instance, the 'resident monk' should pay respect and do necessary services to him if the new-comer monk is older one. He should be informed of his seat, place for begging, bathroom, latrine, urinals etc. In case the new-comer monk is young, he should be directed to his room, seat, begging place, latrine, urinal, water etc. (For details see: Cv. pp. 314-315).

Āviñchanachidā

A hole in the door to pull. The Buddha allowed its use in the door if the door did not close properly. (Cv. p. 241).

Āviñchanarajju

A string to pull the door. (Cf. Sace pi dipinaṅguṭṭhena kata hoti.—SP. Vol. III p. 1299). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it if the door did not close properly. (Cv. p. 241).

Āvesanavitthaka

A sort of tool-box to keep the stitching instruments like needles, knife, scissors, thimbles etc. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Yam kiñci pāṭicaṅkoṭakādi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288; Cv. p. 206).

Āsandi

A high couch. It was regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and hence it was not allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. If a monk used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 258). And if a Bhikkhunī used it, she would commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 42; Pāc p. 409).

Āsandi is described that kind of bedstead which is higher than the prescribed height. (Pamāṇātikkantāsanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149; Cf. Pāc. p. 409). The prescribed height of a bedstead for the Buddhist Order is eight Sugataṅgulas. And if one makes a bedstead higher than this height, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 87; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 163; Pāc pp. 223-224 & 409; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52).

Āsāvacchedikā

It is one of the eight 'occasions' when the 'privileges' (Ānisaṃsa) of Kāṭhina are withdrawn or forfeited. It may so happen that a monk who has got the Kāṭhina-civara goes away from his Vihāra-sīmā to some other place in search of some more cloth and there, he hopes to get it. He then makes up his mind to prepare the robe there and not to return to his own Vihāra. But somehow or other his hopes are not fulfilled and he is frustrated. He thenceforth loses his 'privileges'. This is known as Āsāvacchedikā. (Mv. pp. 267-268; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1378-1380). Also see KĀTHINA—UDDHĀRA.

Āsittakūpadhāna

A kind of ware or basket made of silver or copper in order to keep the food warm. (Tambalohena vā rajatena vā katāya pelāya etaṃ adhivacanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). It is sometimes octagonal or sometimes having sixteen sides. (Cf. Aṭṭhaṃsasolaṃsādi akārena katāya bhājanākārāya pelāya. Yalṭha uṇhapāyāsādiṃ pakkhipitvā upari bhojanapātiṃ ṭhapenti bhaddassa uṇhacbhāvāvigamanattham.—Vimati-vinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 234). The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 213).

Āhaccapāḍaka—Piṭha

A chair or bench which has its legs fixed in the frame (by drawing out a pin). In the Pācittiyapāli it is defined thus: Āṅge vijjhittvā ṭhito hoti; i. e. it stands by means of perforated parts in which the legs can be fixed. (Pāc. p. 71; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 206). Ordinarily the sides of the chair are put in its legs; but in this case the position is in reverse.

If such type of chair or bench is used on a Vehāsakuṭṭi, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 18; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 114; Pāc. pp. 70-71; Pm. (B), pp. 12 & 46).

Ahaccapādaka—Mañca

A bed or bedstead which has its legs fixed in the frame (by drawing out a pin). In the Pācittiya it is defined as: Aṅge vijjhivā thito hoti; i. e. it stands by means of perforated parts in which the legs can be fixed. (Pāc. p. 71; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 206). Ordinarily the sides of the bed are put in its legs; whereas in this case the position is in reverse.

If this type of bed is used on a Vehāsakuṭṭi, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 18; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 114; Pāc. pp. 70-71; Pm. (B), pp. 12 & 46).

IIkkāsa

Slime of a tree, to be used with lime (Seṭavaṇṇa i. e. Cūnaṃ) for plastering the Vihāra. (Rukkhaṇiyyāsaṃ silesaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, 1302). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Cv. p. 244). It was also used for preparing the black colour to paint the Vihāra. (Ibid. p. 245).

Ṇāyika

A debtor. Such a person should not be ordained; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 79).

Itthāṇkārā

Ladies' ornament of head, neck, hand, feet or waist etc. A Bhikkhunī is not allowed to put on any ornament. If she does so, she is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 87; Pāc. p. 473; Pm. (B), p. 45).

UUkkāsika

A twisted cloth used for rubbing the body when taking bath. (Vatthavaṭṭi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 195).

Ukkuṭikā-Gamana

Walking on toe by lifting up the heels; or on heels by lifting up the toes (unlike the Ukkuṭika-nisīdana i. e. squatting). (Ukkuṭikā vuccati paṇhiyo ukkhipitvā aggapādehi vā, aggapāde ukkhipitvā paṇhihi eva vā bhūmiṃ phussantassa gamanaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 924; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 280).

A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī is prohibited to enter into a village or a house by this manner. If he or she does so, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Sekhiyā Rule No. 25; Pac. p. 255; Pm. (B), pp. 22 & 53).

Ukkuṭika-Nisīdana

A special mode of squatting. The soles of the feet are firmly on the ground, the man sinks down, the heels slightly rising as he does so, until the thighs rest on the calves, and the hams are about six inches or more from the ground. Then with elbows on knees he balances himself. (Rhys Davids: Pali English Dictionary, Pali Text Society, London, pp. 125-26).

It is always mentioned in the texts that while saluting the elders one must sit down in this posture of squatting. Similarly on many other occasions this mode of sitting is recommended, for instance, when appearing before the Saṅgha for Ordination, or recitation of Kammavācā, or giving the Parisuddhi-dāna, or the Chanda-dāna, or when the Desanā-kamma (telling about the offences) is made, or when the Pabbājanīya-kamma or the other Kammas (ecclesiastical acts) are performed. (Mv. pp. 24, 121, 122, 125, 126, 127; Cv. p. 31 etc.). It is laid down by the Buddha that when the Pavāraṇā ceremony is held, all the Bhikkhus should sit down in this posture of squatting; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 168). It is also customary that when the Pātimokkha is recited, all the Bhikkhus should sit down in this manner. Even in the present days this can be seen in any Theravāda Buddhist country of S.E. Asia.

Ukkhittaka (-Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu condemned and given the punishment of Ukkhepanīyakamma on account of not admitting his offence, or not amending for his offence, or not giving up his wrong views is known as Ukkhittaka-Bhikkhu. (Mv. pp. 101-102; Cf. Cv. pp. 40-43). Also see UKKHEPANĪYAKAMMA.

Ukkhepanīyakamma

It is an ecclesiastical action taken against a monk who declines to see or acknowledge his offence (Āpattiyaṃ adassane Ukkhepanīyakamma); or who declines to amend for the offence he has committed (Āpattiyaṃ appaṭīkamme Ukkhepanīyakamma); or who upholds the wrong views about the Buddhist Doctrine in spite of being asked to give them up (Pāpikāya diṭṭhiyaṃ appaṭinissagge Ukkhepanīyakamma). (Cv. pp. 40-63). It is an action to suspend the monk; rather it is a sort of social boycott of the monk. The monk is then not allowed to dwell under the same roof or to take meal with other monks; or to associate with other monks in any way. (Asambhogam saṅghena.—Cv. p. 41). The 'Pāpikāya diṭṭhiyaṃ appaṭinissagge Ukkhepanīyakamma' is most serious. It is enjoined by the Buddha that if any monk associates (i. e. eats, sleeps, performs Saṅgha-kamma etc.) with the condemned monk, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 69: Bhikkhunī Rule No. 147; Pāc. pp. 184-185; Pm. (B), pp. 17 & 50).

The Ukkhepanīyakamma may also be taken against a monk who is quarrelsome, picks up quarrel in the Saṅgha, is foolish and prone to commit offences, mixes with the householders improperly, one who is not scrupulous about the 'higher morality' (Adhisīla i.e. Pātimokkha rules) and the 'minor rules of conduct' (Ajjhācāra i.e. Rules other than the Pātimokkha rules), one who does not follow the Doctrinal views, who speaks ill of the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. All such persons are liable to be dealt with the Ukkhepanīyakamma, if the Saṅgha so desires.

The procedure for taking up the Ukkhepanīyakamma is laid down thus: The guilty monk is brought before the Saṅgha (Sammukhā kataṃ hoti), and then he is interrogated about his offence (Paṭipucchā kataṃ hoti), he should then admit that he has committed something wrong (Paṭiññāya kataṃ hoti). He is then reminded of the rule or rules in the Pātimokkha or others that he is infringing (Āpattiya kataṃ hoti). He is thereafter charged with the offence alleged to have been committed by him (Codetvā sāretvā āpattiṃ āropetvā kataṃ hoti). A 'competent' and 'able' monk moves the Ñaiti (motion) before a full Saṅgha (Samaggena) to pronounce upon the alleged monk the Ukkhepanīyakamma. He requests thus for three times. (It is a sort of Ñatticatutthakamma). Any deviation from the above procedure makes the action invalid (Adhammikaṃ). After the pronouncement of this action the Saṅgha should despatch messages about it to all the Āvāsas (residences of the monks). (Āvāsaparamparaṃ saṃsatha.—Cv. pp. 41-42; Cf. Mv. pp. 101-102).

A condemned monk is required to observe as many as 43 restrictions. For instance, he cannot live with other monks under the same roof, he is debarred from all the Saṅgha-kammās, he is not allowed to live at a place other than allowed for him, he cannot preach to any person, etc. The 'revocation' or Paṭipassambhanā of this can be made only if he observes these 43 rules scrupulously. In order to 'revoke' this punishment, the Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatutthakamma and takes unanimous decision to this effect. (Cv. pp. 44-63).

If a monk disrobes after being punished; and if he comes back and admits his offence or amends for his offence or gives up the wrong view (as the case may be), he should be re-ordained. (Mv. pp. 101-102).

A Bhikkhu who is 'pure' and 'free' from offences should not be charged with the Ukkhepanīyakamma. If one charges him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 330).

Uggahitapaṭiggahitakaṃ (—Piṇḍam)

If a monk lifts up or takes up some food by himself (not formally offered by any person), he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253). And if he eats that food by taking himself, he commits an offence of Pacittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 40; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 122; Pāc. p. 126; Pm. (B), pp. 14 & 47). Such a kind of food is known as Uggahitapaṭiggahitakam piṇḍam.

Uccāsayanamahāsayana

High and luxurious beds, bedsteads and couches including soft cushions, mattresses, bed covers, spreadings, carpets etc. For instance, Āsandi (a high couch), Pallaṅka (a luxurious couch), Gonaka (a spreading with long hairs), Cittikā (a woolen spreading with designs), Paṭikā (a kind of white woolen spreading), Paṭalikā (a white woolen spreading with deep red floral designs), Tūlikā (a spreading stuffed with soft cotton), Vikatikā (a kind of woolen spreading with animal designs), Uddhalomī (a woolen spreading having one side long wool (Probably Galīcā in Hindi), Ekantalomī (a spreading with wool on both the sides), Kaṭissa (an embroidered silken spreading with golden weave), Koseyya (an embroidered silken bed-spreading), Kuṭṭaka (a large woolen carpet), Haṭṭhattharaṇa (a covering on the elephant's back), Assattharaṇa (a covering on the horse's back), Raṭṭhattharaṇa (a spreading on the chariot), Ajinappaveṇī (a spreading made of the skin of a kind of deer), Kadalīmigaṇapavarapaccattharaṇa (a spreading made of the skin of a kind of deer known as Kadalīmiga), Sauttaracchada (a spreading with a red canopy over head), Ubhatolohitakūpadhāna (a bed with red pillows at its both ends). All these are regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and so the monks or nuns are not allowed to use them. If one uses it, he or she commits the offence of Dukkata. (Mv. p. 211).

It includes the high couch (Pamāṇātikkantaṃ mañcam), the luxurious beds, bed-coverings. These are unsuitable for the use of the Buddhist Order. (Akappiyattharaṇam.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1149-1150). The prescribed height for a bedstead was eight Sugataṅgulas. If a monk used a bed or bedstead more than this prescribed height, he committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 87, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 163; Pāc. pp. 223-224, 409; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 42).

If a monk happens to visit a householder and there he is given these spreadings or beds, the monk may use them for sitting but not for sleeping. But the Āsandi, Pallaṅka and Tūlikā should not be used even for sitting. (Cv. p. 258).

Ucchurasa

Sugarcane juice. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Ujjhāpanaka

An utterance or remark by a monk against another monk with a view to putting him down in the eyes of others is known as Ujjhāpanaka. (Tassa ayasakāma hutvā bhikkhūhi avajānāpentī avaññāya olokāpentī lāmakato vā cintāpentī taṃ vacanaṃ ujjhāpanakaṃ.—Kv. (M), p. 200; Cf. Bhikkhuṃ lāmakato cintāpanatthaṃ aññesaṃ taṃ avaṇṇakathanāṃ ujjhāpanakaṃ nāma. Aññesaṃ pana avatvā aññamaññaṃ samullapanavasena bhikkhuno dosappakāsaṃ khiyyanaṃ nāmāti ayametesāṃ bhedo.—Vimativinodanītikā (M), Vol. II, p. 13). If a monk makes such a statement against another monk in order to defame him or to make him unhappy, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 13; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 109; Pāc. pp. 60-61; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 46).

Uttarattharaṇa

A spreading used as a bed-cover or chair-cover. (Uttarattharaṇaṃ nāma mañcapīṭhādīnaṃ upari attharītabbayuttakaṃ paccattharaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, 792; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 203). It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under the term Seyyā as allowed for the monks. (Pāc. p. 64; also see SEYYĀ).

Uttarapāsaka

A hole in the upper lintel of the door in order to fasten the door. The Buddha allowed it in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Uttarālumpa

A cylindrical vase (open at both ends) which is to be placed in the Rajana-kumbhī in order to avoid overflowing when boiling the dye. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 302; Cf. Uttarālumpaṃ ti vaṭṭādhārakaṃ. Rajanakumbhiyā majjhe ṭhapetvā taṃ ādhārakaṃ parikkhipitvā rajanaṃ pakkhipitum anujānāmī ti attho. Evaṃ hi kate rajanaṃ na uttorati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1195).

Uttarāsaṅga

One of the three main cīvaras or robes of the monks, as allowed by the Buddha (the others two are Antaravāsaka and Saṅghāṭī). (Mv. p. 305). It is an upper robe which must be made of single layer (ekacciyaṃ) if the cloth is new. But if the cloth material is old, it may be of two layers; and in case the cloth material is rags (Paṃsukūla), it may have any numbers of layers as suitable. (Khuddakasikkhā, Verses Nos. 52, 53; Cf. Mv. p. 306).

While showing respect to the elders or saluting the Saṅgha the Uttarāsaṅga should be placed on one shoulder (left) only. (Ekamsaṃ uttarāsaṅgaṃ karitvā—Mv. p. 24; Cv. pp. 186, 189 etc.). It is, therefore, sometimes called the Ekamsika-cīvara.

The size of the Uttarāsaṅga should be neither equal to nor bigger than the size of the Cīvara used by the Buddha (Sugatacīvarappamāṇaṃ). The traditional size of the Sugata-cīvara is nine Sugata-spans in length and six Sugata-spans in breadth. If the Uttarāsaṅga of a monk is equal to or more than this size and if used by a monk, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 92; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 166; Pāc. p. 231; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52).

In the Khuddakasikkhā (Gāthā No 45) it is mentioned that the Uttarāsaṅga and Saṅghāṭī should be of equal sizes, although the former is of single layer while the latter is made of two layers. The smallest size is also laid down. It is four full-stretched arms and one close-fisted arm in length and two full-stretched arms and one close-fisted arm in breadth. (Saṅghāṭīpacchīmantena dīghaso muṭṭhipañcakā. Uttamantena sugatacīvarūnāpi vaṭṭati. Muṭṭhitikaṃ ca tiriyaṃ tathā ekamsikassāpi.—Khuddakasikkhā, Gāthā No. 45; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 648).

A Bhikkhu is not allowed to remain without any of the three cīvaras; viz. the Antaravāsaka, the Uttarāsaṅga and the Saṅghāṭī (a Bhikkhunī without five cīvaras). If he does so, an offence of Nissaggiya-Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 14; Parā. p. 292; Pm. (B), pp. 6 & 35). A Bhikkhu is also not allowed to enter into a village with the two cīvaras only (i. e. with Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka). He must carry the Saṅghāṭī also; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 313). But the Uttarāsaṅga may be kept aside and the Bhikkhu may remain without it if he is sick, or when it is 'rainy season', or when he is to cross a river, or if the Vihāra is safe and well protected to keep it, or when the Bhikkhu is exempted on account of receiving the Kāṭhina. (Gilāno vā hoti, vassikasāṅketam vā hoti, nadīpāram gantum vā hoti, aggaḷaguttavihāro vā hoti, atthatakāṭhinaṃ vā hoti.—Ibid. p. 314).

The Uttarāsaṅga, being a light garment, was used probably during the summer and rainy seasons and the Saṅghāṭī, being thick, was used mostly during the winter.

The Uttarāsaṅga must be dyed in the Kasāya like the other robes of the monks. The Kasāya or the dye may be made of root, stem, bark, leaves, flowers or fruits. (Ibid. p. 302; Cf p. 321).

Uttarimanussadhamma

Attainment of superhuman 'power' or 'knowledge'; for instance, Jhāna (meditation), Vimokkha (emancipation), Samādhi (concentration), Samāpatti (trance, attainment of the stages of meditation), Ñāṇadassana (attainment of 'knowledge'), Maggabhāvanā (cultivation of 'Path'), Phalasacchikiriya (realisation of 'Four Higher Stages'), Kilesappahānaṃ (eradication of 'vices'), Vinivaraṇatā cittassa (free from 'hindrances'), Suññāgāre abhirati ('delight' in a lonely place when in meditation). If a Bhikkhu discloses it to a non-Bhikkhu, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 8; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 104; Pāc. pp. 40 ff.; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 46). But in case a Bhikkhu frivolently claims to have attained superhuman power or knowledge although he has not attained so, he commits an offence of Pārājika. (Rule No. 4). And then he should be turned out from the Saṅgha; because he ceases to remain a monk. He can never be admitted to the Saṅgha again. (Para. pp. 113 ff.; Pm. (B), pp. 2 & 28).

Udakakoṭṭhaka

A small hot-bath cabinet for the treatment of gout. (Udakakoṭṭhe cāṭim vā doṇiṃ vā uṇhodakassa pūretvā tattha pavisitvā sedakammakaraṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155). The Buddha allowed it for the monks when they suffered from gout. (Mv. p. 224).

Udakaniddhamana

A drain to let out the logging of the water from a Vihāra or Jantāghara or from any other building. (Cv. pp. 210, 212, 232, 247, etc.).

Udakasāṭikā

It is one of the five robes allowed for the Bhikkhunīs. It is used when taking bath. (Mv. p. 310). The Bhikkhunīs should never take bath naked; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 21; Pāc. pp. 380-81; Pm. (B), p. 40). The size of the Udakasāṭikā should be of four Sugata-spans in length and two Sugata-spans in breadth. If the size exceeds to this measurement, it should be cut to the proper size before use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed (Rule No. 22; Pāc. p. 381).

Udakukkhepa-Sīmā

In the river or in the sea or in the lake, the Sīmā (boundary) may be determined for the purpose of Upasatha or for any other Saṅgha-kamma upto the distance where the water falls when thrown by a person of average strength. This is known as Udakukkhepa-sīmā. (Nadiyā vā, bhikkhave, samudde vā jātassare vā yaṃ majjhimassa purisassa samantā udakukkhepā, ayaṃ tattha samānasamvāsā ekuposathā ti.—Mv. p. 113; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 90-91; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1109-1113). It is also regarded as an Abaddha-sīmā, i.e. a boundary without any demarcation, for it does not need any 'sign' nor the Ñattidutiya-kamma. (Usually it is necessary on other occasions). (Mv. p. 113). Also see SĪMĀ.

Udapāna

A well. The Buddha recommended a well in the Vihāra, in an Ārāma and also in a Jantāghara. (Cv. p. 211). Anāthapiṇḍika constructed many wells in the Jetavanārāma. (Ibid. p. 253). From the ancient Buddhist monasteries many wells have been unearthed. For instance, in the Nalanda Mahāvihāra or at Sarnath (Varanasi) a number of wells have been found from the old ruins.

The wells were sometimes covered with a shade. This was called Udapānasālā. (Ibid. pp. 212, 253; Mv. p. 146).

Udapānasālā

A building or shade over a well is known as Udapānasālā. There may be the provision of strings or bamboo for hanging the robes (Civara-rajju, Civara-vamṣa) and water pots like Udakadoṇī, Udakakaṭāha. (Cv. p. 212).

Udukkhala

A stone piece for grinding grains, a mortar. (Ūkhala in Hindi). It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 221).

Udukkhalika

A hole in the lower beam of the door-frame in order to provide support to the door is known as Udukkhalika. The Buddha found the doors of the Vihāras not very strong, so He recommended it. (Cv. p. 241).

Uddesa

Recitation (particularly of the Pātimokkha). (Pm. (B), p. 1).

In the Bhikkhu-Pātimokkha there are five Uddesas based on the classification of the text. These are: (i) Nidāna Uddesa, (ii) Pārājika Uddesa, (iii) Saṅghādisesa Uddesa, (iv) Aniyatā Uddesa and (v) Vitthāra Uddesa (which includes the rest, viz. Nissaggiya Pācittiya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Sekhiya and Satta-adhikaraṇasamatha). In the Bhikkhunī-Pātimokkha only four Uddesas are possible because the Aniyatās are not found there.

Uddesa-Bhatta

A meal especially meant for a limited number of monks selected by the Saṅgha. The Buddha allowed such a meal for the monks. (Cv. p. 272; Mv. p. 55). It is also mentioned that the selection of the monks for such a meal should be made according to the seniority (in respect of Upasampadā). (Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1335-1344).

Uddosita

A shed or a store-house. (Bhaṇḍasālā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1387). The Buddha allowed it as a dwelling place for the nuns. (Cv. p. 399).

Uddhalomī

A kind of woollen spreading with straight long hair on the upper side. (Ekato uggatalomam unṇamayaattharaṇam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149; Hindi-Galīcā). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana, which is not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. And if anybody uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa.

(Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting but not for sleeping even if it belongs to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Upajjhāya or Upajjhā

The guardian or the spritual teacher of a Buddhist monk. He acts as a 'preceptor' during the Pabbajjā or Upasampadā of a monk. In the SP. the term Upajjhāya is explained thus : "Vajjāvajjam upanijjhāyako garū ti Upajjhāyo nāma"; i. e. one who is vigilant of the severe or light faults of his Saddhivihārika (the disciple). (SP. Vol. III, p. 1025; Cf. Manasā upecca sissānam vajjāvajjam jhāyatī ti Upajjhāyo.—Abhidhānappadīpikāṭikā (M), Gāthā No 410; p. 208, Pyigyī Mandai Press, Rangoon, 1930).

A person intending to become a monk should look out for a 'competent' and 'able' monk who can act as his Upajjhāya. (Mv. p. 43). The Bhikkhu who agrees to become the Upajjhāya must have spent at least ten years after his own Upasampadā. (Anujānāmi, bhikkhave, byattena bhikkunā paṭibaleṇa dasavassena vā atirekadassavassena upasampādetum.—Ibid. p. 57).

It is enjoined by the Buddha that an Upajjhāya should treat his Saddhivihārika as his son; and the Saddhivihārika should treat him as his father. (Upajjhāyo, bhikkhave, saddhivihārikamhi puttacittam upatthapessati, saddhivihāriko upajjhāyamhi pitucittam upatthapessati.—Ibid. p. 43). He should teach him the Dhamma and train him in Vinaya and arrange for his requisites like bowl, robe etc., if the disciple does not have them. If the Saddhivihārika falls ill, it is the duty of the Upajjhāya to do everything possible till he comes round. For instance, he should offer him tooth-stick, water, medicine, food, wash his clothes, arrange his seat etc. The Upajjhāya must take special care of his Saddhivihārika when he is found to have developed antipathy towards the Dhamma and Saṅgha and is intending to disrobe himself. The Upajjhāya should preach him, and if necessary, he should send for someone else who can give discourses so that his antipathy may be removed. For this purpose he should try his utmost. If some false view has crept into the mind of the Saddhivihārika, the Upajjhāya must make every effort to dispel it from his mind. In case the Saddhivihārika happens to commit an offence like Saṅghādisesa or any such grievous offence, it is the duty of the Upajjhāya to induce him for 'expiation' from it. Necessary instructions should also be imparted to the Saddhivihārika by the Upajjhāya in respect of washing, stitching, dyeing of the robes. (Mv. pp. 48-51; Cv. pp. 332-336; Cf. Pari. pp. 316-319).

In case the Saddhivihārika does not behave properly and he has become disobedient, the Upajjhāya should 'expel' him (Paṇāmanā); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed by him. But if the Saddhivihārika admits his mistakes and begs pardon, the Upajjhāya should excuse him and take him back (Khamāpanā). If he does not accept him back and does not excuse him, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. Similarly the Upajjhāya must be very considerate in 'expelling' the Saddhivihārika. The dutiful and obedient one should not be 'expelled'; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. pp. 51-53).

A Bhikkhu ceases to be an Upajjhāya under the following circumstances: If he goes away, or disrobes, or dies, or changes his religion or when he 'expels' the Saddhivihārika. (Upajjhāyo pakkanto vā hoti vibbhanto vā kālaṅkato vā pakkhasaṅkanto vā āṇatti yeva pañcamī.—Ibid. p. 67). And when the Upajjhāya is 'lost', an Ācariya should be 'taken up' (Nissaya) as his 'teacher', if the Saddhivihārika has not yet completed his five years after Upasampadā or has not made himself accomplished so as to live without a 'guidance'. (Ibid. pp. 57-58).

Upajjhāyā or Upajjhāyinī

The feminine gender of Upajjhāya.

A Bhikkhunī of twelve years standing is eligible to become an Upajjhāyā, and then she can confer the Upasampadā upon a Sikkhamānā after having received the formal 'sanction' from the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha (Vutṭhāpanasammuti). Any deviation from it makes one liable to commit the offences of Pācittiya. (Rule Nos. 74 & 75 respectively; Pāc. pp. 256-260; Pm. (B), p. 44).

It is the duty of the Upajjhāyā to train her Sahajīvinī (disciple) at least for two years. It is also mentioned that after the conferment of Upasampadā the Upajjhāyā should go along with her at least to five or six yojanas in case the latter has to travel to a distant place. If she does not do so, she commits the Pācittiya offences. (Rule Nos. 68 & 70 respectively; Pāc. p. 447 & 449; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 984; Kv. (M), p. 344; Pm. (B), p. 43).

Upajjhāyā is the same as Pavattinī.

Upajjhāyavatta

The duties of a Saddhivihārika (disciple) towards his Upajjhāya (preceptor). The Buddha has laid down certain rules which ought to be followed by the disciple. For instance, the Saddhivihārika should behave with his Upajjhāya respectfully as his own father; he should do all the services which the Upajjhāya may require from him. He should arrange for his tooth-stick, fetch water, arrange for medicine if he is sick, clean his room, Vihāra and other furniture and articles there. In case the Upajjhāya develops an antipathy towards the Dhamma, he should endeavour to dispel it; and the like. (For details see: Cv. pp. 328-332; Mv. pp. 43-47). Also see : SADDHIVIHĀRIKA & UPJJHĀYA.

Upaṭṭhānasālā

An assembly hall or a meeting place or a refectory. The Buddha noticed that the monks were put to great inconveniences due to heat or cold when they took meals in the open air. He then allowed the provision of an Upatthānasālā in a Vihāra for the monks (Cv. p. 246). Bhikkhus used to hold their deliberations there or accept the Dāna given by the lay-devotees. A Bhikkhu could take up his Adhiṭṭhāna ('resolve') of the Uposatha in the Upatthānasālā if he was all alone in the Vihāra. (Mv. p. 126).

The Upatthānasālā may be constructed of bricks, stone or wood. (Cv. p. 246). Anāthapiṇḍika constructed the Upatthānasālās in the Jetavanārāma for the Buddha and his Saṅgha. (Ibid. p. 253).

A Saddhivihārika or an Antevāsika is expected to keep the Upatthānasālā neat and tidy. (Mv. pp. 46, 60; Cv. pp. 335, 339).

Upasampadā

Initiation into Bhikkhuhood, the 'higher ordination' or instituting a Sāmaṇera or Sikkhamānā to the full-fledged stage of a monk or nun.

It is one of the most important ceremonies of the Buddhist Order. After full training in the Dhamma, a person having attained twenty years of age is allowed to have his Upasampadā or 'higher ordination'. Any person, other than the Sāmaṇera (novice), if selected for the Upasampadā, is required first to shave his head and moustache and beard. He then looks out for an Upajjhāya (preceptor) who can present him before the Saṅgha. He is provided with the Bhikkhu's robe and alms-bowl. He is also instructed how to behave when presented before the Saṅgha for his Upasampadā. These instructions may be given by an 'able' and 'competent' monk. This is known as 'Anusāsanā'. After this anusāsanā, he is presented before the Saṅgha where he sits down on his legs in Ukkuṭṭika posture and begs the Saṅgha for his Upasampadā. This he does for three times. The Saṅgha then puts certain questions, which he is expected to reply honestly. These questions are put with a view to finding out whether he is an eligible person or not for his 'higher ordination'. He is asked thus: "Do you suffer from any of the diseases like leprosy, boil, eczema, consumption, epilepsy? Are you a human being? Are you a man? Are you not a slave? Are you free from all debts? Are you a 'king's servant' in army? Have you obtained permission from your parents? Have you completed twenty years of age? Have you got your bowl and robes? What is your name? Who is your Upajjhāya?" After this interrogation is over, a 'competent' and 'able' Bhikkhu proclaims his 'higher ordination' for three times thus: "Venerable Sirs, let the Saṅgha hear me. This person, so and so, wishes for his Upasampadā from the Venerable so and so (his Upajjhāya). He is quite 'pure' in regard to the matters which are 'stumbling blocks' (Antarāyikā-dammā); he has got his bowl and robes. So and so is requesting the Saṅgha for 'higher ordination' through the 'preceptor' (Upajjhāya) so and so. If the 'higher ordination' of so and so is agreeable to the Venerable Sirs, let them remain silent; and he to whom it is not pleasing should speak. And the Second time I speak about this matter;.....and the Third time I speak forth..... So and so is being ordained by the Saṅgha through the 'preceptor' so and so. It is agreeable to the Saṅgha, therefore, it is silent. Thus do I understand it." (Mv. pp. 53, 54, 93-100).

Immediately after the Upasampadā, the newly ordained monk is apprised of the Four Nissayas, i. e. four 'resources' upon which he should depend. These are : Living on alms, using rags as his robe, living under trees and using filthy urine as his medicine. Extra acquisitions are also informed; but he is expected to keep these Nissayas in mind throughout his whole life. (Ibid. p. 100). He is also apprised of the Four Pārājikās as 'akaraṇīyā', viz. abstention from sexual intercourse, abstention from stealing, abstention from killing a human being and abstention from telling frivolently about the attainment of any higher or miraculous 'knowledge' or 'power'. The newly ordained monk should be handed over to another monk who should escort him up to the Pariveṇa (courtyard). (Ibid. pp. 100-101; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1089).

For the purpose of holding an Upasampadā ceremony, an assembly of at least ten fully ordained monks is needed in the Majjhimadesa (N. India), while an assembly of five fully ordained monks is needed outside the Majjhimadesa. (Mv. pp. 216, 335).

No Upasampadā should be conferred upon any person without an Upajjhāya; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. p. 92).

Upasampadā is forbidden to the following persons : A thief who has an 'emblem' (Dhaja-bandhacora), one who has run away from jail (Kārabhedaka), a 'registered thief' (Likhitakacora), who has been punished by flogging, who has been punished by branding, one who is a matricide, or a patricide, or is a murderer of Arhanta, one who has 'shed the blood' of the Buddha, a eunuch, one who has entered into the Saṅgha stealthily by himself (Theyyasaṃvāsaka), one who has seduced a nun, one who is a hermaphrodite, one who does not have his Upajjhāya, one whose hands are cut off, or feet are cut off, or hands and feet both are cut off, or ears are cut off, or nose is cut off, or ears and nose both are cut off, fingers are cut off, nails are cut off, tendons of feet are cut off, one who is of webbed fingers, one who is a hunchback, one who is a dwarf, one who has goitre, or elephantiasis, one who is 'badly' sick, one who 'disgraces' the assembly on account of some deformity (Parisadūsaka), a one-eyed man, one who is has a crooked limb, a lame, one who has paralysis in one side, or one who is a cripple, one who is infirm due to old age, a blind, a dumb, a deaf, a dumb and deaf, a dumb-deaf-blind. (Ibid. pp. 89-95).

A mendicant of other sects may get his Upasampadā provided he undergoes a Parivāsa (i.e. testing period) of four months. If he is found fit, 'higher ordination' may be conferred upon him. (Ibid. p. 73). No Parivāsa is necessary for a Jaṭila or a mendicant of Śākya race.

After his Upasampadā, the ordained person attains the full-fledged monkhood; and he is, therefore, expected to observe all the monastic rules laid down in the Pātimokkha and in other Vinaya texts. He also becomes eligible for attending all the Saṅgha-kammās and other deliberations of the Saṅgha.

In the beginning of the Saṅgha no distinction was made between the Upasampadā and Pabbijjā. (Cf. Ibid. p. 24). But later on, as the strength of the Saṅgha increased, the Buddha gave separate injunctions about them. (Also see: PABBAJJĀ).

In the beginning of the Buddhist Order, the ladies were not admitted into the Saṅgha. But later, at the request of Mahāpajāpati Gotamī and also supported by the Venerable Ānanda, the Buddha allowed the admission of women into the Saṅgha with some restrictions; and thenceforth the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha came into existence. (Cv. pp. 373-379).

The procedure of the Bhikkhunī Upasampadā is almost the same as in the case of a monk. The lady is presented first before the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha for conferring the Upasampadā upon her by holding a Ñatticatutthakammavācā. After that, she is presented before the Bhikkhu-Saṅgha where again the Upasampadā is conferred upon her by holding a Ñatticatuttha-kammavācā (as done earlier by the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha). Hence, this is known as 'Atṭhavācika-upasampadā', i.e. Ordination by two-fours proclamations, one by the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha and the other by the Bhikkhu Saṅgha. (Kv. (M), p. 104; Cf. Cv. pp. 391-395). Before the Upasampadā is conferred upon a nun, it is essential that she should have completed her two years of 'probationary period' as a Sikkhamānā by observing the 'six rules of conduct'. If any Bhikkhunī ordains one who has not spent two years as a Sikkhamānā, she is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 63; Pāc. pp. 435-437; Pm. (B), p. 43). It is also mentioned in the text that she should not possess any of the 'stumbling blocks' (Antarāyikā-Dhammā); and so in order to ascertain it, she should be asked thus: "Are you a woman with no sign of female sex (nāsi animittā)? Are you a woman with under-developed signs of female sex (nāsi animittamattā)? Are you a woman with no menstruation (nāsi alohitā)? Have you a perpetual menstruation (Dhuvālohitā)? Are you always keeping pad (Dhuvacolā)? Are you always oozing (Paggharaṇī)? Have you extraordinary long cloitris (Sikharaṇī)? Are you a she-eunuch (Itthipaṇḍaka)? Are you an amazon (Vepurisikā)? Have you two organs joined (nāsi sambhinnā)? Are you a hermaphrodite (Ubhatobyañjanaka)? Do you suffer from any of these diseases: leprosy (Kuṭṭho), boil (Gaṇḍo), eczema (Kilāso), consumption (Soso) and epilepsy (Apamāro)? Are you a human being? Are you a woman? Are you a slave? Are you free from debt? Are you a government servant in army (Rājābhaṭṭi)? Have you obtained permission from your parents or husband? Have you attained twenty years of age? Have you got your bowl and robe? What is your name? What is the name of your 'preceptor' (Pavattinī)? (Cv. p. 393).

A lady carrying baby (Gabbhinī) or suckling a child (Payanti) should not be ordained; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule Nos. 61 & 62; Pāc. pp. 433-435; Pm. (B), p. 43). 'Higher ordination' (Upasampadā) may be conferred upon a married lady (Gihigatā) even at the age of twelve but not below that age; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 65; Pāc. p. 441; Pm. (B), p. 43). Ordinarily the Upasampadā is conferred at the age of twenty, especially upon one who is unmarried (Kumāribhūtā). An unmarried lady should never be given Upasampadā if she is less than twenty years of age (as is the case with the monks). If so done, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 71; Pāc. p. 450, Pm. (B), p. 44). If a Sikkhamānā is of bad temper, she also should not be given Upasampadā. This involves an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 79; Pāc. p. 463; Pm. (B), p. 44). Similarly an offence of Pācittiya is committed if anyone ordains a lady who has not obtained the permission from her parents or husband. (Rule No. 80; Pāc. p. 464-65; Pm. (B), p. 44).

The Upajjhāyini or Pavattinī must have spent at least twelve years after her Upasampadā before she acts as an Upajjhāyini for conferring the Upasampadā; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 74; Pāc. p. 441; Pm. (B), p. 44). Similarly an Upajjhāyini cannot perform the Upasampadā ceremony every year, nor can she ordain more than one in a year. If she does so, she is liable to commit the Pācittiya offences. (Rule Nos. 82, 83; Pāc. pp. 467-468; Pm. (B), p. 44).

The Buddha, before he condescended to the requests of Ānanda and Mahāpajāpati Gotamī for admitting the woman-folk into the Saṅgha, laid down 'Eight Important Rules' (Aṭṭhagarudhammā), which a nun must observe throughout her whole life. These are: (1) A nun who has received her Upasampadā even a century earlier must pay respect to a monk who has just received his Upasampadā. (2) A nun must not spend her 'rainy resort' (vassāvāsa) at a residence where there is no monk. (3) A nun must ask on every fortnight the date of Uposatha and the day when she should come for her 'exhortation' (Ovāda). (4) After the 'rainy resort' a nun must 'invite' Pavāraṇā before both the Bhikkhu and Bhikkhun Saṅghas in respect of three things as to what was seen, or heard or suspected against her character during the Vassāvāsa. If a nun happens to commit some grievous offence (Saṅghādisesa), she should undergo a Mānatta of a fortnight before both the Saṅghas of Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs. (6) A Sikkhamānā (probationer) should seek Upasampadā only when she has spent two years of training-period observing the 'six rules'; and that she should seek for Upasampadā from both the Saṅghas. (7) A nun should never abuse or revile a monk on any account. (8) Only monks can 'admonish' or 'exhort' the nuns but never the nuns can 'admonish' or 'exhort' the monks. (Cv. pp. 374-375). When these 'Eight Important Rules' were accepted by Mahāpajāpati Gotamī, the Buddha allowed the initiation of ladies in the Buddhist Order. But He expressed His apprehension that on account of the inclusion of the ladies in the Buddhist Order, the Saṅgha would not last long and it might be detrimental to the very existence of the Dhamma in the world. (Ibid. pp. 376-77).

We come across the instances of eight kinds of Upasampadās in the Vinaya texts. These are: (1) Ehi Bhikkhu Upasampadā (by uttering only 'come'). (2) Saraṇagamana Upasampadā (by undergoing the three 'refuges', the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha). (3) Ovādapāṭiggahaṇa Upasampadā (by receiving 'exhortation' only). (4) Paññābyākaraṇa Upasampadā (by exposition of 'higher knowledge'). (5) Garudhammapāṭiggahaṇa Upasampadā (by accepting the 'Eight Important Rules' as by Mahāpajāpati Gotamī). (6) Dūtena Upasampadā (ordination through a messenger. This is allowed in the case of women-folk). (7) Aṭṭhavācika Upasampadā (the formal ordination of a nun). (8) Ñatticatutthakamma Upasampadā (the formal ordination of a monk). The first six are of unusual types, while the two—the 7th and 8th are the common types of Upasampadās for the nuns and monks respectively. (SP. Vol I, pp. 233-237).

Upassaya

A nunnery or the dwelling place for the Bhikkhunīs. (Upassayaṃ ti gharaṃ—SP. Vol. III, 1387; Cf. Kavāṭabaddho ti vuccati.—Pāc. pp. 84; 399). The Buddha allowed the Upassaya for the nuns. (Cv. p. 399). No Bhikkhunī should turn out another Bhikkhunī from the Upassaya if she has already been allowed to stay there; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 35; Pāc. p. 399; Pm. (B), p. 41).

Upāsaka

A Buddhist lay-devotee, having faith in the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha.

When a lay-devotee is initiated, he takes 'refuge' in the Buddha, the Dhamma and Saṅgha for three times. (Yo koci saraṇagato gahattho ti Upāsako.—Dīghanikāyaṭṭhakathā (R), Vol. I, p. 234). It is also laid down that he should observe the following 'five precepts' (Pañcasīlāni), viz. abstinence from killing, from stealing, from immoral acts, from telling lie and from taking intoxicants. It is also expected from him that he would abstain from earning his livelihood by sinful trades, such as, trade in arms,.....in living beings,.....in meat,.....in liquor and.....in poison. (Ibid. p. 235).

The first Upāsakas of the Buddha were two traders, Tapassu and Bhallika. As they became the lay-devotees prior to the existence of the Saṅgha, they were also known as 'Dvevācika Upāsakā' i.e. Upāsakas by 'two utterances', the Buddha & Dhamma only. (Mv. p. 6). After the formation of the Saṅgha at Isipatana (Mod. Sarnath, Varanasi) by the Buddha, the first tevācika Upāsaka was the father of Yasa Thera, who had undergone the 'three refuges', viz. the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. He was then called 'Tevācika Upāsaka'. (Ibid. p. 20).

Since an Upāsaka is not an ordained person (Anupasampanna) and hence not the member of the Saṅgha, he is not allowed to be present in the Saṅgha-kamma of any kind. The Bhikkhus are also forbidden to hold the recitation of the Patimokkha in the presence of a layman; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. p. 117).

Upāsikā

A female lay-devotee, having faith and reverence in the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. (Buddham saraṇam gatā, Dhammam saraṇam gatā, Saṅgham saraṇam gatā.—Pārā. p. 280).

The first female lay-devotees of the Buddha were the mother and the former wife of Yasa Thera. They underwent the 'three refuges' to the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha by making three utterances; and so they were also known as 'Tevācika Upāsikā'. (Mv. p. 21). No Upāsikā was made by the Buddha prior to the formation of the Saṅgha and hence 'Dvevācika Upāsikā' (i.e. an Upāsikā by undergoing to two 'refuges' of the Buddha and Saṅgha only) is not to be found.

Upāhana

A sandal or shoe, made of leather. In the beginning the Buddha did not allow Upāhana to the monks. But later on, seeing the plight of Venerable Soṇa Koḷa-visa, the Buddha allowed the monks to use simple type of sandals made of one lining (Ekapalāsikam). (Mv. p. 204). If a monk used the sandal made of more than one lining in the Majjhimadesa (N. India), he would be liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. pp. 204, 216). But the monks living outside the Majjhimadesa might use the sandals of any number of linings. (Ibid. p. 216).

Many kinds of sandals are mentioned in the texts as unsuitable for the use of the monks, which were used mostly by the people at large. These are: Sandals of dark-blue colour (sabba-nīlikā), of entirely yellow colour (sabba-pitīkā), of entirely red colour (sabba-lohitikā), of entirely crimson colour (sabba-majjitthikā), of all black colour (sabba-kaṇhā), of entirely orange colour (mahāraṅgarattā). Similarly those sandals with dark-blue straps, with entirely crimson straps, with all black straps, with entirely orange coloured straps, with multi-coloured straps were not permitted for the use of the monks. So also the sandals with heel-covering (khallakabaddhā), with topboots (Pāliguṇṭhimā), stuffed with cotton (Tūlapuṇṇikā), of many hues like partridges' wings (Tittirapattikā), of pointed shape like ram's horn (Meṇḍaka-visāṇabaddhikā), of pointed shape like goat's horn (Ajavisaṇabaddhikā), pointed like the scorpion's tail, sewn round with the peacock-tail-feathers and the embroidered ones, were not allowed for the monks. The following sandals were also not suitable for the use of the monks. These are: A sandal decorated with the lion's skin (Sīhacammaparikkhaṭṭā),.....with tiger's skin (Byagghacammaparikkhaṭṭā),.....with panther's skin (Dīpicammaparikkhaṭṭā).....with antelope's skin (Ajinacammaparikkhaṭṭā),.....with otter-skin (Udacammaparikkhaṭṭā),with cat-skin (Majjāracammaparikkhaṭṭā),with squirrel-skin (Kāḷakacammaparikkhaṭṭā),with owl-skin (Ulūkacammaparikkhaṭṭā). If such types of Upāhanas were used by a monk, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭṭa. (Ibid. pp. 205-206).

As mentioned above the Upāhana of single lining only is allowed for the monks, but an old sandal of many linings may be used. (Ibid. p. 206).

It is regarded as a matter of disrespect if a monk walks with his elders (like Upajjhāya or Ācariya) by putting on the sandals when the elder does not have any. Such a behaviour entails the offence of Dukkaṭṭa. Exemptions are, however, given to those who have some troubles in their feet, such as chilblains, splint or affections of corns on the feet (Pādakhīlābādho). Ordinarily a monk is not expected to use the Upāhana inside the ārāma; but during nights one may use it. Similarly Upāhana may be put on if one has to sit on a couch or chair so that he can avoid his feet being soiled by dirt. (Ibid. p. 207). A monk going round for alms in a village should take off his sandals; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭṭa is committed. If necessary, it may be kept in the shoe-bag (Upāhanathavikā). This rule was especially framed for those who lived in the forests. (Cv. pp. 207; 322).

It was the Indian tradition to take off shoes when showing respect to the elders or saluting them. In the Buddhist Saṅgha also the same courtesy was followed. (Cf. Mv. pp. 44, 58).

A Bhikkhunī is not allowed to use the Upāhana except when she is sick; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 84; Pāc. pp. 468-469; Pm. (B), p. 44).

Upāhanathavikā

A sandal-bag. It was prescribed by the Buddha for the monks living in the forest, particularly when going round for alms in the village. The sandal-bag may have strings also to hang. (Cv. p. 207).

Uposattha

A sort of ecclesiastical congregation of the Buddhist Order (twice in a month) with a view to expounding the Dhamma and to reciting the ecclesiastical rules laid down in the Pātimokkha. In fact, it was a pre-Buddhist tradition prevalent amongst the other religious sects who used to assemble on the eve of every week. They utilised these days for their religious discourses and for the exposition of their doctrines. (Mv. p. 105). The Buddha also adopted this practice with certain modifications suiting to his Dhamma and Vinaya. Upasatha days were reduced by him from four to two in a month; to be held twice on the (i) Cātuddasī and (ii) on the Pañṇarasī of the month. (Ibid. p. 105). The Buddha has laid down that the Upasatha days should be utilised by the Saṅgha for expounding the Dhamma and also for the recitation of the Pātimokkha. (Ibid. p. 106). The reckoning of the days is not done by the month but by the Pakkha (fortnight) and so the four months of a season (the seasons are three—the Hemanta, the Gimhāna and the Vassāna) would have 8 Pakkhas, for holding the Upasatha. Thus the 3rd & the 7th Pakkhas of a season are Cātuddasī, while the others the 1st, 2nd, 4th, 5th, 6th and 8th Pakkhas have the Pañṇarasī Upasatha. (Kv. (M), p. 86; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1091).

There is an Upasatha which can be held on any day by the Saṅgha. This is called the Sāmaggī-Upasatha. This is held in order to give a formal seal of 'reconciliation' on a quarrel which existed earlier in the Saṅgha but now which has been made up. This formal confession of 'reconciliation' is given by the 'whole Saṅgha' and hence, it is called Sāmaggī Upasatha or 'reconciliation Upasatha'. (Mv. pp. 388-389; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1236). This can be held on any day. (Kv. (M), p. 86).

When the Upasatha is attended by the Saṅgha (of 4 or more Bhikkhus), it is called the Saṅgha Upasatha. The Gaṇa Upasatha is one which is attended by a Gaṇa of the monks (i. e. by two or three Bhikkhus). And when the Upasatha is performed by one monk (Puggala) alone, it is called the Puggala Upasatha. A Saṅgha Upasatha is also known as Suttuddesa Upasatha simply because the Sutta, i. e. Pātimokkha, is recited in this assembly. In the Gaṇa Upasatha the Pātimokkha is not recited. The monks only proclaim their 'purity' (Pārisuddhi) among themselves; and so it is also called Pārisuddhi Upasatha. The Puggala Upasatha is also known as Adhiṭṭhāna Upasatha, because the single person can only have his 'resolve' (adhiṭṭhāna) to perform the Upasatha. (Kv. (M), p. 93; Mv. pp. 125-126; Pari. p. 222).

In the Pātimokkhopadattavaṇṇana [(M), p. 15], the word Upasatha has been explained in three ways: (i) Sīlena upeto hutvā vasanaṃ uposatho. Ko so? Pātimokkha uddeso (i.e. attending endowed with the Sīlas. What is that? It is the recitation of the Pātimokkha). (ii) Upecca vasitabbo, saṃvasitabbo etenāti vā uposatho (i.e. attending by realising its significance). (iii) Samaggaṃ upagantvā vasanti bhikkhū etenāti vā uposatho (i.e. It is Upasatha because the Bhikkhus undertake to live in harmony together).

The Bhikkhus living within one Sīmā or 'boundary' are required to hold their Upasatha at an Upasathāgāra or the hall for the Upasatha. In case the Upasathāgāra is found too small, the place around the Upasathāgāra or another place fit for the purpose may be used after making such by declaration by the Ñattidutiyakamma. This is known as Upasathapamukha. (Mv. pp. 109-111).

Uposatha cannot be observed by a 'group of monks'. It can be held only by the whole Saṅgha, and that also in proper manner. (Dhammena samaggaṃ uposathakammaṃ anuññātaṃ.—Ibid. p. 114).

A Bhikkhu cannot attend the Uposatha ceremony if he has committed some 'offence' which he has not yet expiated. (Ibid. pp. 126-127).

In the texts as many as twenty one persons are mentioned in whose presence the Uposatha should not be performed. These are : Bhikkhunī, Sikkhamānā, Sāmaṇera, Sāmaṇerī, Sikkhāpaccakkhātaka (one who has disrobed), one who has committed Pārājika offence, the three kinds of Ukkhittaka, a eunuch, one who has entered the Saṅgha stealthily (Theyyasaṃvāsaka), one who has gone over to another sect, one who belongs to the non-human world (Tiracchānagata), murderer of father, or mother, or Arahanta, the seducer of Bhikkhunīs, one who has created 'dissension' in the Saṅgha, one who has 'shed the blood of the Buddha', a hermaphrodite and a layman. (Mv. pp. 141-142; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93). They are known as Vojjanīyapuggalā, i.e. 'prohibited persons'. If the Uposatha is performed in the presence of any of the above mentioned persons (except the Ukkhittaka), an offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. But if the Uposatha is held in the presence of an Ukkhittaka, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 69; Pāc. p. 185; Pm. (B), p. 17; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93).

Uposathāgāra or Uposathagga

A building for the purpose of holding Uposatha is known as Uposathāgāra. It may be a Vihāra, or an Aḍḍhayoga, or a Pāsāda, or a Hammiya, or a Guhā. Only one Uposathāgāra is allowed within one Sīmā; and if there are more than one, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. To select a building as an Uposathāgāra the Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for the purpose. (Mv. pp. 109-110). In case more than one buildings have already been selected as the Uposathāgāra, only one should be retained and the others should be cancelled by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Ibid.).

Uposathapamukha

Should the Uposathāgāra be found too small for the number of the monks assembled for the Uposatha, the Saṅgha may declare the place around the Uposathāgāra or any other place as fit for holding the Uposathakamma. This site is known as Uposathapamukha. For this purpose the signs are determined and then by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma it is formally so 'declared' and 'agreed upon' by the Saṅgha (Mv. pp. 110-111).

Uposathika-Bhatta

A meal offered on the Uposatha day (i.e. on the fortnight of a month) by a layman who has observed the 'Eight Precepts' on this day. The Buddha allowed the monks to eat such a meal. (Cv. p. 272; Mv. p. 55; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1354-1355).

Ubhatopaññatti

Enactment of the ecclesiastical rules applicable both to the Bhikkhu and Bhikkhunī Saṅghas. (Pari. p. 4; Cf. SP. Vol III, p. 1396).

Ubhatobyañjanaka

A hermaphrodite. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 92; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1078-1079). Such a person is regarded as Vajjantiya or 'prohibited' at any ecclesiastical performance. In his presence no function should be held by the Saṅgha. (Mv. p. 142).

Ubhatolohitakūpadhāna

A kind of bed with red pillows at both ends for resting the head and feet. (Sīsūpadhānaṃ ca pādūpadhānañcāti mañcassa ubhato lohita-kūpadhānaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1150). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and hence not allowed for the use of the monks. If one uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting only but never for sleeping even if it belongs to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Ummatakasammuti

The formal declaration made by the Saṅgha about a Bhikkhu who has gone mad. This declaration of the Saṅgha is made by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma; and after that, the Saṅgha is free to hold Upasatha or any other ecclesiastical function with him or without him. (Mv. pp. 124-125).

Ulūkapakkha

The feather of the owls, used as a robe. The Buddha prohibited the monks from using it. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. (Mv. p. 320). It was indeed used as the robe by the other sects during the time of the Buddha and hence called 'Titthiyadhaja'. (Ibid.).

Ussāvanantikā-Kappiyabhūmi-Kuṭṭi

It is one of the four 'suitable places' (Kappiyabhūmi) for storing the food articles by the monks. (Mv. p. 254). For the construction of such a building, monks ceremonially lay the foundation stone or raise a pillar etc. by uttering thus : Kappiyakuṭṭiṃ karoma; i.e. we construct a 'suitable building' (a Kappiyakuṭṭi) SP. Vol. III, pp. 1162-1163). See also KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Enactment of the ecclesiastical rules for only one of the Saṅghas, i. e. either for the Bhikkhu Saṅgha or for the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha. (Same as Asādhāraṇa-paññatti). (Pari. p. 4; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1396).

Ekantalomī

A kind of woolen spreading which has got long hair on both sides. (Ubhato uggatalomaṃ uṇṇamajalṭharaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1194). It is regarded as Uccāsaya-namahāsayana and hence not allowed for the use of the monks; and if anybody uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting only but never for sleeping even if it belongs to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Elakapādaka-Piṭha

A small chair with wooden seat. (Dārupaṭṭikāya upariṭāde ṭhapetvā bhojanaphalakam viya katam piṭham vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1299-1300). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

O

Okāsa

The 'consent' to be obtained from a monk who has done something 'wrong' so that he may be put some questions with a view to reproving him. It is laid down that if the monk is 'pure' or there is no genuine case against him, the 'consent' should not be sought; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 116; Cf. Pari. pp. 329-330). No Bhikkhunī is allowed to put any question to a Bhikkhu without obtaining 'consent' from him; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 95; Pāc. p. 479; Pm. (B), p. 45).

Okkhittacakkhu

'Downcast-eyes'. A Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī when entering a village or a house or sitting there, should keep the eyes downcast and should not see beyond a Yuga. (i.e. a small distance of about four hands or two steps). (Pāc. p. 248; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 923; Kv. (M), p. 279; Pātimokkhapadatthavaṇṇana (M), p. 290).

A Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī should always go with the downcast eyes (Sekhiyā Rules Nos. 7 & 8; Pm. (B), pp. 21 & 53); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Pāc. p. 248).

Ottharaka

A kind of large water-strainer fixed in the pond for the use of many monks, especially when the monks are engaged in building construction. (Cv. p. 208; Cf. Yaṃ udake ottharivā ghaṭakena udakaṃ gaṇhanti. Taṃ hi catūsu daṇḍakesu vattham bandhitvā udake cattāro khāṇuke nikkhanivā tesu bandhitvā sabba pariyante udakato mocivā majjhe ottharivā ghaṭena udakaṃ gaṇhanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1289).

Onaddhapīṭha

A kind of chair with stuffed seat. The Bhikkhus were allowed to use it. (Cv. p. 244).

Onaddhamañca

A kind of bed-stead with stuffed seat. Its use was allowed by the Buddha, (Cv. p. 244).

Omasavāda

Derogatory or insulting words spoken against a monk. If a monk uses such words against another monk, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 2). The derogatory or insulting words may refer to another monk's caste, name, Gotta, deeds, profession, disease, appearance, vices and offences etc. These are regarded as abusive words. (Pāc. p. 10ff; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 98; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 45).

Ovaṭṭika (I)

A bracelet. (Valayaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 651). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Ovaṭṭika (II)

To re-stitch a piece of cloth; over stitching. (Bahitvā karaṇaṃ ovaṭṭikaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 1197). (Mv. p. 306; It is called Bakhiyā in Hindī).

Ovāda

Generally speaking it means 'exhortation', 'admonition' or advice to a disciple or a pupil by his Upajjhāya or Ācariya. (Mv. pp. 48, 62; Cv. pp. 332, 341). But the customary 'exhortation' or 'admonition' to the Bhikkhunīs about their Aṭṭhagarudhammā on the Uposatha day is also known as Ovāda. (Cv. pp. 374-375; Ovādo nāma aṭṭhagarudhammā.—Pāc. pp. 78, 430). It was the tradition that the Bhikkhunīs were 'admonished' with the 'Eight Important Rules' or Aṭṭhagarudhammā on the Uposatha days by a monk selected by the Saṅgha for the purpose before the Pātimokkha was recited in the Assembly. A 'competent' monk was selected by the Saṅgha for the purpose by holding a Ñatticatutthakamma. (Pāc. p. 78). He alone could 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs assembled there. Other monks were not allowed to do so. If one did so, he was liable to commit an offence of Pacittiya. (Rule No. 21; Ibid. p. 78; Pm. (B), p. 12). It was also enjoined by the Buddha that the Bhikkhunīs should attend this 'exhortation' (Ovāda) without fail; otherwise an offence of Pacittiya was committed. (Rule No. 58; Pāc. p. 430; Cv. p. 384; Pm. (B), p. 43). But later on this observance was relaxed and then only two or three Bhikkhunīs of the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha could attend the Ovāda. And if more than two or three Bhikkhunīs of the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha attended the Ovāda, the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Cv. p. 384).

The monk who delivers the Ovāda is known as Bhikkhunovādaka Bhikkhu. (Pāc. pp. 75-78).

Ovāda-Ṭhapana

A kind of Daṇḍakamma (punishment) which is pronounced against a Bhikkhunī if she behaves improperly and unmannerly with the monks. In the first instance, such a nun is prohibited to enter the Vihāra (Āvaraṇa); and if she does not pay any heed to the Āvaraṇa, she is not allowed to receive any 'exhortation' (Ovāda) from the monks and also she is forbidden to attend the Upasatha with other nuns. This act of punishment is known as Ovāda-ṭhapana. (Cv. pp. 382-383; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1384).

The monk who has pronounced this punishment and has disallowed the nun from receiving the 'exhortation' (Ovāda) should not go on a long journey till the case is settled; otherwise he will commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 383). A 'competent' and 'able' monk can alone disallow a nun from receiving the Ovāda, but not a foolish or indolent monk; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid.).

Osāraka

An outer verandah of a Vihāra, usually supported by bamboo poles, particularly in that Vihāra which has no inner verandah. (Anālinḍake vihāra vaṃsaṃ datvā tato daṇḍake osāretvā katacchadanam pamukham.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303). Such a verandah is approved by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 246; It is called Osārā in Hindī).

Osāraṇā

(I) Accepting a person as a member of the Saṅgha by Upasampadā (Osāraṇāti pavesanā, tam ce saṅgho osāretīti upasampadākammavasena paveseti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1219 Cf. Mv. p. 338). Or (II) 'calling back' a monk by the Saṅgha, who has been excommunicated on account of the offences like Pabbājaniya, Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Ukkhepanīya. (Mv. p. 101; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1219).

In the Kaṅkhāvitaraṇī [(M), pp. 256-258] the acts like (i) resuming the acceptance of the offerings of an Upāsaka who has been earlier debarred from offering the Dāna to the monks on account of his ill behaviour (Pattanikkujjana); or (ii) 'calling back' a Sāmaṇera who has been excommunicated for some time; or

(iii) presenting a probationer for his Upasāṃpadā (higher ordination) before the Saṅgha, are also described as Osāraṇā. (Cf. Pari. p. 390).

Ka

Kaṇcuka

A jacket or a long mantle. The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks and the nuns. If one used it, he or she was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 321; Cv. p. 388).

Kaṭacchuparissāvana

A water strainer, fixed in a frame. This was used by the monks for straining water. (Cv. p. 207; Cf. Tīsu daṇḍakesu vinandhitoṇṇaṃ kaṭaṃ.—SP. Vol III, p. 1289).

Kaṭākaṭa

The well cooked ⁵Mugga-gruel (Phaseolus mungo). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it as a medicine. (Mv. p. 225; Cf. Dhota siniddho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156).

Kaṭissa

An embroidered silken bed-spreading with golden weave. (Ratanaparivesitaṃ koseyyakaṭissamayam paccattharaṇam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1194; Koseyyakaṭissamayam ti kosiyaṣuttānaṃ antarā suvaṇṇamayasaṣuttāni pavesetvā vītaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭīkā (M), Vol. II, p. 184). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana; and hence it is not allowed for the use of the monks. If anybody uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting only even if it belongs to a layman but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258). It may be used as Bhūmmattharaṇa by the Saṅgha in the Vihāra. (Ibid. p. 265).

Kaṭisuttaka

A kind of ornamental band or chain to decorate the waist. (Yaṃ kiṇci kaṭipilandhanaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1282). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 195).

A string round the waist to hold the Āṇicolaka (menstruation pad) is also known as Kaṭisuttaka. The Buddha allowed the Bhikkhunis to use it. (Ibid. p. 391). After the menses period is over, it should not be used. It should be removed; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. p. 391).

Kaṭbina (I)

A wooden-frame used when stitching the robes. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Nissenimpi tattha attharitabbakaṭasāra- kakilañjanānaṃ aññatarampi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288). The Buddha has asked the monks to use it properly and keep it carefully in the Kāṭhinasālā (i. e. the room in which the Kāṭhina was used and kept). Any unscrupulous use of the Kāṭhina may involve the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 206).

Kāṭhina (II)

It is an ecclesiastical ceremony held after the end of the first Vassāvāsa (rainy resort) (i.e. in the month of Kattika) in which a Cīvara (a Saṅghāṭī or an Uttarāsaṅga or an Antaravāsaka or even a piece of cloth) is offered to a monk who is found poor in respect of his robes and also has lived righteously during the 'rainy resort.' To select such a monk, a Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the Saṅgha. (Mv. p. 266; Pari. p. 310; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1173). If the Saṅgha happens to offer a piece of cloth (not a prepared robe), the recipient monk is required to prepare one of the three robes (Uttarāsaṅga, Saṅghāṭī or Antaravāsaka) which he needs most on the same day. (Mv. p. 267).

The Bhikkhu selected for the Kāṭhina-robe enjoys the following five 'privileges' (Ānisaṃsa); viz. (i) He can go out without telling others even if he has an invitation for Dāna (Ānāmantacāro). (ii) He can remain without one of the three robes (Asamādānacāro). (iii) He can take a 'groupmeal' (Gaṇabhojana). (iv) He can keep any number of robes without adhiṭṭhāna (resolve) or vikappanā ('formally acceptable'). (v) He has the privilege to get a share from the Cīvara donated to the Saṅgha. (Mv. p. 266ff). These 'privileges' remain in force for five months, i.e. up to the full-moon day of Phagguṇa (March). (Pārā. p. 369; Kv. (M), p. 159).

The Kāṭhina may be performed with the cloth or the prepared robe donated by any person, a layman, a monk, a Sāmaṇera, a Sāmaṇerī, a Bhikkhunī or a Sikkhamānā. It may be a new cloth, a rag (pilotikā), a cloth thrown in the dust (paṃsukūla), a piece of cloth purchased from the market. But it is not a cloth obtained by self-instruction or hint (animittakena), or a cloth received by any sort of inducement (aparikathākatena). It is not a cloth which is obtained for the temporary purpose (i.e. on hire etc.) (akukkukatenā). It is a cloth which cannot be stored for more than one day after it is received (asannidhikatenā). It is not a Nissaggiya cīvara (i.e. a Cīvara which involves the offence of Nissaggiya-pācittiya). This is a cloth which has already been 'tarnished' (Kappakatam); and it may be a Saṅghāṭī, an Uttarāsaṅga or an Antaravāsaka. It is a cloth which is cut into five or more pieces and then stitched; and it is proper according to the rules of the Vinaya and for which an Anumodanā ('appreciation') is done as per rules. (Mv. p. 267; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1174-1175). The recipient monk is required to utter thus : Imāya saṅghāṭiyā (iminā uttarāsaṅgena or antaravāsakena) kāṭhinam attharāmi; (i.e. By this Saṅghāṭī or Uttarāsaṅga or Antaravāsaka I 'spread' it as Kāṭhina). (Kāṭhina- attharaṇa). The monk then approaches the Saṅgha and informs that he has 'spread' the Kāṭhina cīvara righteously; and prays for the 'appreciation' (anumodanā) of the Saṅgha. All the monks thereupon 'appreciate' it. (Pari. p. 311; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1174-1175).

The following persons are not eligible (obhabba) for receiving the Kāṭhina. They are : One who does not know the Pubbakaraṇa ('Preliminaries'); who does not know how to dispense with the old robe (paccudhāra); who does not know the 'resolve' (adhiṭṭhāna) for a new robe; who does not know how to 'spread' the Kāṭhina (attharaṇa); who does not know about the removal of Kāṭhina (uddhāra); who does not know the five 'impediments' or 'obstacles' (palibodha) regarding 'residence' and robe; who does not know the five 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) of Kāṭhina. (Pari. p. 310).

The persons outside the Sīmā are not eligible for 'appreciating' (anumodanā) the Kāṭhina. Similarly one who cannot speak out the anumodanā loudly or whose utterance is not distinct, is not eligible for this. (Ibid. p. 310).

The 'spreading' (attharaṇa) of Kāṭhina is not regarded as valid if the cloth for the Kāṭhina is not 'proper' (kappiya) (Vatthuvipanna); or the cloth received by the Saṅgha for Kāṭhina is offered after one day (Kālavipanna); or the cloth (received by the monk selected for Kāṭhina) could not be prepared as a robe on the same day (Karaṇavipanna). (Ibid. p. 310; Cf. SP. Vol. III, 1482).

The 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) for Kāṭhina are forfeited or withdrawn under following eight circumstances. They are : (1) When a monk goes away from his Vihārasīmā with a view not to returning (Pakkamantikā). (2) When a monk goes away from his Vihārasīmā and then decides to prepare the robe but somehow or other does not return to his Vihāra (Niṭṭhānantikā). (3) When a monk goes away from his Vihārasīmā and then makes up his mind neither to make the robe nor to return to his Vihāra (Saniṭṭhānantikā). (4) When a monk goes away from his Vihārasīmā and then decides to make his robe out of the Kāṭhinadussa but not to return to the Vihāra. Hence the prepared robe is 'lost' by itself (Nāsanantikā). (5) When a monk goes away from the Vihārasīmā with a view to returning and there he prepares the robe. Later he comes to know that his Kāṭhina has been withdrawn (Sāvanantikā). (6) When a monk goes away from his Vihārasīmā in search of some cloth in order to prepare the robe out of that cloth, but not with an idea to returning to the Vihāra. Later his hopes are not fulfilled as he does not get the cloth which he needs (Āsāvacchedikā). (7) When a monk goes away from the Vihārasīmā and makes the robe, but somehow or other he does not return and the period of one day passes away. He then loses the Kāṭhina 'privileges' (Sīmātikantikā). (8) When a monk goes away from the Vihārasīmā and makes the robe there with a view to returning; but later he decides to forego his Kāṭhina 'privileges' in favour of another monk of his Vihāra. The monks there also agree to this proposal. And then the Kāṭhina 'privileges' are deemed as 'lost' (Sahubhara). (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-315; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180).

Kāṭhina-Attharaṇa

When a Kāṭhina robe or cloth is offered ceremonially to a selected monk by the Saṅgha, the selected monk is required to make one of the three cīvaras (Uttarāsaṅga, Saṅghāṭī or Antaravāsaka which he needs most) from the cloth received by him; and then has to utter thus: “Īmāya saṅghāṭiyā (or Iminā uttarāsaṅgena or antaravāsakena) kāṭhinaṃ attharāmi”; i. e. “By this Saṅghāṭī (or Uttarāsaṅga or Antaravāsaka) I ‘spread’ it as Kāṭhina”. This is known as Kāṭhina-attharaṇa. It is some sort of acceptance by the monk and to treat the cloth as ceremonially received. After this the monk informs another Bhikkhu that he has ‘spread’ the Kāṭhina ritually. He beseeches the Saṅgha also for its ‘approval’ (anumodana). All the monks thereupon ‘approve’ it. (Pari. pp. 311-312; Cf. SP., Vol. III, pp. 1174-1175).

Kāṭhina-Uddhāra

‘Forfeiture’ or ‘withdrawal’ of all the ‘privileges’ (ānisaṃsā) that a monk has got on account of Kāṭhina. There are eight such ‘occasions’ (mātikā) when the ‘forfeiture’ is effected. These are : (1) When one goes away from the Vihārasīmā with a view not to returning (Pakkamantikā). (2) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā and then decides to make the robe there but not to return (Niṭṭhānantikā). (3) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā and then he decides there neither to make the robe nor to return to the Vihāra (Sannitṭhānantikā). (4) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā and then decides to make the robe but not to return. He prepares the robe out of the Kāṭhinadussa. This robe prepared by him is thus regarded as ‘lost’ by itself (Nāsanantikā). (5) A monk goes away with a view to returning and prepares the robe but comes to know that the Kāṭhina conferred upon him has been withdrawn by the Saṅgha (Sāvanantikā). (6) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā in search of some more cloth; and there he hopes to get some. He then makes up his mind to prepare the robe there but not to return. But his hopes are not fulfilled and he gets himself frustrated. He then ‘loses’ his ‘privileges’ (Āsāvaśchedikā). (7) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā and there he makes the robe but somehow or other he does not return and the ‘period of Cīvara’ (Cīvarakālasīmā i. e. of one day) passes away. He then ‘loses’ the ‘privileges’ (Sīmātikkantikā). (8) When a Bhikkhu goes away from the Vihārasīmā and makes the robe there with a view to returning. Later he makes up his mind to forego his Kāṭhina in favour of another monk. Other monks there also agree to his proposal (Sahubbhāra). (Mv. pp. 313-315; Cf. SP. (M) Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180).

Sometimes the 'forfeiture' of the Kāṭhina is done by the Saṅgha itself in order to make an equal distribution of the Cīvara amongst all the members of Saṅgha. This is known as Antarā Ubbhāra. For this purpose a Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the Saṅgha. (Pāc. pp. 391-392, Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 643). If any Bhikkhunī obstructs it, she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 30; Pāc. p. 392).

Kāṭhina-Ubbhāra

Kāṭhinadussa or Kāṭhinacīvara

The cloth supplied to the Saṅgha at the end of the first Vassāvāsa for the purpose of the Kāṭhina ceremony. (Mv. pp. 266-267). It may be supplied by any person, a layman, a monk, a Sāmaṇera, a Sāmaṇerī or a Sikkhamānā. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1173). This cloth is ceremonially offered by the Saṅgha to a Bhikkhu who is poor in robes and has lived most righteously during the Vassāvāsa. The cloth must be stitched dyed and made as one of the three cīvaras, viz the Saṅghāṭī, Uttarāsaṅga or Antaravāsaka (which he needs most) on the same day. The offering of the cloth is done by the Saṅgha by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma on the same day when it is received by the Saṅgha. (Mv. p. 267; SP. Vol. III, p. 1173). For getting this cloth no indication (animittakatena) nor any inducement (aparīkathākatena) should be expressed. It should not serve a temporary purpose for the performance of the Kāṭhina (akukkukatena) only. (Mv. p. 267; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1177).

Kāṭhina-Palibodha

There are two 'compulsions' (palibodhā) with regard to the person getting Kāṭhina. The first is that the Bhikkhu must return to his Vihāra (āvāsa) if he happens to go out of his Vihārasīmā; and the second is that he must prepare the robe on the same day from the cloth that he has received as Kāṭhinadussa. The former is known as Āvāsa-palibodha and the latter as Cīvara-palibodha. (Mv. p. 282).

Kāṭhinamaṇḍapa

Same as Kāṭhinasālā. (Cv. p. 206).

Kāṭhinarajju

The strings fixed in the 'wooden-frame' (Kāṭhina) in order to tie the cloth when stitching. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Yāya dupaṭṭacīvaram sabbantā kāṭhina cīvarampi bandhanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Kaṭṭhinasālā

The room or the building where the stitching of the robes is done, particularly on the Kaṭṭhina (wooden-frame); and also where the Kaṭṭhinas are stored. (Cv. p. 206). It is also called Kaṭṭhinamaṇḍapa (Ibid.).

It should not be regarded as a building meant for the purpose of the Kaṭṭhina ceremony.

Kaṇṭhasuttaka

A kind of necklace, etc. (Yaṃ kiñci gīvūpaga ābharaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1282). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Kaṇḍaracchinna

A person whose tendons of feet are mutilated. (Yassa kaṇḍaranāmakā mahānahārū purato vā pacchato vā chinnā honti, ekassāpi chinnatta aggapādena vā caṅkamati, mūlena vā caṅkamati, na vā pādaṃ patitṭhāpetuṃ sakkoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1081). Such a person should not be ordained. If any person ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95). If such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Kaṇḍupaṭicchādi

Literally an 'itch-cloth'. It is one of the nine kinds of Cīvaras allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 311). This cloth is allowed when a monk is suffering from itches or other cutaneous diseases. It is used as an under-wear in order to keep the antaravāsaka (sarong) free from being soiled by the wound. Its prescribed size is 4 Sugata-spans in length and 2 Sugata-spans in breadth. (Pāc. pp. 227-28; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 914; Kv. (M), p. 271). If the size of the 'itch-cloth' is more than the prescribed size, it must be cut to the normal size before use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 90; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 105; Pāc. p. 228; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52).

Kaṇḍūsaka

Marking on the cloth to have clean stitching or darning. (Kaṇḍūsakaṃ vuccati muddikā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1197). The Buddha asked the monks to do so wherever necessary. (Mv. p. 306).

Kaṇṇacchinna

A person whose ear or ears are cut. (Yassa kaṇṇomūle vā kaṇṇasakkhalikā vā dve kaṇṇā chinnā honti. Yassa pana kaṇṇavidhe chijjanti sakkā ca hoti saṅghātetuṃ so kaṇṇaṃ saṅghātetvā pabbājetabbo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1080). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Kaṇṇanāsacchinna

A person whose ear and nose are cut. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 94-95). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 45; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086.)

Kaṇṇamalaharaṇī

An instrument to remove the wax or dirt from the ear. Its use was allowed by the Buddha. But it must not be made of costly materials like gold, silver etc.; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. It may be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit (nut), iron or conch shell. (Cv. p. 225).

Kaṇṇasuttaka

The strings fastened with the corners of the robe in order to spread it after dyeing were known as Kaṇṇasuttaka. (Mv. p. 303).

Kataka

A kind of scrubber designed like the pericarp of lotus. This was used for scrubbing the feet. The Buddha did not allow the monks to use it. If anyone used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 219; Cf. Katakam nāma padumakaṇṇikākāraṃ pādaghamaṣanattam kaṇṭake utthāpetvā kataṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1252). A Bhikkhu may, however, use other kinds of scrubbers for feet (Pādaghamaṣanī), such as stone chip (sakkhara), potsherd (kathala) and sea-foam (samuddapheṇakam). (Cv. p. 219).

Kadalīmīgāpavarapaccattharaṇa

A kind of bed-spreading made from the hide of the Kadalīmīga (a kind of deer), usually stitched with the white bed-cover. (Taṃ kira setavatthassa upari kadalīmīgacammaṃ pattharivā sibbitvā karonti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1150). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana; and hence not allowed for the use of the monks by the Buddha. If any monk uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting but never for sleeping even if it belongs to a layman. (Cv. p. 258). It may be used as a Bhummattharaṇa (a spreading on the ground) in the Vihāra. (Ibid. p. 265).

Kapisīsa

A cavity in the door-post for receiving the bolt. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks living in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241; Cf. Aggalathambho.—Abhidhānappadīpikā, Gāthā No. 217).

Kappiyakāraka

A lay-devotee who makes the things 'formally acceptable' to the monks. (Mv. p. 224; 230).

Kappiyabhūmi or Kappiyabhūmikuṭī

A room or building where the monks can store their food articles or medicines. No article other than food stuffs should be kept there, nor should this place be used for any other purpose. The Kappiyabhūmi may be a Vihāra, an Adḍhayoga, a Pāsāda, a Hammiya or a cave. The Kappiyabhūmi is of four kinds, viz. (i) Ussāvanantikā, i.e. a building altogether newly constructed for this very purpose; (ii) Gonisādikā, i.e. a building without any fence or protection and hence accessible to the cattle; (iii) Gahapatikā, i.e. a building offered by a lay-devotee for storing food articles; (iv) Sammuti, i.e. any building declared by the Saṅgha as the Kappiyabhūmi by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Mv. pp. 253-254; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1162-1166).

Kabalikā

A kind of medicinal paste of Sattu to apply on the wound. (Vaṇamukhe sattupiṇḍaṃ pakkhipitum.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155; Cf. Upanāhabhesajjaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 186). This was approved by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Kambala

Woollen material or blanket. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. pp. 55, 100, 298; Cf. Eḷakalomasuttaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 735). It is one of the six kinds of Cīvara-materials allowed for the use of the monks. Besides this, others are : Khomam, Kappāsikam, Koseyyam, Sāṇam and Bhaṇṇam. (Mv. pp. 55, 100, 298).

Kamma

An 'act' in the ecclesiastical sense, particularly when the disciplinary measures are taken by the Saṅgha. To hold an ecclesiastical 'act' a formal function is held by the whole Saṅgha. A 'motion' is put before the assembly of the monks by a formal announcement which is called Ñatti. After this formal announcement of the Ñatti, the Bhikkhus are requested to give their verdict as to whether they approve it or not. When it is moved once, it is known as Ñattidutiyakamma; and when moved for three times, it is called Ñatticatutthakamma. (Mv. pp. 53-54).

It is necessary that the Saṅgha should be formally informed that the 'act' is being performed. This information is known as Apalokanakamma. Thus there are four kinds of Kammas; viz. Ñatti, Ñattidutiyakamma, Ñatticatutthakamma and Apalokanakamma. (Pāc. p. 204; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 255-259).

The Mahāvagga and the Cullavagga mention many other kinds of Kammas. The important 'acts' are : Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Pabbājanīya, Paṭisāraṇīya, Ukkhepanīya, Upasampadā, Uposatha, Pavāraṇā, etc. (Mv. pp. 53, 54, 105, 165, 246ff.; Cv. pp. 1-190). Since these Kammas are held more or less in a similar procedure (as mentioned above), they may be grouped in one, or in four main Kammas mentioned above. (Kv. (M), p. 255).

It is mentioned that the Kamma must be performed according to the rules (Dhamma-kamma) and that also by the Saṅgha all in 'concord' (samagga). And so any kamma performed against the rules (adhamma-kamma) or not approved by the whole Saṅgha (or approved only by a group of the Saṅgha—Vagga) should be regarded as illegal. Thus the Kammas may be distributed into four categories: (i) A Kamma which is against the rules and also approved only by a 'group' of the Saṅgha (Adhammena vaggakammaṃ). (ii) A Kamma approved by the whole Saṅgha but performed against the rules (Adhammena samaggakammaṃ). (iii) A Kamma performed according to the rules but by the 'group' of the Saṅgha (Dhammena vaggakammaṃ). (iv) A Kamma performed according to the rules by the whole Saṅgha (Dhammena samaggakammaṃ). The first three kammas are naturally 'unjust' (Kuppaṃ atthānārahaṃ) and, therefore, should not be held; while the last one alone is proper and just (Akuppaṃ thānārahaṃ). (Mv. p. 331). A kamma, which appears only as 'just' but actually it is not proper, should not be performed either by the whole or the 'group' of the Saṅgha. (Dhammapaṭirūpakena vaggakammaṃ vā samaggakammaṃ vā.—Ibid. p. 332). This may be applicable to any of the above mentioned four Kammas. (Cf. Pari. pp. 386-390).

Karakatāka

A kind of hand-wheel to draw water from the well; or a pulley to draw up water by a bucket. It was approved by the Buddha for the monks. It is known as 'Puravata' in Hindi in U. P.). (Cv. p. 212; Cf. Gone vā yojetvā hatthehi vā gahetvā dīghavattādīhi ākaḍḍhanayantaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290; Ākaḍḍhanayantaṃ ākaḍḍhiyamānaṃ kūpassa uparibhāge paribhamati.—Vajirabuddhiṭikā, (M), p. 524).

Kalābuka

A kind of belt with many strings. (Bahurajjukam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If anyone used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 226).

Kaḷimbhaka or Kaḷimbaka

A mark or sign to keep the inter-stitches even. For this purpose a palm leaf or anything like that may be used. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Pamāṇasaññākaraṇaṃ yaṃ kiñci tālapaṇṇādiṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Kavāṭa

A door. In the beginning the Vihāras had no provision for doors or door-panels. The Buddha then allowed the monks to have the Kavāṭas in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Kasāvodaka

The medicinal water to wash wounds. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Kasāva-Bhesajja

An astringent prepared out of the bark of a tree or plant or creeper, like Nimba, Kuṭaja, Paṭola, Paggava, Nattamāla or any such plant or tree or creeper which is not used as food by the people. This is allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 220). The monks can keep it for the whole life; but can use it only when sick. If they use it when they are not sick, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid.).

Kasāhata

A person who has been flogged. He is not eligible for ordination; and if one ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 79; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1049-1050).

Kākuḍḍepaka

A boy clever enough 'to scare away' the crow while taking his meals. (Yo vāmahaṭṭhena leḍḍum gahetvā nisinno sakkoti āgatāgate kāke udḍāpetvā purato nikkhittaṃ bhattaṃ bhuñjitum, ayaṃ kākuḍḍepako nāma.—SP. Vol. III, 1055). The simple meaning is that the boy is old enough to manage his things by himself. The Buddha has laid down that a boy who is less than fifteen years of age, but can 'scare away' the crows, may be ordained as Sāmaṇera. (Mv. p. 82).

Kāṇa

A one-eyed person. Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person has got his ordination, this should not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1085).

Kāyūra or Keyūra

An ornamental bracket or ring to be worn on the upper arm. Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If anyone used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Kāyabandhana

A girdle or a waistband or a belt for fastening the Antaravāsaka (the lower garment, the sarong). A monk is not allowed to go round a village or town without it. If one goes without putting on it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 226).

The Kāyabandhana may be a simple strap (Paṭṭikā) or one like the pig's tail (Sūkarantaka). (Paṭṭikaṃ sūkarantakanti ettha pakativīṭa vā macchakaṇṭakavāyima vā paṭṭikā vaṭṭati. Sūkarantakaṃ nāma kuñcikaṅkosakasaṇṭhānaṃ hoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). A Vidhā or buckle made of some cheap material like bone, iron, conch-shell, tin etc. (not of gold or silver) is fixed at its one end. (Cv. p. 226). The Kāyabandhana should not be made of many strings (Kalābukaṃ), nor should be made like a water snake (Deḍḍubhakaṃ), nor should be like the strings of the drum (Murajaṃ), nor should be like a Maddaviṇā. (Ibid. p. 226). If one uses a Kāyabandhana of such types, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid; Cf. Ekarajjukaṃ pana muddikakāyabandhanaṃ ca sūkarantakaṃ anulomenti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294).

The Bhikkhunīs are not allowed to use long belt, nor are they allowed to use it very tightly so as to make their waist slim. They should use only that kind of belt which goes once round the waist (Eka-pariyākata); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Cv. p. 386).

Kārabhedakacora

A thief who has run away from jail, an absconder. Such a person is not eligible for ordination. If anyone ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 78-79; Cf. Kāro vuccati bandhanāgāraṃ. Idha pana andubandhanaṃ vā hoti, saṅkhalikābandhanaṃ. vā, rajjubandhanaṃ vā, gāmabandhanaṃ vā, nigamabandhanaṃ vā, nagarabandhanaṃ vā, purisaguttiṃ vā, janapadabandhanaṃ vā, dīpabandhanaṃ vā. Yo etesu yaṃ kiñci bandhanaṃ bhinditvā vā, chinditvā vā, muñcivitvā vā, vivaritvā, apassamānaṃ vā palāyati so kārabhedako ti saṅkhyāṃ gacchati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1049).

Kālacivara

A robe or robe-cloth (civara) received during the Civarakāla. The Civarakāla is ordinarily of one month after the Pavāraṇā; but for those who have received the Kāthina-civara, the period lasts for five months from Kattika to Phagguna. The Kālacivara belongs to the Saṅgha and so it should be distributed amongst those monks who have observed the first Vassāvāsa and the Pavāraṇā together. (Cf. Pac. p. 333; Pārā. p. 297; Kv. (M), p. 308).

Kāsāya or Kāsāva

A piece of cloth which is dyed with Kasāva or Kasāya; i. e. in yellow-reddish colour. (Kasāvena rattam kāsāvam.—Pāli Mahāvyaṅgarāṇa (Hindi) by Bhikkhu J. Kashyap, p. 251). In fact, the cloth dyed in yellow-reddish colour was used by the mendicants of almost all the sects of ancient India. The Buddha also adopted the same with some modifications.

Kāsāya usually means the cloth (vattha) or the robe of the monks. It occurs thus : Kāsāyāni vatthāni acchādetvā, i.e. 'Having put on the yellow robe'. (Mv. p. 24, etc.).

A novice is required to put on Kāsāyāni vatthāni (i. e. yellow robes) before he is presented to the Saṅgha for his ordination. (Ibid. p. 24) Sometimes Kāsāva (not Kāsāya) also means the robe of monk; for instance, Kāsāvakaṇṭho. (Pārā. p. 113).

Kiccādhikaraṇa

The 'legal question' which arises out of 'ecclesiastical obligation'. The question may be related to any 'formal act' (Kicca or Karaṇīya) of the Saṅgha. It may be a 'formal act' with regard to 'seeking leave' or 'sanction' (Apalokanakkamma), or to Ñattikamma (motion) or Ñattidutiya kamma or Ñatticatutthakamma (resolution). (Cv. p. 161; Pari. p. 270).

This legal question may be settled (samatha) by the 'verdict in presence' (Sammukhavinaya). (Cv. p. 192; Pari. p. 196).

Kiṇṇa

A kind of spirit or lubricant used as rust-resistance to protect the needles from rust. The Buddha prescribed this for the monks. (Cv. p. 204; Surākiṇṇa-cuṇṇena pūretum.—Vimativinodanītikā (M), Vol. II, p. 232).

Kiriyato Samuṭṭhitā Āpatti

An offence which is effected at once by doing something against the ecclesiastical rules. For instance, Pārājikā. (Pari. p. 211; Cf. Yaṃ karonto āpajjati, pārājikā āpatti viya.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419).

Kiriyākiriyato Samuṭṭhitā Āpatti

An offence which is effected by doing something against an ecclesiastical rule and also at the same time by not observing which has to be followed. For instance, construction of a Kuṭi bigger than the approved size and also without obtaining the 'formal approval' of the Saṅgha, the Vatthudesanā. (Pari. p. 211; Cf. Yaṃ karonto ca akoronto ca āpajjati kuṭīkārapatti viya.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419).

Kukkusa

The red powder of the rice husk. (Kuṇḍakañceva mattikañca.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1388; In Hindi it is called Kuṇḍā). The Bhikkhunis were permitted to use it while taking bath in place of Cuṇṇa. (The Cuṇṇa was prescribed only for the monks). (Cv. p. 401).

Kuṭī

A hut, for the residence of the monks; a dwelling place. If a Bhikkhu intends to build a Kuṭī by himself, its size should not be more than twelve Sugata-spans in length and seven in breadth; otherwise an offence of Saṅghādisesā is committed. (Rule No. 6; Para. p. 220). Before constructing a Kuṭī the desirous monk should approach the Saṅgha for the 'examination of the site' (vatthu-olokana) as to whether the site is 'suitable' and 'sufficient' or not (Anārambha & Saparikkamana). After this examination if the Saṅgha finds the site 'suitable' and 'sufficient', the formal 'approval' may be given for the construction of the Kuṭī by holding a Ñattidutiya-kamma (vatthu-desanā). (Ibid. pp. 221-222). In case the desirous monk does not invite the Saṅgha for this 'examination' of the site and does not obtain the 'formal approval' from the Saṅgha, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. pp. 222-223).

The Kuṭī may be plastered from inside or from outside or even from both the sides. (Ullittā vā avalittā vā ullittā-valittā vā.—Ibid. p. 223).

Kuṭhārī

An axe. It is one of the articles of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268).

Kuṇī

A person with deformed or crooked physical features. (Kuṇī ti, hatthakuṇī vā pādakuṇī vā aṅgulikuṇī vā. Yassa etesu hatthādisu yaṃ kiñci vaṅkaṃ paññāyati so kuṇī nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1085). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95). In case he somehow or other happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Kuttaka

A large woollen spreading. (Soḷasannaṃ nāṭakitthinaṃ ṭhatvā naccanayoggaṃ unṇamayattharaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1147). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and hence not allowed for the use of the monks; and if anybody uses it, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It may be used for sitting only even if it belongs to a layman but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Kudāla or Kuddāla

A hoe. It is one of the articles of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' (avissajīya) nor can it be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268).

Kumbhakārika—Kuṭikā

A house made of earth and then burnt like an earthen pot. It was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks to live in. (Cv. p. 233). If one makes such a house and lives therein, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Pārā. p. 52; Cf. Sabbamattikāmayakuṭi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1297).

Kuruvindakasutti

A string of beads made of Kuruvindaka powder (a kind of vermilion stone) solidified with lac. This was used as a scrubber when taking bath. (Kuruvindaka-pāsāṇacuṇṇāni lākhāya bandhitvā katagulikakalāpako vuccati. Taṃ ubhosu antesu gahetvā sarīraṃ ghaṃsanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 194).

Kulaṅka-Pādaka

The buttresses of a timber used as a support to the wall. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 246; Cf. Rukkham vijjhitvā tattha khāṇuke ākoṭetvā kataṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303).

Kuladūsaka

A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī who damages the 'faith' of a lay-devotee. (Pārā. pp. 274-275). See KULADŪSANĀ.

Kuladūsanā

Damaging or destroying the 'faith' of the lay-devotees. It is mentioned that the 'faith' of a lay-devotee may be damaged or destroyed on account of the unrighteous and undignified acts of a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī; such as, a Bhikkhu offers flowers, fruits, powder (cuṇṇa) or clay (mattikā) for bath, tooth-stick (dantakaṭṭha), bamboo (veḷu) to a lay-devotee; or acts as a physician (vejjakamma); or conveys message on foot (jaṅghāpesanikā). (Kuladūsakoti kulāni dūseti pupphena vā phalena vā mattikāya vā dantakaṭṭhena vā veḷuyā vā vejjikāya vā jaṅghāpesanikena vā.—Pārā. pp. 274-75; Cf. SP. Vol. II, 630; Kv. (M), p. 143; Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M) Vol. I, p. 299). If a monk or nun indulges in such an act, he or she is liable to commit an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 13; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 17; Pm. (B), pp. 4 & 33).

Kuḷirapādaka-Piṭha

A kind of chair or stool or bench whose legs are carved like the feet of an animal, such as horse, ram or crab. (Assameṇḍakādīnaṃ pādasadisehi pādehi kato. Yo vā pana koci vaṅkapādako ayaṃ vuccati kuḷirapādako.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790; Cf. Kakkatassa pādo viya pādo yassāti kuḷirapādako. Yathā kuḷiro vaṅkapādo evaṃ ti vuttaṃ hoti.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354).

This kind of chair was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Pāc. p. 223; Cf. Cv. p. 242). See also PĪṬHA.

Kuḷirapādaka-Mañca

A kind of bed or couch whose legs are carved or curved. Literally it is a crab-footer bed; i.e. a bed-stead with legs representing the foot of an animal, such as horse, ram, etc. or curved like a crab. (Assameṇḍakādīnaṃ pādasadisehi pādehi kato. Yo vā pana koci vaṅkapādako ayaṃ vuccati kuḷirapādako.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790; Cf. Kakkatākassa pādo viya pādo yassāti kuḷirapādako.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354).

It is one of the four kinds of the Mañcas allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Pāc. p. 223; Cv. p. 242). See MAÑCA.

Kulūpaka

A Bhikkhu who is frequent visitor to his favourite homes, particularly for alms, is known as a Kulūpaka. (Mv. p. 226; Pāc. pp. 34, 239).

Kulūpikā

A Bhikkhunī who is frequent visitor to her favourite homes, particularly for alms, is known as Kulūpikā. (Cv. p. 338; Pāc. p. 371).

Kusacīra

A robe made of Kusa grass. It was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. It was indeed used by other religionists, hence it is called Titthiyadhaja. (Mv. p. 320).

Kusapāta

‘Dropping of the Kusa grass’ to decide the lot of the Cīvara etc. so that judicious distribution may be made amongst the monks. This is so done to make a hazardous share. This procedure is necessary when the number of the articles is less than the number of the monks; or the articles are not of equal value. (Mv. p. 302).

Kusi

The first cross seam (from corner to corner—lengthwise or breadthwise) of the Bhikkhu's robe, stitched on the Bāhanta, is known as Kusi. (Mv. p. 304 Cf. Kusīti āyāmato ca vitthārato ca anuvātādīnaṃ dīghapattānametaṃ adhivacanaṃ.—SP. Vol III, p. 1195).

The intermediary seams are also sometimes called Kusi. (Cf. Anuvātādīnaṃ dīghapattānaṃ ti—Āyāmato vitthārato ca anuvāto. Ādisaddena dvinnaṃ khandhānaṃ antara mātikākārena t̥hapitapattaṃ ca dīghapattaṃ ti daṭṭhabbaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 198).

Kesakambala

Blanket made of human hair. The Buddha prohibited the monks from using it. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. It was, of course, used by the other mendicants during the time of the Buddha; and hence it was called 'Titthiyadhaja'. (Mv. p. 320). For instance, Ajitakesakambalī. He is mentioned in the Sāmaññaphalasutta of the Dīgha Nikāya.

Koccha (I)

A kind of stool or seat made of bark or grass. Its shape appears like a drum. (Cf. Kocchaṃ pana vākaūsīramuñjababbajādīnaṃ aññataramayaṃ anto samvellitvā baddhaṃ heṭṭhā ca upari ca vitthataṃ paṇavasatthānaṃ majjhe sīhacammādi-parikkhittaṃ hoti.—Kv. (M) p. 201; Also Cf. Pāc. p. 63). It is probably called Moṛhā in Hindi.

The Koccha belonging to the Saṅgha must be properly kept after its use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 14; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 110; Pāc. p. 62; Pm. (B), pp. 14 & 46).

Koccha (II)

A brush or comb made of tough grass for arranging hair. It is called Kūncī in Hindi. (Cf. Usīraṭiṇādīni bandhitvā samaṃ chinditvā gahitakocchena.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 228). The Buddha prohibited its use. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Kojavaṃ

A rug or cover with long hair. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Mv. p. 298; Cf SP. Vol. III, p. 1187). Another kind of Kojava known as Mahāpiṭṭhakojava (i. e. a large and de-luxe type of Kojeva) was not allowed for the use of the monks. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1087).

Koṭṭhaka (I)

A gateway with some structure overhead. (Cf. Koṭṭhako ti dvārakoṭṭhako. SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). A Koṭṭhaka is to be provided, when a Pākāra (boundary wall) is constructed in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 247).

The Koṭṭhaka may be a large gateway with some structure overhead. Anāthapiṇḍika constructed such a gateway in the Jetavanārāma which was of seven storeys. (Cf. Koṭṭhakam māpesīti sattabhūmikam dvārakoṭṭhakapāsādam māpesi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1304 Cf. Cv. p. 253).

Koṭṭhaka (II)

A store-room in the Vihāra. (Mv. pp. 46, 60; Cv. pp. 324, 339, 344). It was the duty of the Saddhivihārika or the Antevāsika (disciple or pupil) to keep the store-room neat and tidy. (Ibid.).

Koseyya (I)

A kind of silken bed-spreading embroidered with golden thread. (Cf. Ratanaparivesitam kōsiyasuttamayam paccattharaṇam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149; Ratanaparivesitam ti suvaṇṇalittam.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M) Vol. II, p. 184). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana; and hence the monks were not allowed to use it. If anybody used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting but never for sleeping even if it belonged to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Koseyya (II)

A silken cloth. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. It is one of the six kinds of cloth-materials for robe. The others are: Khomam, Kappāsikam, Kambalam, Sāṇam and Bhaṅgam. (Mv. pp 55, 100, 298; Cf. Kosiyamsūhi kantitvā katasuttam.—SP. Vol. II, p. 735).

Koseyyapavara

A kind of silken mantle. Its use was allowed by the Buddha. (Mv. p. 298).

Kha

Khajja

Khajja-Bhājaka [—Bhikkhu]

A Bhikkhu made in charge of the distribution of the eatables (other than meal) amongst the fellow-monks. Such a monk is selected by the Saigha for the purpose by holding a Ñattidutiya-kamma. (Cv. pp. 273-274).

Khañja

A lame person. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1085). In case he has already got the ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Khandharajana

The dye prepared out of the trunk of a tree. It is one of the six kinds of dyes prescribed for the Bhikkhu's robe. The other kinds of dyes allowed are those prepared out of the root, bark, leaves, flowers and fruits of a tree. (Mv. p. 302). In the SP. [Vol. III, p. 1194], however, the trunk of Mañjittā or Tuṅgaḥāra is not allowed as the dye for the robes of the monks.

Khamāpanā

Exculpation or granting pardon. If a 'dismissed' Saddhivihārika or Antevāsika begs pardon for his misbehaviour before his Upajjhāya or Ācariya (respectively), he is then pardoned and taken back. This is known as Khamāpanā. An upright Saddhivihārika or Antevāsika must be granted Khamāpanā; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. pp. 51-52; 65-67). See PANĀMANĀ.

Khambhakata

Standing or sitting with prop, by putting the hand on the waist. (Kaṭṭiyam hattham ṭhapetvā katakhambho.—SP. Vol. II, p. 924, Cf. Ko. (M), p. 280). A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī should not enter a village or a house or sit there in this manner; otherwise an offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Bhikkhu-Sekhiyā Rule No. 21; Bhikkhunī-Sekhiyā Rule No. 22; Pāc. pp. 253-254; Pm. (B), pp. 22 & 53).

Khādaniya

All kinds of eatables other than (i) five kinds of Bhojanas (The Bhojanas are : Odana, Sattu, Kummāsa, Maccha, Mamsa); (ii) all kinds of Yāmakālika (i.e. eight kinds of drinks of Madhu, Muddikā, Sālūka, Coca, Moca, Amba, Jambu and Phārusaka); (iii) all kinds of Sattāhakālika (i.e. such eatables which are allowed by the Buddha to be kept for a week; viz. Sappi, Navanīta, Tela, Madhu and Phāṇita); (iv) all kinds of Yāvajīvika (i.e. all kinds of medicines necessary for life). (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 129, 234, 240, 243, 435).

Twelve varieties of Khādaniyas are mentioned in the Atṭhakathā. These are : Mūla-khādaniya (food from root), Kanda-khādaniya (tuberous root-food), Mulāla-khādaniya (root-food like lotus root etc.), Matthaka-khādaniya (food from the top of a tree, such as Tūla, Nārikela, Khajjūrā, Kadalī etc.), Khandha-khādanīya (stem-food; e. g. sugarcane), Taca-khādanīya (food from bark), Patta-Khādanīya (i. e. food prepared out of leaves), Puppha-khādanīya (flower-food), Phala-khādanīya (fruit-food), Aṭṭhi-khādanīya (food from the nuts of the fruits), Piṭṭha-khādanīya (a pastry. In Hindi it is called Khājā), Niyyāsa-khādanīya (food from exudation of plants). (SP. Vol. II, p. 853).

A Bhikkhu is sometimes selected by the Saṅgha for the distribution of the Khādanīya amongst the monks. Such a monk is known as Khajjabhājaka-Bhikkhu. (Cv. p. 273).

Khiyyanaka

An indirect sarcastic remark or a statement made in order to lower down a monk in the estimation of others is known as Khiyyanaka. (Bhikkhum lāmakato cintāpanattham aññesaṃ taṃ avaṇṇakathanam ujjhāpanam nāma. Aññesaṃ pana avatvā aññamaaññaṃ samullapanavasena bhikkhuno dosappakāsanam khiyyanam nāmāti ayametesam bhedo.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 13). If a monk (or nun) makes such a statement against another monk (or nun) in order to defame him (or her) or make him (or her) unhappy, he (or she) is liable to commit the offence of Pācittiya. (Ujjhāpanake khiyyanake pācittiyaṃ.—Bhikkhu Rule No. 13; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 109; Pāc. pp. 60-61; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 46).

Khujja

A hunchback or a person with crooked physical features. (Yo urassa vā piṭṭhiyā vā passassa vā nikkhantattā khujjasarīro.—SP. (M), Vol. III, p. 1081). Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95).

In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this should not be cancelled, but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Khurasilā

A whetstone. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it for sharpening their razors. (Cv. p. 224).

Khurasipāṭikā

A kind of razor-case allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 224; Cf. Khurasipāṭikaṃti khurakosakam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1192. Also see SARITAKASIPĀṬIKĀ).

Khelamallaka

A spittoon. This was allowed by the Buddha so that floor and wall may not be soiled by spitting. (Cv. p, 272).

Khomam

A kind of cloth made out of the bark of a plant, the flex, linen. It was also allowed as a cloth for the robes of the monks; the others are Kappāsikaṃ, Koseyyaṃ, Kambalaṃ, Sāṇaṃ, Bhaṅgaṃ. (Mv. pp. 55,100,298; Cf. Khomaṇ ti khomavākehi kata-suttaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 735).

GaGaṇa (I)

A 'group' of monks consisting of two, three, or four monks is known as Gaṇa in the matter of Pavāraṇā. (It is not a Saṅgha as the Saṅgha consists at least of five monks). (Mv. p. 171; Pari. p. 222). But in some other cases for instance, in the case of Uposatha, the number of monks to form a Saṅgha should be four; and then the Gaṇa (or 'group') would consist of two or three monks. (Mv. p. 125).

Gaṇa (II)

A republic state or a confederation of republic or a religious estate. (Cf. Mallagaṇā bhaṭṭiputtagaṇādikaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 946; Also Cf. Mallarājūnaṃ gaṇo Mallagaṇo, bhaṭṭiputtā nāma keci gaṇarājāno tesam gaṇo.—Vimativinodanīṭikā, (M), Vol. II, p. 72; also Cf. Nārāyanabhaṭṭiko puñṇakāragāṇo. Tathā kumārabhaṭṭiko ca gaṇo bhaṭṭiputtagaṇo.—Sāratthadīpanī (M), Vol. III, p. 117).

If a lady comes for her ordination and the Bhikkhunis find her a to be thief, this fact then must be reported to the Gaṇa (if there prevails the Gaṇa form of government). If a nun ordains her without informing this fact to the Gaṇa, she is liable to commit the offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Rule No. 2; Pāc. p. 302; Pm. (B), p. 29).

Gaṇa (III)

Sometimes the Bhikkhuni Saṅgha is also called Gaṇa. (Cf. Pāc. pp.387,424).

Gaṇa-Uposatha

An Uposatha ceremony performed by two or three monks (i.e. by a Gaṇa) is known as Gaṇa-uposatha. In the Gaṇa-uposatha the Pātimokkha is not recited; but the Bhikkhus declare their Pārisuddhi ('purity') among themselves. Hence this is also called Pārisuddhi-uposatha.^{*} (Mv. pp. 125-126; Pari. p. 222; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93).

See UPOSATHA also.

Gaṇa-Pavāraṇā

A Pavāraṇā performed by a 'group' of monks consisting of two or three or four monks, i.e. by a Gaṇa, not by the Saṅgha. The Saṅgha consists of at least five monks. (Mv. pp. 171-173; Pari. p. 222).

Gaṇabhojana

Accepting or taking the Bhojana (i.e. meals of any five kinds, viz. Odana, Kummāsa, Sattu, Maccha and Maṇṣa) by a 'group' of monks of two or three or four by self-asking, or by pointing out the name of a particular kind of food, or by getting an invitation of one of the five kinds of the Bhojanas prepared by the donor taking into consideration the likings of these monks. (Cf. Cattāro bhikkhū upasaṅkamitvā, 'tumhe bhante odanena nimantemi. Odanaṃ me gaṇhatha, ākoṅkatho, oloketha, adhiṇāsetha, paṭimānethāti' evaṃ yena kenaci vevacana-nena vā bhāsantarena vā pañcannaṃ bhojanānaṃ nāmaṃ gaṇetvā nimanteti. Evaṃ nimantitā parikkinnakālavasena ajjatanāya vā svātanāya vā ekato gacchanti, ekato gaṇhanti, ekato bhuñjanti gaṇabhojanaṃ hoti. Sabbesaṃ āpatti.—SP. Vol. II. pp. 831-838; Also Pāc. pp. 103-106; Kv. (M) p. 216).

The Gaṇabhojana is not allowed by the Buddha for the monks except on the occasions like Ci'ānasamaya (i.e. when sick), Cīvaradānasamaya (when robe-season), Cīvarakārasamaya (when robes are being prepared), Addhānagamasamaya (when on long journey), Nāvābhiruḥhasamaya (when on voyage), Mahāsamaya (when the assembly of the monks is large but the food is meagre) and Samaṇabhattasamaya (when invited by any mendicant). If a monk accepts or takes Gaṇabhojana (on occasions other than the above), he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 32; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 118; Pāc. pp. 103-107; Pm. (B), pp. 13 & 47). It was disallowed in order to avoid any displeasure that may rise in the minds of the lay-devotees; or because such a meal might become cumbersome to them. (See : Nidāna of this rule in Pāc. p. 103 ff)

Gaṇṭhikā or Gaṇṭhī

A button to fasten the robe corner. It is desirable that the Bhikkhus must fasten their robes with the Gaṇṭhikā and the Pāsaka (the button-fastener). (Anujānāmi bhikkhave gaṇṭhikaṃ pāsakaṃ ti.—Cv. 226). The Gaṇṭhikā may be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, tin, fruit, iron, shell or thread; but it should not be made of any costly material like gold or silver; otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Ibid.).

The Gaṇṭhikā should be affixed to the Sanḅhāṭī and to the Uttarāsaṅga at their ends by stitching a piece of cloth. It is expected that when a Bhikkhu enters a village, he should tie the Gaṇṭhikā well with the Pāsaka, the button fastener. (Mv. p. 44; Cv. p. 226).

Gaṇṭhiphalaka

A layer of cloth to be stitched at one end of the Sanḅhāṭī or Uttarāsaṅga in order to stiffen the corner over which the Gaṇṭhī or button is fixed. (Cv. p. 227).

Gandhabbatthaka

A handshaped wooden scrubber used when taking bath. (Cf. Nahānatitthe ṭhopitena dārumayahatthena. Tena kira cuṇṇāni gahetvā manussā sarīraṃ ghaṃsanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). It was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 194).

Gamikavatta

Duties of a monk who is going away from the Vihāra on a long journey. The Buddha noticed that some monks left the Vihāra keeping all the articles untidy and unprotected. He, therefore, laid down certain rules which should be observed by all the monks before they leave the Vihāra. For instance, the monk should arrange all the furniture etc. and keep them at their proper places. He must inform the Bhikkhus living there about his departure. If no Bhikkhu is there, he should inform a Sāmaṇera; if there is no Sāmaṇera, then to an Ārāmika; if there is no Ārāmika then to an Upāsaka. In case there is none to inform, the articles there should be well arranged so that no damage may be caused. And if the condition of the Vihāra is not good and the roof leaks, it should be repaired, if possible. If the repair is not possible, the articles should be arranged at a place where rains may not soil or damage the articles. Even if such a corner in the building is not available, the articles may be kept at an open place by covering up with leaves or straws etc. In short, the out-going monk should make all such necessary arrangements so that no damage could be caused to the articles of the Vihāra. (For details see : Cv. pp. 315-316).

Garukā-Āpatti

The Pārājika and the Sanḅhadisesā are known as Garukā-āpatti. (Cv. pp. 170, 178, 186; Pari. p. 211). It is also known as Duṭṭhullāpatti. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1368). The offences other than these are known as Lahukāpatti or Aduṭṭhullāpatti, which are Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa and Dubbhāsita. (Ibid.).

Galagaṇḍi

A person having goitre. (Cf. Yass kumbhaṇḍaṃ viya gale gaṇḍo hoti desanāmatthaṃ eva cetāṃ. Yasmim̐ kismim̐ ci padese gaṇḍe santi na pabbājetabbo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1081).

Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains such a person, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Gahapati-kappiyabhūmi-Kuṭī

One of the four 'suitable places' (Kappiyabhūmi) to store the food articles allowed for the monks. The four 'suitable places' are : Ussāvanantikā, Gonisādikā, Gahapati and Sammuti. (Mv. p. 254). As this building is offered by a Gahapati (lay-devotee), it is known as Gahapati-kappiyabhūmi-kuṭī. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1163-1164).

See : KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Gāmantarakappa

To regard taking anātiritta (fresh or 'not left over') food as 'proper' by a pavārita monk (i. e. a satisfied monk) by going to another village. It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji-monks pleaded as 'proper'. But, however, in the Second Buddhist Council this matter was discussed and regarded as an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 35; Pāc. pp. 116-117); and hence not 'proper' for the monks. (Cv. p. 428).

Gāma-Sīmā

In case the Bhikkhus live in the vicinity of a village or a Nigama (townlet) or a town and the Sīmā (boundary) is not yet fixed, then the boundary of that village or Nigama or town may be regarded as the Sīmā (boundary) for all the purposes of the Saṅgha-kamma or Uposatha. (Asammataṭṭha, bhikkhave, sīmāya aṭṭhapitāya, yaṃ gāmaṃ vā nigamaṃ vā upanissāya viharatī yā tassa vā gāmassa gāmasīmā, nigamassa vā nigamasīmā ayaṃ tathā samānasaṃvāsā ekuposathā.—Mv. p. 113; Cf Kv. (M), p. 90; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1108-1109). It is also called Abaddha-sīmā for it requires no demarcation by 'signs' nor a Ñattidutiya-kamma is necessary for its fixation. (Ibid). See also SĪMĀ.

Giraggasamajjā

A fair held on the top of a hill or at the foot of a hill where people used to assemble and eat and drink and make merry by dancing, singing, playing and holding such other performances. (So kira 'sattame divase bhavissatī' ti nagare ghosanaṃ karīyati. Nagarassa bahiddhā same bhūmibhāge pabbatacchāyāya mahājanakāyo sannipatati. Anekappakārāni naṭanāṭakāni pavattanti. Tesam dassanattham mañcātimañce bandhanti...pūvakhādaniyādāṃ hatthe adamsu.—SP. Vol. II, p. 853). The Buddha prohibited the monks from attending such performances as dancing, singing etc.

If a Bhikkhu attended such performances, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa; and if a Bhikkhunī attended it, she committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhunī Pācittiya Rule No. 10; Cv. p. 196; Pāc. pp. 363-64; Pm. (B), p. 39).

Asoka has also denounced such Samāja in his edicts (Rock Edict I).

Gilānupaṭṭhāka (Bhikkhu)

A monk who attends upon a sick monk is known as Gilānupaṭṭhāka. The Buddha has exhorted the monks to attend upon a sick monk. If one does not attend upon the sick co-bhikkhu, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 317). A Gilānupaṭṭhāka Bhikkhu should possess the following five qualities : (1) He knows the dose of the medicine. (2) He knows the suitable and unsuitable things. (3) He attends upon the sick monk affectionately. (4) He does not loathe the excreta of the sick. (5) He is competent to preach and make discourses if necessary. (Ibid. p. 318). The Buddha has praised the nursing of the sick so much so that once he said to the monks, “O Monks! one who attends upon a sick, he indeed attends upon me”. (Yo, bhikkhave, gilānaṃ upaṭṭhaheyya so maṃ upaṭṭhaheyya.—Ibid. p. 317).

Gihinivattha

Mode of putting on the under garment like the laymen. This may be in Haṭṭhiṇḍaka, Macchavūḷaka, Catukaṇṇaka, Tāḷavaṇṭaka or Sattavalika styles. The monks were not allowed to adopt any of these styles. If one did so, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Ghipāruta

Mode of putting on upper garment like the laymen. The Buddha prohibited the monks from adopting the layman's style. If a monk did so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. The prescribed style for the monks is the Parimaṇḍala style. (Cv. p. 227; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1295).

Giveyyakaṃ

The additional piece of cloth to be stitched in the robe at a place near the neck where the robe is usually rubbed out. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. Gīvāveṭṭhanāṭhāne daḷhikaraṇattham aññaṃ suttasevitaṃ āgantukapaṭṭam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1196).

Guṇaka

Stiffening by the multiple stitching is known as Guṇaka. If the end of the belt is found worn out, the Guṇaka may be done. (Muḍiṅga saṇṭhānena sibbanam. Evaṃ sibbitā hi antā thirā honti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). The Buddha allowed the monks to follow this method of stitching. (Cv. p. 226).

Guḷa

A lump of molasses. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it in the afternoon, only when sick. Ordinarily the Guḷodaka (molasses mixed with water, sherbet) might be taken in the afternoon instead of Guḷa. (Mv. p. 242; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1159).

Guḷodaka

Molasses mixed with water and used as a drink, (sherbet). Usually the Guḷa (the lump of molasses) was not allowed in the afternoon; but Guḷodaka was permissible. (Mv. p. 242; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1159).

Guhā

A cave. It was one of the five 'lodgings' which were allowed by the Buddha as the residence of the monks. The other lodging-places were Vihāra, Aḍḍhayoga, Pāsāda and Hammiya. (Cv. p. 239). The cave may be built of bricks (Itṭhakāguhā), stone (Silāguhā), wood (Dārughā) or earth (Paṃsughā). (SP. Vol. III, p. 1298).

Gūḷhaka-Salākaggāho

A method of secret collection of ballot-sticks (voting) if the assembly of the monks is in the majority of non-righteous monks. (Alajjussannāya parisāya gūlhako salākaggāho kātabbo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1278; Cf. Cv. p. 184).

Also see SALĀKAGGĀHO.

Geruka-Parikamma

Plastering or colouring of the Vihāra with the red-chalk (Gerū). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 244).

Goghamsikā

A wood or bamboo stick to be used as a roller to wind the robe when sewing. (Cv. p. 206; Cf. Velum vā rukkhadaṇḍaṃ vā anto katvā tena saddhiṃ sasigharituṃ ti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1289).

Gonaka

A long-haired spreading. (Dīghalomako mahākojavo caturaṅgulādhikāni kira tassa lomāni.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). It was regarded as an Uccāsayanamahāsayana, and hence the monks were not allowed to use it. If anyone used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting only but never for sleeping even if it belonged to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Gonisīdaka-Kappiyabhūmi-Kuṭṭi

One of the four types of the Kappiyabhūmi-kuṭṭi (suitable place) where the monks were allowed to store the food articles. Other places were : Ussāvanantikā, Gahapati and Sammuti. (Mv. p. 254). This type of building was usually unprotected and without any fence and so was easily accessible even to the cattle. Hence, it was called Gonisīdaka-Kappiyabhūmi-Kuṭṭi. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1163).

Also see KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Gorasa

Milk and milk products, such as curd (Dadhi), sour-milk (Takka), butter (Navanīta), Ghee (Sappi). The Buddha allowed the monks to use these things. (Mv. p. 258).

Golomika

To keep the beard in a clustered shape like the goat-beard; 'goatee'. The Buddha prohibited the monks from growing beard and moustache and hence this was disallowed. If one kept so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkata. (Cv. p. 224; Cf. Hanukamhi dīghaṃ katvā ṭhapitaṃ eḷakamassu vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1293).

GhaGhaṭika

A small jar. The Buddha allowed the monks to accept it when offered; and also to use it. (Cv. p. 219).

Ghaṭikā

A wooden bolt for the door. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Ghaṭikaṭāha

A water bowl (made of earth). The Buddha prohibited the monks from using it as a begging bowl. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkata. (Cv. p. 203).

Gharadinnakābādhō

Sickness arising out of taking something (some medicine etc.) unpalatable to one's system given by some housewife in order to seduce him. (Vasīkaraṇapāna-kasamuṭṭhitarogo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156 Cf. Gharaṇīyā dinnavasīkaraṇabhesajjasamuṭṭhitābādhō. — Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 186). Its antidote as prescribed by the Buddha was to drink Sītaloḷī, i. e. a drink made out of the mud adhering to the plough. (Mv. p. 225).

Ca

Cakkabheda

Breaking the 'wheel' of Law, i.e. breaking the teachings of the Buddha, both doctrinal and ecclesiastical. (Cakkabhedaṃ ti sāsanaḥedaṃ.—Vajirabuddhiṭṭikā (M), p. 533). It is something like Saṅghabheda (schism) and so it is often mentioned with it. (e.g. Parā, pp. 258, 262; Cv. p. 298 etc.).

Cakkavaṭṭaka

A scoop wheel, i. e. a wheel revolving over a well with a string of earthen pots going down empty and coming up full after a dredger fashion. It is called Rahata in Hindi. (Arahata ghaṭiyantaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290; Cf. Sakatacakkasāṇṭhānayan-taṃ. Tassa are are ghaṭikāni bandhitvā ekena dvīhi vā paribhamiyamānassa udakanibbāhanaṃ veditabbaṃ.—Vajirabuddhiṭṭikā (M), p. 524; Also Cf. Vimativinodanīṭṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 233).

Caṅkama

A walking terrace. The Buddha recommended it for strolling particularly for the sick monks. (Cv. pp. 208-209). A ledge was also recommended to protect it from falling down (Caṅkamanavedikā). (Ibid.). It might be covered by a roof (Caṅka-manasālā). (Ibid.).

Caṅkamanavedikā

A railing or ledge of the 'walking terrace' (Caṅkama). (Cv. p. 209).

Caṅkamanasālā

A covered walking terrace. The Buddha allowed the monks to use it. (Cv. p. 209).

Catukaṇṇaka

A fashion of putting on the under garment by showing all the four corners. (Cf. Upari dve hetṭhato dve tī evaṃ cattāro kaṇṇe dessetvā nivatthaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). This fashion was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one put on the robe in this style, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Catumahāpadesā

The four 'sources of monastic laws' or the four 'great authorities'. The Buddha has laid down many rules for the monks and nuns with regard to their food, drinks, robes, bowls etc.; and it was expected that the fraternity would observe them scrupulously. But the Buddha was liberal in his attitude and hence he had granted certain allowances and also left some matters to the discretion of the Saṅgha. This 'discretion' is known as Catumahāpadesā which is fourfold. For instance, a thing or matter which is not expressively prohibited or allowed by the Buddha for the Saṅgha, but it looks as allowable (Kappiyaṃ anulometi). It is suitable for the monks. Similarly a thing or matter which is not expressively prohibited or allowed by the Buddha for the Saṅgha, and it does not look as allowable (Kappiyaṃ paṭibāhati). It is indeed unsuitable for the monks. And thus the monks are free to apply their own discretion on such matters and may follow which they find proper. (“Yaṃ Bhikkhave, mayā ‘Idaṃ na kappatī’ ti appaṭikkhittam taṃ ca akappiyaṃ anulometi, kappiyaṃ paṭibāhati, taṃ vo na kappati. Yaṃ Bhikkhave, mayā ‘Idaṃ na kappatī’ ti appaṭikkhittam taṃ ca kappiyaṃ anulometi, akappiyaṃ paṭibāhati, taṃ vo kappati. Yaṃ Bhikkhave, mayā ‘Idaṃ kappatī’ ti anuññātam taṃ ca kappiyaṃ anulometi, kappiyaṃ paṭibāhati, taṃ vo na kappati. Yaṃ Bhikkhave, mayā ‘Idaṃ kappatī’ ti ananuññātam, taṃ ca kappiyaṃ anulometi, akappiyaṃ paṭibāhati, taṃ vo kappatī’ ti—Mv. pp. 263-264; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1168-1169).”

Caturassakam

A fashion of keeping the beard trimmed in four corners. The Buddha prohibited the monks from growing beard and so this mode of keeping the beard was not allowed. And if one did so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 224).

Candanikā

A water pool for taking bath. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. It may have walls all around and also the plastered floors. (Cv. p. 212).

Cammakhaṇḍa (I)

A leather water-bucket to draw out water from the well. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 212; Cf. Tulāya vā karakaṭake vā yojetabbakaṃ cammabhājanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). It is called ‘Moṭa’ in Hindi.

Cammakhaṇḍa (II)

A kind of leather spreading. It may be of lion’s skin, tiger’s skin, leopard’s skin etc. (Cammakhaṇḍo nāma sīha-byaggha-dīpi-acchacammādīsūpi yaṃ kiñci cammam—SP. Vol. II, p. 792; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 203). It was not allowed for individual use by the Buddha; but it was one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under the term Seyyā which was permissible for the use of the Saṅgha. (Pāc. p. 65). Leather spreading of ram or goat or deer was however permissible for individual use to those monks who lived outside the Majjhimadesa (N. India.). (Mv. p. 216).

Cāmarivijani

A chowrie to use as fan. The Buddha prohibited the monks from using it. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 219).

Cārikā

Literally it means 'wandering about' or 'journeying'. It generally signifies the journey of Buddhist monks and nuns. The Buddha commanded his disciples in the Dhammacakkapavattana Sutta at Isipa'ana Migadāya (Mod. Sarnath, Vārāṇasī) that the monks should wander round for the welfare of many, for the good of many and for the propagation of the Dhamma. (Mv. p. 23). The Bhikkhus accordingly used to wander about from one place to another exhorting the people and propagating the Dhamma. The Buddha himself wandered throughout the Northern India and preached his Dhamma for forty five years till his death. It was only during the rainy season (Vassāvāsa) that the monks and nuns had to postpone their wanderings. Special rules were framed by the Buddha in respect of Vassāvāsa for the monks and nuns; and as per rules every monk and nun must undergo the Vassāvāsa for a period of three months; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed by a monk; (Ibid. pp. 144-45) and an offence of Pācittiya was committed by a nun. (Rule No. 39; Pāc. p. 405; Pm. (B), p. 41). Soon after the Vassāvāsa, it is also laid down that a nun must undergo a Cārikā of a distance of at least five Yojanas (if not more); otherwise she was liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya (Rule No. 41; Pāc. p. 406). The nuns were forbidden to undertake a Cārikā all alone (without a company of some one or a caravan) in her own country or outside her country when it was unsafe or the journey was risky. If a nun undertook a journey under above circumstances, she was liable to commit the offences of Pācittiya. (Rules No. 37 and 38; Pāc. pp. 403-404; Pm. (B), p. 41). It is also laid down that a nun must hand over the charge of her Āvasatha (residence) to some one where she had been living before she left for a Cārikā; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Rule No. 48; Pāc. pp. 415-416; Pm. (B), p. 42).

Cittaka

An embroidered woollen spreading with designs. (Vānacro unṇamayattharaṇo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayanī, so it was not allowed for the use of the monks; and if one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting even if it belonged to a householder, but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Cimilikā or Cilimikā

A kind of mat or spreading used in order to protect the floor. (Cimilikā nāma parikkammakatāya bhūmiyā vaṇṇānurakkharattham katā.—Kv. (M), p. 203; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 792). This may be made of rags. (Pilotikā seyyā.—Pātimokkha-padatthavaṇṇanā (M), p. 213). It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under Seyyā as allowed for the use of the monks; (Pāc. pp. 64-65; Cv. p. 243). See also SEYYĀ.

Cīvara

The robe or robe-cloth of the Buddhist Order. The Cīvara was generally made of cotton cloth, but the cloth made of Khuma, or wool, or Saṇa (linen), or Bhaṅga or silk was also permitted for the robes. (Mv. p. 298). In the beginning of the Buddhist Order, the cloth picked from the rubbish (Pamsukūla) was considered as the cloth fit for the robe (Ibid. p. 55); but later the Buddha allowed the monks to accept the cloth offered by the lay-devotees as well. (Gahapaticīvara.—Ibid. p. 297).

The Buddha allowed the monks, only three robes, viz. Saṅghāṭī, Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka in the first instance (Ibid. p. 305); but later he permitted other six additional robes, viz. Vassikasāṭikā (a robe for the rains), Kaṇḍupaticchādi (a cloth when suffering from itches), Nisīdana (a bedding), Paccattharaṇa (a spreading), Mukhapuñchana (a towel or handkerchief) and Parikkhāracolaka (a piece of cloth used as a strainer or as a bag). For the Bhikkhunīs only two additional robes were allowed, viz. Udakasāṭikā (a robe for bath) and Saṅkaccikaṃ or Saṅkacchikaṃ (a bodice). (Ibid. pp. 310-312; Cv. pp. 391-92; Pāc. pp. 380-381, 480). As regards the Saṅghāṭī it might be made of two layers while the Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka should be made of only one layer, in case the material was new. (Mv. p. 305). In case the robe-material was old, the Saṅghāṭī might be of four layers and the Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka might be made of two layers. If the robe material was a Pamsukūla (a rag), the robe might be made of many layers according to the need. (Ibid. p. 306). The Buddha also allowed the Āvasat-hacīvara (a cloth during menstruation) for the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha as a whole, not for individual nun. (Cv. p. 391).

The size of the robe should not be more than nine Sugata-spans in length and six Sugata-spans in breadth. If the size exceeded, the robe must be cut before use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 92; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 166; Pāc. pp. 230-231; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52). In the Khuddakasikkhā, however, the minimum size of the robe is mentioned. The length of the Saṅghāṭī and Uttarāsaṅga should not be less than four full hands and one close-fisted hand, and the breadth should not be less than two full hands and one close-fisted hand. The Antaravāsaka should have the same length as above but its breadth should not be less than two hands. (Gāthā Nos. 45 & 46.—Saṅghāṭī pacchimantena dīghaso muṭṭhipañcakā, uttamantena sugatacīvarūnāpivattati. Muṭṭhitikaṃ ca tiriyaṃ tathā ckaṃsikassāpi. (45). Antaravāsako vāpi dīghaso muṭṭhipañcako, Aḍḍhateyyo dvihaṭṭho vā tiriyaṃtena vaṭṭati (46). (Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 648).

As mentioned above the monks used to collect the Pamsukūla (rags) and make their robes as they liked. (Mv. p. 55). But once while travelling in the Dakkhiṇagiri in Magadha (Dakkhiṇhū pahāra near Jethiyana, close to Rajgir) the Buddha suggested to Ānanda to make the Bhikkhu's robe according to the pattern of the fields of Magadha. ("Passasi no tvaṃ, Ānanda, magadhakhettaṃ acchibandhaṃ pālībandhaṃ mariyāda-bandhaṃ siṅghāṭa-bandhaṃ" ti. "Evaṃ Bhante" ti. "Ussahasi toam Ānanda, bhikkhūnaṃ evarūpāni cīvarāni saṃvidahitum” ti. “Ussahāmi Bhagavā” ti.—Ibid. p. 303). The Buddha thenceforth enjoined upon the monks to make their three robes (viz. Saṅghāṭī, Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka) by cutting the cloth into pieces and then stitching them together. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave chinnakam saṅghāṭim, chinnakam uttarāsaṅgam, chinnankam antaravāsakam ti.—Ibid. p. 304). Usually the robe is cut into five pieces before it is stitched (and if it is cut into more than five pieces, the number must be odd, such as seven, nine etc.). (Ibid. p. 304; Cf. Iti pañcakhāṇḍikacīvarena etaṃ vicāritam.—SP. Vol. III, p.1196).

The outer fringe of the robe is called Kusi; and the middle piece is known as Vivaṭṭa. The other two adjoining pieces to each side of the Vivaṭṭa are known as Anuvivaṭṭa. The extreme pieces are called Bāhanta. Each piece has two parts, one big and the other small. The big one is called Maṇḍala and the small one is known as Adḍhamaṇḍala. The intermediary lines are called Adḍhakusi. (Mv. p. 304). On the inner corner of the robe a button and the button fastener are also provided. They are called Gaṇṭhi and Pāsaka respectively (Cv. pp. 226-227). This portion is strengthened by attaching another layer of cloth which is called Ganthiphalaka and Pāsakaphalaka. (Ibid. p. 227).

The upper Kusi is strengthened by another layer of cloth which is known as Giveyyaka. This is done in order to protect the robe from being worn out at the neck. Similarly the lower Kusi is strengthened by a layer of cloth in order to protect the lower portion from being worn out at legs; and hence it is known as Jangheyyaka. (Ibid. p. 304).

We find a detailed description of the stitching of the robe. The Buddha has allowed many things which are essential for sewing, for instance, knife (Satthakam), needle (Sūci), needle-case (Sūciḡhara), wooden-frame (Kaṭhina), thimble (Paṭiggaha), etc. (Ibid. pp. 204-206).

The robe must be properly dyed and then used. In the beginning the Order followed the usual practice as followed by the other sects and used to dye robes with yellow-mud (Paṇḍumattikā) or with the cow-dung (Chakaṇa). Later the Buddha disallowed these materials as dyes, and prescribed six kinds of dye-materials; viz. the dye-prepared from root (Mūlarajana), from stem (Khandharajana), from bark (Tacarajana), from leaves (Pattarajana), from flowers (Puppharajana) from fruits (Phalarajana). (Mv. p. 302). The colour of the dye should not be all Mañjetṭha (red & blue), or all black, or all bright red (Mahāraṅgarattāni) or multi-coloured (Mahānāmarattāni). (Ibid. p. 321; Cv. pp. 387-388). The dye prepared from the dye-material is called 'Kasāva'; hence the robe of the monks is also known as Kāsāva. The usual colour of the robe is between red and yellow as can be seen in any Theravāda Buddhist country. In Ceylon, I am told, the colour of the root of the jackfruit tree is regarded as the standard colour for the robe. (I am indebted to Dr. U. Dhammaratana of Nava Nālandā Mahāvihāra for this information).

The Buddha has also allowed many such things as may be necessary for dyeing the robes; for instance, an oven (Culli), a pot for boiling the dye-stuff (Rajanakumbhī), basin (Uttarālumpa), laddle (Rajanuluṅka), trough (Rajanadoṇi), a bamboo or string to hang the robe (Cīvaravaṃsa and Cīvararajju), etc. (Mv. pp. 302-303).

It is also laid down that the robe must be disfigured by tarnishing one of its corners before it is used (Dubbaṇṇakaraṇa). If it is not so done, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu rule No. 58; Bhikkhunī rule No. 134; Pm. (B), pp. 15 & 49).

The robe material was usually offered to the monks after the end of the 'rainy resort' (Vassāvāsa) and the period for making the robe lasted for a month. This period was known as Cīvara-kāla. But the Cīvakāla for a Bhikkhu on whom the Kaṭhina privileges had been bestowed upon lasted for five months, i. e. from Kattika to Phagguṇa. (Pārā. p. 369).

Sometimes the monks used to receive a large number of robes in some Vihāras. And, therefore, a need was felt to appoint a monk who should accept the robes on behalf of the Saṅgha. Such a monk was called Cīvaropāṭiggāhāpaka. In order to arrange these robes a Cīvara-nidāhaka monk was appointed by the Saṅgha. The special room to store these robes was called Bhaṇḍāgāra and the Bhikkhu in charge of this room was known as Bhaṇḍāgārika. A Bhikkhu who was appointed by the Saṅgha to distribute these robes was called Cīvarabhājaka. (Mv. pp. 300-302).

Before a monk intends to use a robe as his 'own' he is required to make a 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna). The Buddha allowed only three main robes for the monks,

(viz. the Saṅghāṭi, Uttarāsaṅga and Antaravāsaka) but if an extra robe was received and the monk desired to use it, a formal 'assignment' (Vikappanā) was made before it was used. (Ibid. p. 305).

The robe was one of the main requisites of the monks. The Buddhist Order was, therefore, conscious enough about its use. A good number of rules were framed for the guidance of the monks with regard to the use of the robes. In the Pātimokkha, we find 23 Bhikkhu Nissaggiyā Pācittiya, 16 Bhikkhunī Nissaggiyā Pācittiya, 10 Bhikkhu Pācittiya and 17 Bhikkhunī Pācittiya rules connection with the robes. (Pm. (B), pp. 6, 10, 34-38; 12-19, 34-52). In the Mahāvagga (pp. 286-325) there is one full chapter, the Civara-vagga which deals with the matters concerning the robes of the monks. The Kāthina-khandhaka of the Mahāvagga is also devoted to the robes during the Kāthina period. (Ibid. pp. 266-285).

The Buddha admonished the monks to make use of their robes most carefully and properly. A tear in the robe must be made up and properly stitched. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave aggalaṃ, tunnaṃ, ovaṭṭikaṃ, kaṇḍūsakaṃ, daḥṭṭikomaṃ.—Ibid. p. 306). How the monks should make the best use of their robes is beautifully described by Ānanda to king Udena. Ānanda says, : "When the robe is worn out, it may be used as a bedding, spreading, or as a mat etc. And if these are also torn and worn out, they may be plastered in the wall". (Cv. p. 413). (For further utility of the civara see Dhammapadaṭṭhakathā pp. 185-86).

Civara-Adhiṭṭhāna

Making a 'resolve' to use a new robe as his 'own' either by gesture or by speech with regard to the following nine kinds of robes, viz., Saṅghāṭi, Uttarāsaṅga, Antaravāsaka, Vassikasāṭikā, Nisīdana, Paccattharaṇa, Kaṇḍupaṭicchādi, Mukha-puñchana and Parikkhāracolaka. This is known as Civara-adhiṭṭhāna. It is required that a Bhikkhu must make the 'resolve' before using a new civara. (Mv. p. 312; Cf. Pari. p. 215). A new civara may be kept without using it for ten days by a Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī. If it is kept for more than this period, an offence of Nissaggiyā Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 1; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 13; Pārā. p. 288; Pm. (B), pp. 6, 35; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 648-655). Hence an Adhiṭṭhāna must be made as soon as a civara is received.

For the Vassikasāṭikā, the Adhiṭṭhāna is made only for a period of four months of rains. If it is desired to be kept for a further period, a Vikappanā ('assignment') should be made after making it 'formally given up' (Paccuddharaṇa). (Mv. p. 312; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 650). In the case of the Kaṇḍupaṭicchādi, the Adhiṭṭhāna may be made for the period till the disease is cured. But after that it should be 'formally given up' (paccuddharaṇa); however if it is desired to be retained, a Vikappanā ('assignment') should be made to this effect. (Ibid.).

Civara-Kāla-Samaya or Civara-Kāra-Samaya

The robe season, same as Civara-dāna-samaya. The 'season for the robes' for a Bhikkhu who has received the Kāthina-civara lasts for five months—beginning from Kattika (November) to Phagguṇa-Puṇṇimā (March); while for other Bhikkhus the period is of one month only; i.e. upto Kattika-Puṇṇimā. (Kv. (M), p. 159; Para. p. 369). During the 'robe season' a Bhikkhu is allowed to keep in his possession extra Cīvaras also (i.e. more than three) without making any 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna) or 'assignment' (Vikappaṇā). (Cf. Bhikkhu Nissaggiya Pācittiya Rule No. 1, Bhikkhuni Nissaggiya Pācittiya Rule No. 13; Pm. (B). pp. 6 & 35).

It is the same as CĪVARADĀNASAMAYA. (Kv.(M), p.217; Pāc. pp.107, 111).

Cīvaracetāpanna

Cash or kind donated by a lay-devotee in order to make or to purchase the robe or robe-cloth is known as Cīvara-cetāpanna. (Hiraññaṃ vā suvaṇṇaṃ vā maṇi vā pavāḷo vā phaliko vā paḷako vā suttam vā kappāso vā.—Para. p. 312; Cf. Cīvaracetāpannaṃ ti cīvaramūlaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 677).

Cīvaradānasamaya

Same as Cīvarakāla; i.e. season for robes. The period is of one month after the first Pavāraṇā day; i.e. upto the Kattika-Puṇṇimā, to those who have not received the Kaṭhina-cīvara; but to those who have received the Kaṭhina-cīvara, the period is of five months; i. e. upto the full-moon day of Phagguṇa. (Anatthate kaṭhine vassānassa pacchimo māso atthate kaṭhine pañcamāsā.—Pāc. pp. 107 & 111).

During this period the Gaṇabhojana and Paramparabhojana are allowed for the monks. (Ibid.). Similarly a monk is allowed to visit houses for meals other than that where he has been invited for meal by another layman. (Ibid. p. 138).

Cīvaranidāhaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who is selected by the Saṅgha to arrange properly the robes or robe-clothes received by the Saṅgha is known as Cīvaranidāhaka. A Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the Saṅgha for this purpose and a just, intelligent and fearless monk is selected. (Yo na chandāgatiṃ gaccheyya na mohāgatiṃ gaccheyya na bhayāgatiṃ gaccheyya, nihitānihitaṃ ca jāneyya.—Mv. p. 300; Cf. SP. Vol III, p. 1189).

Cīvarapaṭiggāhaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who is selected by the Saṅgha to accept the robes or robe-clothes offered by the lay-devotees to the Saṅgha is known as Cīvarapaṭiggāhaka. The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for this purpose and a just, intelligent and fearless monk is selected. (Yo na chandāgatiṃ gaccheyya na dosāgatiṃ gaccheyya na mohāgatiṃ gaccheyya na bhayāgatiṃ gaccheyya gahitāgahitaṃ ca jāneyya.—Mv. p. 300; Cf. Cv. p. 273; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1188).

Cīvarabhājaka (—Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu who is selected by the Saṅgha for the distribution of the robes or robe-clothes received by the Saṅgha amongst the monks is known as Cīvarabhājaka.

The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for this purpose and a just, intelligent and fearless monk is selected. (Yo na chandāgatiṃ gaccheyya na dosāgatiṃ gaccheyya na mohāgatiṃ gaccheyya na bhayāgatiṃ gaccheyya guttāguttam ca jāneyya.—Mv. p. 301; Cf. Cv. p. 273).

It is laid down that the distribution of the robes must be equal among the monks, as far as possible. And for the Sāmaṇeras, the share may be half of that of the monks. (Mv. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1192-1993).

Civara-Rajju

A cord or a string to hang the robes (Mv. pp. 44, 59, 304; Cv. pp. 321, 337, 246, 247 etc.). A Rajju may be provided inside the Vihāra to hang the robes and another may be in the open to spread the robes of the monks. The Buddha allowed such arrangements. (Cv. pp. 246-247). Similarly the Buddha also allowed the provision of a Rajju in the Caṅkamanasālā (Ibid. p. 209), in the Jantāghara and Jantāgharasālā (Ibid. p. 211), in the Vaccakuṭi (Ibid. p. 231), in the Upatthānasālā (Ibid. p. 247), in the Pāṇiyasālā (Ibid. p. 247), in the Aggisālā (Ibid. p. 248) and in the Kaṭhinasālā (Ibid. p. 206).

Civara-Vamṣa

A bamboo to hang the robes of the Bhikkhus. (Mv. pp. 44, 59, 303; Cv. pp. 329, 337 etc.). A Vamṣa inside the Vihāra to hang the robes and the other in the open to spread the robes were allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. pp. 246-247). Similarly the Buddha also allowed the provision of a Vamṣa in the Caṅkamanasālā (Ibid. p. 209), in the Jantāghara and Jantāgharasālā (Ibid. p. 211), in the Vaccakuṭi (Ibid. p. 231), in the Upatthānasālā (Ibid. p. 247), in the Pāṇiyasālā (Ibid. p. 247), in the Aggisālā (Ibid. p. 248) and in the Kaṭhinasālā (Ibid. p. 206).

Civarasaṅkamanīya

If a Bhikkhunī uses (any of the five) robes of another Bhikkhunī without her permission or without being offered, it is known as Civarasaṅkamanīya. (Upasampannāya pañcannaṃ taṃ.—Pāc. p. 385). An offence of Pācittiya is committed if a Bhikkhunī does so. (Rule No. 25; Ibid. p. 385).

Cuṇṇa

A kind of 'bath-powder' used as a cosmetic before entering into the Jantāghara or for bath. It is mentioned that a monk going to Jantāghara should make a ball of the Cuṇṇa by mixing it with water. (Cv. p. 325; Mv. p. 59; Cf. Nānācuṇṇaṃ udakena temetvā piṇḍi kātabbā—SP. Vol. III, p. 1029). This 'bath-powder' was probably of many varieties (Nānācuṇṇaṃ.—Ibid.).

It is also mentioned that the Antevāsika or the Saddhivihārika should keep the Cuṇṇa ready for his Ācariya or Upajjhāya if the latter desired to go to Jantāghara or or bath. (Mv. pp. 49,59). The Bhikkhunis, however, were not allowed to use Cuṇṇa. They could use Kukkusa-mattikā (rice-husk powder and clay) instead of Cuṇṇa. (Cv. p. 401). Cuṇṇa and clay were usually applied in the body. (Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 888).

Was it lime which was used as cosmetics for cleansing the body before bath? The word Cunnā is the Hindi term for lime. The face-powder is called 'Mukha-cuṇṇa'. This was not allowed for the monks and nuns. And if one used it, the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Ibid. pp. 196, 387).

Cuṇṇacālīnī

A small sieve. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks, particularly when they had to prepare the medicinal powder etc. (Mv. p. 221).

Cuṇṇa-Bhesajja

A powdered medicine. The Buddha allowed its use when the monks suffered from itching (Kaṇḍu), pimples (Pilikā), oozing wounds (Assāva), virulent itching of thigh, etc. (Thūlakaccha) or foul smelling of the body. (Mv. p. 221).

Culla or Cuḷḷa or Culli

An oven. The Buddha allowed its use when the monks had to prepare the dye for their robes. (Mv. p. 302). It is called Cūlhā or Cūlhī in Hindi.

Celappaṭikā

A long strip of cloth used for spreading on the ground in honour of some very distinguished guest. Once Bodhi-Kumāra made such an arrangement in his Kokanada palace in honour of the Buddha. But the Buddha declined to tread upon this cloth. He then enjoined the monks not to step over such a cloth spread in their honour. If one did so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. He, however, allowed the monks to do so only if the layman wished to do so on some auspicious occasions. (Cv. pp. 217-218).

Cocapāna

Sweet-drink of wild banana-juice. (Coca is a kind of wild banana with seeds; and the other without seed is known as Moca). It is one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks (Pānāni) allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It is also regarded as Yāmakālīka and so it may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167). But it should be taken only when necessary (sati paccaya), but never as a food; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Pāc. p. 121).

Codaka (—Bhikkhu)

A 'reprover monk' who brings the 'case' of another 'wrong doer' monk before the Saṅgha with a view to making the Saṅgha 'clean'. The 'reprover monk' should take into account the following five factors before bringing the 'case' of a 'wrong doer' monk to the assembly: (1) He should make himself sure that he himself is 'pure', faultless and free from any bodily offences. (2) He is free from any offence by speech. (3) He is sure that he is reproving the monk not out of hatred or ill-will but out of loving-kindness. (4) The 'reprover monk' must possess sound knowledge of the scriptures and the Dhamma. (5) He must possess the sound knowledge of the Vinaya rules. (Cv. pp. 368-369). He should also take into account that (1) he would speak at a proper time; (2) only about the facts; (3) gently; (4) with purposefulness and (5) with loving-kindness. (Ibid. p. 369).

In case the monks find that the 'reprover monk' is behaving unrighteously (adhammikena), he should be persuaded not to do so; and the 'reproved monk' (Cuditaka-Bhikkhu) should be consoled that he should not be sorry or unhappy on account of this unrighteous reproving. The Saṅgha should applaud the monk who reproves righteously so that others may feel encouraged to reprove the 'wrong doers'; and the monk who has been righteously reproved (Cuditaka-Bhikkhu) should be admonished by the Saṅgha not to be sorry or unhappy since he has been reproved righteously. (Ibid. pp. 369-370).

The monk who is to reprove a 'wrong doer' monk should bear in mind the good feelings of compassion, well-wishing, sympathy, removal of 'offences' and should also aim at the rules of Vinaya. A 'reproved monk' should speak truth and should never be angry with himself or with others. (Ibid. p. 371; Cf. Pari. pp. 241-282, 283-288).

The Codaka monk is also known as Saṅgāma vacara. (Pari. pp. 289, 292; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1473).

Codanā

'Reproving' a 'wrong doer' monk. Reproving should be done only if something wrong has been seen, heard or doubted against a monk. (Pari. pp. 218, 283-288). The Codanā is effected by pointing out the wrong incident (Vatthusandassanā), or by pointing out the 'offence' committed (Āpattisandassanā), or by having non-association with the wrong-doing monk (Samvāsapaṭikkhepa), or by not showing due respect to the wrong doing monk (Sāmīcipaṭikkhepa). (Ibid. p. 228).

It is laid down that before an ecclesiastical action (Kamma), like Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Pabbājanīya, Paṭisāraṇīya, or Ukkhepanīya is taken up, the 'alleged monk' should be 'reproved'. In case the 'action' is taken up without 'reproving' him, the whole 'action' becomes illegal (Adhammika). (Cf. Cv. pp. 7, 15, 26, 36, 42, 50, 59). Before the 'wrong-doer' monk is 'reproved' it is essential that his 'consent' (Okāsa) must be obtained; otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Cf. Anujānāmi bhikkhave okāsaṃ kārāpetvā apattiyaṃ codetum—‘Karotu āyasmā okāsaṃ, ahaṃ vattukāmo ti.’—Mv. p. 116). It is also mentioned that even if the ‘consent’ is obtained, the ‘reproving’ should be made only after assessing the temper of the individual. (Ibid.).

Cha

Chatta

An umbrella. The Buddha allowed the monks to possess an umbrella, but its use was restricted. It is said that only sick person should use an umbrella. It should not be always used by all. If one used it without being sick, the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed by him (Cv. p. 219-220); and a Pācittiya was committed by a Bhikkhunī (Rule No. 84, Pac. p. 469). It may however be used even not being sick only inside the ārāma or near about the ārāma. (Cv. p. 220). In the SP. [III, p. 1292] however it is mentioned that the umbrella may be used by the monks when it is raining or to protect from wild animals or robbers. (Vasse pana cīvaraguttatthaṃ vālamigacorabhayesu ca attaguttatthaṃ pi vaṭṭati).

There are three kinds of umbrellas mentioned in the texts. These are : (i) White cloth umbrella (Setacchatta), (ii) Bamboo chip umbrella (Kilañjacchatta), (iii) Leaf umbrella of round shape (Maṇḍalabaddha) without or with spokes (Salākabaddha). (Pāc. p. 469).

Chadana

The roof of a building. The Buddha allowed five kinds of roofs for the Vihāra, viz. made of bricks, stone, lime (Sudhā), grass or leaves. (Cv. p. 248).

Chanda (I)

Declaration of the ‘consent’ to a Saṅghakamma by an absentee monk through a ‘competent’ Bhikkhu; a ‘proxy’.

On the Uposatha day if a Bhikkhu comes from somewhere else, he should attend the Uposatha ceremony even if he has already attended it at the place where he is coming from. But somehow or other if he is not in a position to attend it in person, he should give his ‘consent’ (Chanda) to the Saṅgha to hold the Uposatha (Kv. (M), pp. 95-96). In other cases, if the monk is sick and unable to attend the Uposatha, he is required to send his Chanda along with his Pārisuddhi (‘purity’) through some ‘competent’ Bhikkhu. (Ibid. p. 95; Mv. p. 122-123).

If a Bhikkhu is attending a Saṅghakamma and in the meantime he is to quit the assembly and to go out for some urgent business, it is his duty to leave his Chanda with the Saṅgha. If he does not do so, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 80, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 158; Pāc. p. 205; Pm. (B), pp. 18 & 51).

In case a monk 'goes back' from the 'consent' once given to a legitimate procedure of the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 79; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 157; Pāc. p. 204; Pm. (B), pp. 18 & 51).

The Bhikkhu who carries the Chanda is known as Chandahāraka. In case the Chandahāraka hands over the Chanda to another Bhikkhu who in turn does so to another and so on, the Chanda is regarded as not carried. This is known as Bilālasaṅkhalikachanda; i. e. a 'Chanda as a chain'. (Kv. (M), p. 96; SP. Vol. III, p. 1120).

Chandasa

The Vedic Sanskrit language. (Cf. Chandaso āropemāti Vedaṃ viya sakkatabhāsāya vācanamaggam āropema.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1297). The Buddha has prohibited the monks from rendering the words of the Buddha in this language. If one does so, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 229).

Chandahāraka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who carries the Chanda ('consent') of another monk (who is sick or too busy to attend the Saṅghakamma, such as Uposatha, Pavaraṇā etc.) to the Saṅgha is known as Chandahāraka. The Chandahāraka monk must intimate the Chanda to the Saṅgha; and if he fails to do so, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 122-123; Kv. (M), pp. 95-96; SP. Vol. III, p. 1121).

Chavakuṭikā

A 'cemetery hut'. (Ṭaṅkitamañcādibhedā kuṭi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1133). A Bhikkhu should not select it as his rainy-season resort (Vassāvāsa). If one selects it for this purpose, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 159).

In the Vimativinodanī-ṭīka [(M), Vol. II, p. 178] it is described as a hut constructed out of the bier or such other materials thrown in the cemetery. (Dīghe mañcapāde vijjhito aṭaniyo pavesitva kato. So heṭṭhupariyavasena paññatto pi purimasa- • diso va hoti. Taṃ susāne devatāṭhāne ca ṭhapenti. (or) Calunnam pāsāṇanam upari pāsā- naphalake attharito katageham pi taṅkitamañco ti vuccati).

Chinnaka (—Civara)

Monk's robe which is cut into pieces. It is required that the robe of a monk must be cut into five, seven or more (odd) pieces before it is stitched. The Saṅghāṭī or the Uttarasaṅga or the Antaravāsaka should be prepared by stitching the pieces of cloth. If the cloth is of one piece, not of many pieces, it should be cut so that the robe may become poor and thereby undesirable for others, (Mv. p. 304).

Chinna-Iriyāpatha

A cripple-person. (Cf. Piṭhasappi ti vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1085). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). If he is already ordained, his ordination need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya, Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Ja

Jaṅgheyyaka

The additional piece of cloth which is stitched at a lower portion of the robe in order to protect the robe from being worn out by the rubbing of the legs. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. Jaṅghāpāpuṇanaṭhāne tattheva saṃsibbitaṃ paṭṭaṃ.—SP. Vol. Vol. III, p. 1196).

Jatu-Bhesajja

A medicinal bitumen or glue, such as Hīṅgu, Hīṅgujatu, Hīṅguṣipāṭaka, Taka, Takapatti, Takapaṇṇi, Sajjulasā or any such glue which was not used as food by the people, was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks as a medicine. The monks were allowed to keep it when accepted, even for the whole life; but could use it only when necessary; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Mv. pp. 219-220).

Jantāghara

It was a special type of 'hot bath-room' in which provisions were made for fire and water. When Jīvaka Komārabhacca, the great physician, pointed out its purpose and utility for keeping away many diseases, the Buddha allowed its use. In the Jantāghara the monks used to besmear the body and face with mud and then warm it by fire, and after that they took bath. The provision of a well in the Jantāghara is also mentioned. It was meant not exclusively for fire, as some scholars think, but it was a room for 'hot-bath'. (Cv. pp. 208-211; Cf. Rhys Davids—Pali English Dictionary, p. 111; R. C. Childers—A Dictionary of Pali Language, p. 166). In the Abhidhānappadīpikā (Gāthā No. 214) the Jantāghara is described as a synonym of Aggisālā (Jantāgharam ivaggisālā); and explained thus: Jalam etthāti jantā. Janeti atra aggiṃ ti vā jantā. Sā eva gharam Jantāgharam. Aggino sālā ti aggisālā.—Abhidhānappadīpikā Tīkā (M), p. 114). In the Vimativinodanī Tīkā [(M), Vol. II, pp. 102-103] we find a reference to its use in the cold countries where it snows. In order to get rid of some diseases on account of cold, the people used to get themselves perspired by making the body heated in the Jantāghara. (Jantāgharam hi nāma himapātābahulesu desesu tappaccayā rogapiḷḷādinivāraṇattham sarīrasedāpanaṭṭhānam.),

It is interesting to compare this mode of bath with the Turkish Bath. "A Turkish Bath is a hot-air bath in which skin is cleansed by violent perspiration, followed by lathering, rubbing, massaging and a cold plunge." (Children's Dictionary, Vol. VII, p. 4385). The Jantāghara was probably uncovered, although enclosure and door were provided; and a room with roof was attached to it, known as Jantāgharasālā. The Jantāghara was provided with Jantāgharapiṭṭha (a small stool), Civaravaṃsa, Cīvararajju (a bamboo or a cord to hang the robes), Udakaśarāvaka, Udakadhāna (pots for water) and Mattikādoṇi (for clay). (Cv. pp. 209-211; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1289-1290).

It was the duty of the monk going first in the Jantāghara to keep it clean and remove ashes etc. from there. He was also required to see that all the pitchers, floor etc. were well cleaned and the water in the pots was kept. And if the Therās came, the room should be vacated for them; and if they desired massaging or rubbing, the junior monk should do so. Before coming out of the Jantāghara, it should be kept neat and tidy, its furniture be properly arranged and fire should be extinguished and the room should be properly closed. (Cv. pp. 209-211, 325-326; Cf. Parā. pp. 165-166; Mv. pp. 45, 59, 63).

The Bhikkhunīs were, however, not allowed to use the Jantāghara. If a Bhikkhunī used the Jantāghara, she was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 402).

Mention is also made of another kind of Jantāghara known as Nillekha-Jantāghara, which was probably fully covered and in which a small space was left in its roof (for smoke). (Cf. Āviddhapakkhapāsakaṃ vuccati. Gopānasīnaṃ uparimaṇḍale pakkhapāsake ṭhapetvā katakūṭacchadanassetam nāmaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). Its use was also allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 212).

Ovens of Jantāghara have been found in the old Nālandā monasteries.

Jantāgharapiṭṭha

A small stool used in the Jantāghara in order to protect the robes from being soiled by dirt. The Buddha allowed its use. (Cv. p. 210).

It was carried by the monks when going to the Jantāghara; and while coming out it was brought back. It was the duty of the Antevāsika or Saddhivihārika to carry it when the Ācariya or Upajjhāya was to visit the Jantāghara. (Mv. pp. 45, 63; Cv. pp. 324, 338).

Jantāgharavatta

Duties of a monk when using the Jantāghara. It was noticed by the Buddha that the Chabbaggiyā monks used to put a lot of wood for intense fire and close the door and sit there. This they did in order to show disrespect to other monks. This caused sometimes so much heat inside the Jantāghara that some monks even fainted. The Buddha then prohibited the monks from doing so. If one did so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 325). The Buddha also laid down certain rules for using the Jantāghara. For instance, the monk using the Jantāghara must clean it if it was found dirty; wash the basins, arrange the clay etc. when entering the Jantāghara. It is also mentioned that one should besmear his face with mud and cover his front and back before entering the Jantāghara. One should not sit there removing the elders, nor should the newly ordained monks be removed from their seats. Before coming out of the Jantāghara, it must be left neat and tidy and its furniture be properly arranged and the door closed. (For details see Cv. pp. 325-326).

Jantāgharasālā

A room attached to the Jantāghara in order to keep the robes from being wet by rains. Evidently it was a covered room. Such a room was allowed by the Buddha for the monks in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 211). The Civarvaṃsa (a bamboo) and the Civararajju (a cord) were provided there to hang the robes, (Ibid.).

Jambupāna

Sweet-drink of Jambu juice (rose apple). It was one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks (Pānāni) allowed for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It was regarded as Yamakālīka and so it might be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167). But it should be taken only if it was necessary (sati paccaya), but never as food; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed (Pāc. p. 121).

Jarādubbala

A person who has grown extremely old and become infirm on account of age. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

In case such a person is already ordained, his ordination need not be cancelled, but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Jaḷogi

Unfermented toddy (Nirā in Hindi) or the like, which has not reached the stage of becoming an intoxicating liquor. The Vajji monks advocated for its drinking and regarded it as a suitable drink for the monks. It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as 'proper' for the monks and which led to the convening of the Second Buddhist Council (Saṅgīti), at Vesālī. In this Council its use was declared 'improper' since it involved an offence of Pāṭittiya. (Rule No. 51; Cv. p. 430).

Jātarūparajataṃ

To accept and use gold, silver, coins or money by the monks. It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as 'proper' for the monks and which led the convening of the Second Buddhist Council (Saṅgīti) at Vesālī. In this Council it was declared 'improper' for the monks to accept gold, silver or any kind of money as it involved an offence of Nissaggiya Pacittiya. (Rule No. 18; Cv. p. 430).

Jāla-Vātapāna

A window with grill. This type of window was allowed by the Buddha in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Ña

Ñatti

'Declaration' of 'resolution' or 'motion' before the assembly of the Saṅgha is known as Ñatti. (Cf. Saṅghassa ñāpanā jānāpanā ñatti.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭhikā (M), Vol. IV, p. 225). The Ñatti may be with a Kammavācā (proceeding) or without a Kammavācā. The usual formula is "Suṇātu me, bhāḍe,.....esā ñatti". (Cf. Mv. p. 53).

Ñatti-Kamma

That Kamma of the Saṅgha (ecclesiastical business) which requires only the 'formal-resolution' or the Ñatti (and not the Kammavācā along with it) is known as Ñattikamma (Mv. p. 53; Cf. Samaggassa saṅghassa anumatiyā ekāya ñattiyā kattabbaṃ kammaṃ ñattikammaṃ nāma.—Kv. (M), p. 255; also, Saṅghassa ñāpanā jānāpanā ñatti tīya kattabbaṃ kammaṃ ñattikammaṃ.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭhikā (M), Vol IV, p. 225; SP. Vol. III, p. 1514). The following Saṅghakammas may be regarded as Ñatti-kamma : Upasatha, Pavāraṇā, Sammutidāna, Nissāraṇā, Osāraṇā, Dānakamma, Paṭiggahakamma, Paccukkaḍḍhanā, Kammalakkhanā. (Kv. (M), pp. 256-257; Pari. p. 390).

Ñatticatutthakamma

That Kamma of the Saṅgha (ecclesiastical business) which requires a Ñatti ('declaration' of the 'resolution' or 'motion') and also the proclamation of the Kammavācā or Anussāvānā (proceedings) for three times. (Cf. Ekāya ñattiyā tīhi ca anussāvānāhi kattabbaṃ ñatticatutthakammaṃ nāma.—Kv. (M), p. 256; Cf...SP. Vol. III, p. 1514).

There are many Saṅghakammas (ecclesiastical businesses) which are to be dealt with Ñatticatutthakamma. These are : Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Pabbājanīya, Paṭisāraṇīya, Āpattiya adassane Ukkhepaniya, Āpattiya opatikkamme Ukkhepaniya, Pāpikāya ditthiya apatinissagge Ukkhepaniya, Osāraṇa of the above seven Kammas, Bhikkhunī-ovādaka-sammuti, Parioḍsa-dāna, Mānatta-dāna, Mūlāya paṭikassanā, Ukkhittānuvattikā, Atthayāvatatīyakā, Upasampadā and Abbhāna. (Ibid. p. 256). The Ñatticatutthakamma is also required on the following occasions : Osāraṇa, Nissāraṇa, Sammuti, Dāna, Niggaha, Samanubhāsanā, Kammalakkhaṇa. (Pari. p. 390; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1532).

A 'conclusion' (Nigamana) is also announced at the end of the Kammavācā thus : "Khamati saṅghassa tasmā tūṇhī evaṃ etaṃ dhārayāmi ti", i. e. "This is agreeable to the Saṅgha so the Saṅgha is silent; thus I take it (for granted)." (Mv. pp. 55, 125, 150, 267, 331, 332, 333, 334 etc.). The proceedings of the Ñatticatutthakamma may be seen in the Mv. (Ibid.).

A Ñattitativakamma is not possible since it was customary to make the 'proclamation' either once or thrice'. Two time's 'proclamation' is not known. Ñatti and then was one time 'proclamation' is known as Ñattidutiyakamma.

Ñattidutiyakamma

That Kamma of the Saṅgha (ecclesiastical business) which requires a Ñatti (declaration' of the 'resolution' or 'motion') and also one time's proclamation of the Kammavācā or Anussāvanā (proceeding) is known as Ñattidutiyakamma. (Cf. Ekāya ñattiyā ceva anussāvanāya ca kattabbaṃ ñattidutiyakammaṃ nāma.—Kv. (M), pp. 255-258; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1514).

On the following seven occasions the Ñattidutiyakamma is held : Osāraṇa, Nissāraṇa, Sammuti, Dāna, Uddharaṇa, Desanā, Kammalakkhaṇa. (Pari. p. 390; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 258, 258; SP. Vol. III, p. 1531).

A 'conclusion' (Nigamana) is announced at the end of the proceeding (Kammavācā) thus : "Khamati saṅghassa tasmā tūṇhī evameva etaṃ dhārayāmi ti", i.e. "This is agreeable to the Saṅgha so the Saṅgha is silent; thus I take it (for granted)". (e.g. see Cv. p. 168). The proceeding of this may be seen in the Cv. (Ibid.).

A Ñattitativakamma is not possible since it was customary to make the 'proclamation' either once or thrice; two times' proclamation is not known. Ñatti and then 'proclamation' for three times is known as Ñatticatutthakamma.

Da

Dāka

Vegetables, green or cooked. The Buddha allowed the monks to accept all kinds of Dākas. (Mv. p. 262 ; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1167 and 1168).

Ta

Tacarajana

Dye prepared from the bark of a tree.

It is one of the dyes recommended by the Buddha for the robes of the monks. The other dyes are those prepared from roots, stems, leaves, flowers, fruits of the trees. (Mv. p. 302). The bark of Lodda or Kaṇḍula, according to the SP. [Vol. III, p. 1194], is not allowed as the dye for the robes of the monks.

Tajjanīya-Kamma

A kind of ecclesiastical action taken against a monk who is quarrelsome and who picks up quarrels in the Saṅgha. (Gf. Kasmā tajjanīyaṃ kammaṃ ti vuccati? Saṅgho kalahakāraka puggalaṃ kalahe ca bhede ca bhayaṃ dassetvā janeti, tasmā tajjanīyaṃ kammaṃ ti vuccati.—Vajirabuddhiṭṭhikā, (M), p. 509). It is a sort of 'threatening' or 'censuring' to the monk so that he may correct himself. (Cf. Yena kammena santajjanaṃ karīyati taṃ tajjanīyakammaṃ nāma.—Ibid. p. 508). This action may also be taken against a monk who is foolish (Bālo); indolent (Abyatto); prone to commit offences (Āpattibahulo); who never amends his offences (Anavadāno); who improperly comes into frequent contacts with the householders; who is not scrupulous to his 'higher morality' (Adhisīla=Pātimokkha rules) or his 'minor moral conduct' (Ajjhācāra=Rules other than Pātimokkha) or to the doctrinal views; who speaks ill of the Buddha, Dhamma or Saṅgha. All these persons deserve 'censure' (Tajjanīyakamma) and the Saṅgha may take action against them if the Saṅgha so desires. The procedure of taking this 'action' is thus: The guilty monk is presented before the Saṅgha (Sammukhā kaṭaṃ), he is thereafter interrogated about the offence (Paṭipucchā), and he should then admit about the 'wrong' he has committed (Paṭiññāya kaṭaṃ). He is reminded of the rule of the Pātimokkha or any other rule that he is infringing (Āpatti kaṭaṃ) and then he is charged with the offence alleged to have been committed by him (Codetvā, sāretvā, āpattiṃ āropetvā kaṭaṃ hoti). A 'competent' Bhikkhu moves the Ñatti (motion) before the full Saṅgha (Samaggena) proclaiming that so and so is guilty of such and such offence. Thereafter he proclaims the 'resolution' for three times requesting the Saṅgha to pronounce the Tajjanīyakamma against the monk, if the Saṅgha so desires. (It is a kind of Ñatticatutthakamma). The 'resolution' is supposed to have been carried out if the Saṅgha keeps silent. Any deviation from the above procedure makes the action invalid (Adhammakamma). (Cv. pp. 8-9).

The condemned monk has to observe the following 18 restrictions till the action taken against him is not 'revoked'. These are: (1) He cannot confer Upasampadā; (2) cannot give Nissaya ('instruction'); (3) cannot accept the nomination to 'exhort' a Bhikkhunī; (4) cannot take the service from a Sāmaṇera (novice); (5) cannot 'exhort' a Bhikkhunī even if he is nominated to do so; (6) should not commit the same offence for which he is condemned; (7) should not commit the similar offences; (8) should not commit the graver offences; (9) should not denounce the 'action' taken against him; (10) should not denounce those who took part in the Tajjanīyakamma; (11) cannot raise the objection against the presence of a monk alleged to have committed some offence in the Uposatha ceremony (as usually done by the monks); (12) or in the Pavāraṇā ceremony; (13) should not make himself a subject of reproach; (14) cannot act as a leader in the Saṅgha-kamma; (15) cannot seek permission to interrogate a monk alleged to have committed some offence; (16) cannot interrogate a monk who has committed some offence; (17) cannot remind a monk of the offence he has committed; and (18) should not make the monks quarrel among themselves.

In case the monk observes the above 18 restrictions properly, without any demur against the 'action' taken or against any member of the Saṅgha who took part in his Tajjanīyakamma, then he should approach the Saṅgha submissively and request the Saṅgha for the 'revocation' of the Tajjanīyakamma imposed upon him. He is required to make such a request for three times. A 'competent' monk then takes up his case and places the 'revocation' of Tajjanīyakamma before the full Saṅgha. The Saṅgha, if it finds that the condemned monk has scrupulously observed the above restrictions, takes up his case of 'revocation' for consideration. For this purpose a Natticatutthakamma is held by the Saṅgha and then the Tajjanīyakamma is revoked (Paṭipassambhānā). (Cv. pp. 10-11; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1233).

Taṭṭikā

A kind of mat prepared from the palm leaves, bark etc. (Cf. Taṭṭikā nāma tāḷapaṇṇādīhi vā vākehi vā katā taṭṭikā.—SP. Vol. II, p. 792; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 203).

It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under the term Seyyā as recommended by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Pāc. p. 64).

Tassapāpiyyasikā

A kind of procedure for settling the 'case' related to a Bhikkhu who prevaricates when charged with Pārājikā or similar offences. (Cv. pp. 165, 187 ff.). He is indeed a 'problem Bhikkhu' and so the Saṅgha is to declare him formally a 'sinful monk'. (Cf. Idaṃ hi yo pāpussannatāya pāpiyo puggalo tassa kattabbato tassapāpiyyasikākammaṃ ti vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1273; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 290). If a Bhikkhu is quarrelsome, or picks up quarrels, is a fool, prone to commit offences, does not get rid of them, mixes with the householders in unbecoming manners, commits the grievous or non-grievous offences, does not possess the right views, deprecates the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha, then also a formal act of Tassapāpiyyasikā may be taken up against such a person, if the Saṅgha so desires. For this purpose the full Saṅgha assembles and the matter is decided by a Ñatticatutthakamma. The action is considered as legal if, (1) condemned person is 'impure' (asuci); (2) he is unconsciencious (alajji); (3) he is being 'censured' by the Saṅgha actually for an 'offence' (sānuvādo); (4) the 'action' is dealt with according to rules; and (5) the full Saṅgha is present (Samaggena). In other words these are the 'legal grounds' for such an action.

After the formal declaration is over, the condemned monk is to observe the following 18 restrictions: (1) He cannot confer Upasampadā; (2) cannot give Nissaya (instructions); (3) cannot take the service of a Sāmaṇera (novice); (4) cannot accept the nomination to 'exhort' the Bhikkhunis; (5) cannot 'exhort' even if he is nominated to do so; (6) should not commit the same offence; (7) should not commit the similar offences for which he is condemned; (8) should not commit the graver offences; (9) should not denounce the 'action' taken against him; (10) should not denounce those who took part in this 'action'; (11) should not object the presence of a particular monk (alleged to be 'unclean') in the Uposatha ceremony; (12) or in the Pavāraṇā ceremony; (13) should not make himself a subject of reproach; (14) should not become the leader in a Saṅghakamma; (15) should not seek permission for 'interrogation'; (16) should not 'interrogate'; (17) should not 'remind' a monk of the offence he has committed; (18) and should not make monks quarrel among themselves. (Cv. p. 167).

The Saṅgha can 'take him back' (Osāraṇā) only if he behaves righteously and also if he asks for pardon. Otherwise he should not be 'taken back'. (Pari. p. 214).

This procedure is applicable to only one kind of Adhikaraṇa (case); viz. the Anuvādhādādhikaraṇa (i.e. a dispute over Sīlavipatti, Ācāravipatti, Diṭṭhivipatti and Ājīvaṇṇavipatti). (Cv. pp. 176; 187-188).

Tālacchidda

A key-hole in the door. It was allowed by the Buddha in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

• Tālavanta

A fan, particularly made of palm-leaf. Other fans made of bamboo chips or peacock-feather or of leather are also called Tālavanta. (Cf. Tālavantaṃ pana tālapaṇṇehi vā katam hoti veluvaṇṇavilīvehi vā morapiṇṇchehi vā cammavikatīhi vā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1292). The Buddha allowed the monks to use fans. (Cv. p. 219).

Tālavantaṅka

A special mode of putting on the 'under garment' (Antaravāsaka) arranged in the palm-leaf fashion. (Cf. Tālavantaṅkārena sātakaṃ olambitvā nivāsanaṃ.—

SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). This fashion was not allowed by the Buddha. And if anyone put on like this, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Tikabhojana

The meal taken by three monks at a layman's house. The Buddha allowed this number as maximum for a meal at a layman's house. The Buddha, in appreciation of this number, has said : "This practice would bring a restraint to the evil-minded individuals, would bring a comfortable living for well-behaved monks and at the same time it would be convenient for the laymen as well." (Cf. Dummaṅkūnaṃ puggalānaṃ niggaḥāya pesaḷānaṃ bhikkhūnaṃ phāsuviḥārāya, mā pāpicchā pakkhaṃ nissāya saṅghaṃ bhindeyyaṃ ti, kulānuddayaṃ ca.—Cv. p. 297). If this number exceeds, then it becomes a Gaṇabhojana, which is prohibited as it involves an offence of Pācittiya (Rule No. 32).

Tikoṭiparisuddha (-Maccha-Mamṣa)

Ticīvarena Avippavāsa (-Sammuti)

The 'formal sanction' granted by the Saṅgha to a sick monk to remain without one of the three cīvaras (Antaravāsaka, Uttarāsanga and Saṅghāṭī) when he is residing outside the Samānasaṃvāsaka Sīmā (his own 'common boundary'). For this 'sanction' the sick monk should approach the Saṅgha and obtain the 'sanction' from the Saṅgha (Sammuti). The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma to this effect. (Pārā. pp. 291-292). In case a sick monk remains without one of the three cīvaras having no formal 'sanction' (Sammuti) from the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule No. 2; Ibid.). Ordinarily the monks are allowed by the Buddha to keep away one of the three robes when living within the 'prescribed boundary'. (Ticīvaren avippavāsa-sīmā.—Mv. pp. 111-112).

Tiṇavatthāraka

A kind of procedure to settle down a quarrel between two parties of monks with a view to avoiding any further bitterness. The 'charges' and 'counter-charges' are then 'covered up' by arriving at a mutual settlement. The matter, therefore, does not require any 'verdict' from the Saṅgha, except a formal approval to this effect. It is something like the filth which if disturbed becomes a greater nuisance; and so the safest course is to 'cover' it up by spreading grass over it. So also, some matters should be shelved in the larger interest of the Saṅgha. (Cf. Yathā hi gūṭhaṃ vā muttaṃ vā ghaṭṭiyamānaṃ duggandhatāya vibādhati, tiṇehi avattharitvā supaṭicchāditassa paṇassa so gandho na bādhati. Evameva yaṃ adhikaraṇaṃ mūlānumuḷlaṃ gantvā vūpasamiyamānaṃ kakkhaḷattāya vāḷattāya saṃvattati. Taṃ iminā nayena vūpasantaṃ gūtham viya tiṇavatthārakena paṭicchannaṃ suvūpasantaṃ hotīti. Idaṃ kammaṃ tiṇavatthārakasadisattā tiṇavatthārako ti vuttaṃ.—SP. vol. III, p. 1273. Also Cf. Kv. (M), p. 291; Cv. pp. 190-192).

This sort of 'settlement' is followed only in the case of minor offences; but never in any grievous offence or in an offence concerning with a layman. (Cv. pp. 161; 190ff.).

For this purpose both the parties assemble at a place and then a 'competent' and 'able' monk proclaims thus before the Saṅgha: "Let us pacify this 'legal question' by way of 'covering up with grass', provided it does not concern with any grievous offence or with a laity". (Thapetvā thullavajjaṃ thapetvā gihipaṭisaṃyuttaṃ.—Cv. pp. 168 & 190). This is the Ñatti (motion). After this each party through an 'able' and 'competent' monk of their consent, declares that this matter may be settled by way Tiṇavatthāraka. Then a Ñattidutiyakamma is held by each party in order to confess their 'wrongs' which they had committed. Thus, the matter is settled and the monks are free from the offences. (Cv. pp. 168-170; 190-192).

Tiṇasanthāraka

A mat made of grass. It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under the term 'Seyyā' which is approved for the use of the monks. (Pāc. p. 65). It was also allowed to spread under the dyed robe if wet, in order to protect it from being soiled by dirt. (Mv. p. 303).

Titthiyadhaja

Dress of the heretical sects. It is found in the texts that other heretical sects, during the time of the Buddha, used different kinds of garments such as Kusacīra, Vāḷakambala, Vākacīra, Phalakacīra, Kesakambala, Ulūkappakkha, Ajinappakkha. The Buddha prohibited these for the use of the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. (Mv. p. 320).

Titthiyapakkantaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who has gone over to other sect. Such a person should never be given 'ordination' (Pabbajjā) or 'higher ordination' (Upasampadā) if he seeks admission into the saṅgha again. In case the person has somehow or other got his admission in to the Saṅgha, his monkhood should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 90; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1074-1075).

Timanḍala-Paṭicchādana

Covering up of the lower portion of the body with the Antaravāsaka (inner garment, sarong) so nicely that both the knees and waist upto navel are inside the garment. The antaravāsaka should hang eight aṅgulas down from the knee-bone. (Cf. Uddham nābhimaṇḍalam adho jānumaṇḍalam paṭicchādentena jānumaṇḍalassa hetṭhā jaṅghatṭhikato paṭṭhāya atṭhaṅgulamattam nivāsanaṃ otāretvā nivāsetabbam.—SP. Vol. II, p. 921; Cf. Kv-(M), p. 276). It is expected that all the monks should dress in this manner, particularly when going round the village (Mv. p. 44). One should cultivate this method of putting on the robe. It is one of the Sekhiyās in the Paṭimokkha which should be followed. (Rule No. 3; Pm. (B), pp. 21 & 53).

Tiracchānagata

A person belonging to non-human world. (Cf. Nāgo vā hotu supaṇṇamāṇava-kādīnaṃ vā aññatara antamaso sakkadevarājānaṃ upādāya yo koci amanussajātiyo sabbova imasmiṃ atthe tiracchānagato ti veditabbo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1076). Such a person is not eligible for ordination. In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this should be cancelled. If anybody ordains such a person, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 90-91).

Tiracchānavijjā

A low art or a pseudo-science (contrary to the monk's life). The monks are prohibited to study or teach any such science. If a Bhikkhu does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa (Cv. pp. 229-230); and a Bhikkhunī commits the offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 49 & 50; Pāc. pp. 417 & 418; Pm. (B), p. 42).

A number of Tiracchānavijjās are mentioned in the Brahmajālasutta, the first Sutta of the Dīghanikāya.

Tirīṭakam

A robe made out of the bark of a tree. (Cf. Rukkhachallimayaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1205). The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks. And if one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Tilakakka

A paste of the Tila, used as an ointment for healing up the wound. (Mv. p. 224; Cf. Tilakakkena atthoti piṭṭhehi tilehi attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155).

Tunnam

Stitching or darning of the cloth with thread. (Cf. Suttana saṃsibbitam tunnam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1197). The Buddha allowed the monks to do so whenever necessary. (Mv. p. 306). (It is turupanā in Hindi).

Tumba

A round shaped bottle made of iron, wood or fruit for keeping the medicinal oil. (Tumbā in Hindi). This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 223).

Tumbakaṭāha

The shell of gourd. (Tumbī in Hindi). Its use as a begging bowl was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 203).

Tulā

A pole to lift the water from the well like a balance. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 212; Cf. Paṇṇikānaṃ viya udakaubbāhanaka-tuḷaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). (Lāṭhā or Laṭṭhā in Hindi. This practice of drawing water from well is still common in Patna-Gaya districts of Bihar State).

Tulika

A mattress stuffed with cotton (Tūli). (Cf. Tūlapuṇṇā bhisī.—Vimativinodanī-ṭīkā (M), Vol. II, p. 184. Also Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). It was regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana; and hence was not allowed for the use of monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211; Cf. Cv. p. 258).

Tela

Oil which is regarded as one of the medicines allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 213). The monks might use the oil of Tiḷa (sesame), Madhūka (oil from the seed of Bassia Latifolia), castor and animal fat as medicine. (Pārā. pp. 357-358; Pāc. pp. 123-124; 485; Pari. p. 231). Oil was generally used for the preparation of delicious food (paṇītabhojanāni). If a monk himself asked for a meal prepared with oil and took that food, he committed an offence of Pācittiya (Rule No. 39; Pāc. pp. 123-134; Pm. (B), p. 14); and a Bhikkhunī committed an offence of Pāṭidesanīya. (Rule No 3; Pāc. p. 485; Pm. (B), p. 52).

A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī could store oil for a period of seven days only; and if stored for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25; Pārā. pp. 346-357; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 722-725).

It was also regarded as a thing to be licked. (Pāṭisāyanīyāni.—Ibid.).

Toraṇa

An outer arched gateway in an Ārāma. (Cf. Upari mālādiyuttam sobhanatham-bhadvayam ubhayato nikkhaṇṭvā yaṃ bahidvāram.—Abhidhānappadīpikā Ṭīkā (M), p. 111, Verse No. 204). Such a gateway was approved by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 248).

Tha

Thullakumārī

An unmarried lady, old or young; a spinster. (Cf. Yobbanapattā yobbanātītā vā kumārī.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1042). A Bhikkhu should not frequent the Thullakūmārī's house. A Titthiya-parivāsaka is particularly warned against such visits. (Mv. p. 74; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1042).

Thullaccaya

A 'grave offence' (Thulla+Accaya). Although Thullaccaya is one of the offences which may be amended for by confessing the 'offence' before another monk, it is the most serious one amongst all such offences. (Cf. Desanāgaminīsu accayesu tena samo thūlo accayo natthi tenetaṃ iti vuccti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1458). Other offences which may be made up by confession before another monk are: Pācittiya, Paṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa, Dubbhāsita. (Cf. Thullaccayaṃ ti yaṃ vuttam, taṃ suṇohi yathātatham. Ekassa mūle yo deseti, yo ca taṃ paṭigaṇhāti. Accayo tena samo natthi, tenetaṃ iti vuccati.—Pari. p. 263).

Amongst all the 'offences' mentioned in the texts, the Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa are regarded as most serious ones as these cannot be made up by 'confession' before another monk. The next in gravity is the Thullaccaya; and hence it is 'grievous' (Thūla) amongst the rest. In fact, the offence may be regarded as Thullaccaya if it appears as Pārājika or Saṅghādisesa but actually it is not so. In other words, an offence similar to Pārājika or Saṅghādisesa may be considered as Thullaccaya. For instance, if a Bhikkhu attempts to commit suicide; or if a Bhikkhu attempts to threaten the peace and unity of the Saṅgha; or if a Bhikkhu steals something trifling (worth more than one but less than five Māsakas), such a person is regarded as to have committed the Thullaccaya. (For details see Pārā, p. 66 ff.).

Thullavajjā-Āpatti

Most grievous offences; viz. Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa. It is the same as Garukāpatti. (Cf. Thulladose paññattā garukāpatti.—SP. Vol., III, p. 1420; also Cf. Pari, p. 211).

Theyyasamvāsaka

A person who has entered into the Saṅgha putting on the robe by himself (like a monk), without having his proper Pabbajjā ('ordination') or Upasampadā ('higher ordination'). In other words, an imposter who has joined the Saṅgha 'stealthily'. Such a person should never be ordained; and if he has already received his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. pp. 89-90; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1069-1070).

Thera (-Bhikkhu)

A monk of ten years 'standing from his Upasampadā' is called Thera (-bhikkhu). (Cf. Paripuṇṇadasavassatāya therō.—SP. Vol. I, p. 232). An 'able' and 'competent' Thera can act as an Upajjhāya or Ācariya. (Mv. pp. 57 & 67).

Similarly a nun of ten years' standing is known as Therī. A monk or a nun of twenty years' standing is known as Mahāthera or Mahātherī respectively.

Therī (-Bhikkhunī)

Feminine of Thera.

DaDaṇḍakaṭhina

A wooden-frame fixed inside the frame of the Kaṭhina (used when necessary for stitching the robe). (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Tassa majjhe ittarassa bhikkhuno pamāṇena aññaṃ nisseṇiṃ bandhitum.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Daṇḍakathāḷaka

A laddle or spoon with a handle. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks to take out the boiling dye from the pot. (Mv. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1195).

Daṇḍakamma

A kind of punishment imposed on a Sāmaṇera (novice) who does not show proper respect and courtesy to the monks; and also who possesses these five evil qualities; viz. he manipulates for non-receiving the gains which are due to the monks; he manipulates for the matters non-profiting to the monks; he manipulates for the non-residence of the monks; he indulges in reviling and abusing the monks; and he tends to create 'dissension' amongst the monks. (Bhikkhūnaṃ alabbhāya parisakkati, bhikkhūnaṃ anattāya....., bhikkhūnaṃ anāvāsāya....., bhikkhū akkosati paribhāsati, bhikkhū bhikkhūhi bhedeti. Anujānāmi bhikkhave imehi pañcaṅgehi samannāgatassa sāmaṇerassa daṇḍakammaṃ kātum.—Mv. (pp. 87-88). When a Daṇḍakamma is imposed upon a Sāmaṇera, he is then prohibited to stay at the place where he has been residing. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, yattha vā vasati yattha vā paṭikkamati, tattha āvaraṇaṃ kātum ti.—Ibid. p. 88). But before taking this action of Āvaraṇa on account of the Daṇḍakamma, the permission of his Upajjhāya or Ācariya must be taken; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. p. 88; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1066).

It is also mentioned in the SP. [Vol. III, p. 1066] that if the Saddhivihārika or Antevāsika is found behaving unmannerly, he should also be dealt with likewise.

A Daṇḍakamma may be imposed upon a Bhikkhunī also if she is found behaving improperly. In the first instance the condemned Bhikkhunī should be disallowed to enter into the Vihāra (Āvaraṇa). But if she does not even mind this prohibition, she should not be granted 'exhortation' (Ovādam thapetum). And when a nun is disallowed of 'exhortation', she should not be allowed to be present in the Uposatha ceremony with the other Bhikkhunīs till the matter is settled. (Cv. p. 383).

In case the monks do not behave with the Bhikkhunīs in proper manner, a Daṇḍakamma may be imposed upon them and then the Bhikkhunīs need not pay them respects (Avandiya). (Ibid. p. 382).

Daṇḍasatthaka

A small knife with a handle (for cutting the robes). (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1287). The handle should not be made of costly materials, like gold, silver etc.; otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. It may however be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit (nuts), iron or conch-shell. (Cv. p. 204).

Daṇḍasammuti

Ordinarily a stick is not allowed for the monks; but if a sick monk cannot do without a stick, he may be allowed by the Saṅgha at a 'unanimous consent'. This 'unanimous consent' for allowing a stick for the sick monk is known as Daṇḍasammuti. For this purpose the Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. The sick monk must obtain this permission from the Saṅgha before he uses a stick. (Cv. p. 221).

Daṇḍasikkā

A string-net hung on a stick. (Sikahara in Hindi). The Buddha did not allow it for the monks to hang their bowls. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkata. (Cv. p. 221). But a sick monk was, however, allowed to use it after the 'unanimous consent' (Sammuti) obtained from the Saṅgha. (Ibid. pp. 221-222).

Daṇḍasikkāsammuti

A 'unanimous consent' granted by the Saṅgha (Sammuti) to allow a sick monk to use the Daṇḍasikkā (a string-net hung on a stick) for hanging the bowl. The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for this purpose. (Cv. p. 222).

Dantakaṭṭha

A tooth-stick, to be used for cleaning the teeth. In the beginning all the Bhikkhus of the Saṅgha were not in the habit of using the tooth-stick daily. The Buddha then admonished the monks and enjoined them to use it daily. (Cv. p. 227). Its smallest size should be of four Angulas, while the longest must not be more than 8 Angulas. (Ibid. p. 228).

Dantakāsāva

A robe dyed in the ivory pale colour (i.e. very light pale colour). The Buddha did not allow it for the monks. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1195).

Daḷhikamma

Over-stitching a piece of cloth for making the robe strong. (Cf. Anuddharitvā upassayaṃ katvā alliyapaṇakam vatthakhaṇḍam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1196). The Buddha has advised the monks to do so whenever it is found necessary. (Mv. p. 306).

Dārubhaṇḍa

Wood, wooden furniture, wooden utensils, wood materials for building a Vihāra etc. are known as Dārubhaṇḍa. These things can neither be 'given away' (Avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (Avebhaṅgiya). If anyone does so, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya. (Cv. pp. 226, 268). A big list of such wooden things is found in the SP. [Vol. III, pp. 1328-1329].

The monks are allowed to use wooden articles, except an Āsandi (a high couch), a Pallaṅka (a kind of another high couch), a wooden bowl (Dārupatta) and wooden slippers. (Cv. p. 233).

Dāruvāraka

A wooden jar or bucket to fetch water from the well. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 212). It is one of the several other things of Vihāra which cannot be 'given away' (Avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (Avebhaṅgiya). (Ibid. pp. 266, 268).

Dāsa

A slave. A slave should not be ordained. If one does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 80). Four kinds of slaves are mentioned, viz. a slave by heredity, i.e. from a slave parent (Anto jāto); a purchased slave (Dhanakkīto); a war-prisoner or sentenced by the king to become a slave (Karamarāṇīto); and one who has become a slave by himself (Sayaṃdāsabyaṃ upagato). (SP. Vol. III, p. 1092).

A freed slave is known as Bhujissa; and he may be ordained. (Mv. p. 97).

Diṭṭhivipatti

A heresy or wrong view, which becomes self-manifested if one speaks against the Buddha and misinterprets the Dhamma. (Pari. p. 259; Cv. pp. 44, 45, 47, 171, 359-361, 366 etc.; Mv. p. 191).

Dīghadsā-Cīvara

A robe having wide fringe. It was not allowed by the Buddha for the monk. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 321).

Dukkaṭṭa

A kind of offence on account of 'wrong action' or 'evil action' or 'improper action'. (Cf. Yaṃ hi duṭṭhukatam virūpaṃ vā katam taṃ dukkaṭṭam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1458; also Cf. Aparaddham viraddham ca, khalitam yaṃ ca dukkaṭṭam. Yaṃ manusso kare pāpaṃ āvi vā yadi vā raho, dukkaṭṭam ti pavedenti, tenetaṃ ti vuccati.—Pari. p. 264).

There are many kinds of Dukkaṭṭa offences. They are classified into eight groups, viz., (1) Pubbayogadukkaṭṭa (The preliminary attempt preceding to the actual offence of Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa or Pācittiya); (2) Sahapayogadukkaṭṭam (The previous actions which lead to the actual commitment of a grievous offence); (3) Anāmasadukkaṭṭa (Offence committed by mere touching the jewels, grains or alms); (4) Ñātadukkaṭṭa (Offence on account of not informing the offence to some one or to the Saṅgha or to one who ought to be informed); (5) Vinayadukkaṭṭa (Offence connected with alms); (6) Durupaciṇṇadukkaṭṭa (Offence by holding or touching or shaking a fruity tree); (7) Ñattidukkaṭṭa (Offence connected with the Ñatti (motion)); (8) Paṭissavadukkaṭṭa (Offence on account of breaking promise). (SP. Vol. I, pp. 306-307).

This offence is not explicitly mentioned in the list of the Pātimokkha; but all the Sekhiyā rules if violated involve the Dukkaṭṭa offence. (Cf. Pāc. p. 245 ff.; Also Kv. (M), p. 276).

Dukkaṭṭa is a sort of light offence and is grouped under Aduṭṭhullā, Lahukā and Desanāgāmini Āpattis.

Duṭṭhulla-Āpatti

The Pārājikā and the Saṅghādisesā are called Duṭṭhullāpatti. It is also known as Garukāpatti. (Pāc. pp. 51, 173; SP. Vol. III, p. 1368; Kv. (M), p. 195). The other five kinds of offences, viz. Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭṭa and Dubbhāsita are called Aduṭṭhullāpatti or Lahukāpatti. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1368). The Duṭṭhullāpatti, as the name indicates, is a group of grievous offences while the others are regarded as lighter offences.

If a Bhikkhu tells about the Duṭṭhullāpatti to a non-Bhikkhu or non-Bhikkhunī, he commits an offence of Pācittiya; save and except he has obtained the permission from the Saṅgha to speak so. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 9; Cf. Bhikkhunī Rule No. 105: Pāc. p. 50 ff.; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 46).

Again, if a monk conceals the Duṭṭhullāpatti of another monk deliberately, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 64; Pāc p. 173).

Duṭṭhulla-Vācā

Lewd speech connected with sex or sexual matters of about the privies or unchastity. (Vaccamaggapassāvamaggamethunadhammapāṭisṣmyuttā vācā.—Pārā. p. 185). If a monk indulges himself in such a speech with a lady, he commits the offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Rule No. 3; Ibid. p. 185).

Dubbaṇṇakarapa

To make 'ugly' or 'disfigure' a new robe or a new mat before its use. In the Patimokkha it is laid down that a new robe (Civara) or a new mat (Nisīdana-santhata) must be made 'ugly' before it is used. The new robe should be made 'ugly' by tarnishing at its one end with blue, black or mud before use. The tarnished portion may be of about the size of the peacock's eye or the back of a bug. (Maṅgura-piṭṭhi.—Kv. (M), p. 242: Cf. Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭikā (M), Vol. IV, p. 166; SP. Vol. II, pp. 888-889). In case the robe is used without making it 'ugly' by tarnishing, the Bhikkhu commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 58, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 139; Pāc. p. 164; Pm. (B), pp. 15 & 49). Similarly the new mat should be made 'ugly' by patching all around a piece of old mat to the size of a span of the Buddha (Sugata-vidatthi). In case the old piece of mat is not stitched with the new one and it is used, the monk commits an offence of Nissaggiya-Pācittiya. (Rule No. 15; Pāc. p. 332; Pm. (B), p. 9).

Dubbhāsita

An offence of 'bad' speech. It may be against the Buddha, Dhamma or Saṅgha or against any person. (Cf. Dubbhāsitaṃ durābhaṭṭhaṃ saṅkiliṭṭhaṃ ca yaṃ padaṃ. Yaṃ ca viññū garahanti, tenetaṃ iti vuccati.—Pari. p. 264; Also Cf. Duṭṭhu ābhaṭṭhaṃ bhāsitaṃ lapitaṃ ti durābhaṭṭhaṃ. Yaṃ durābhaṭṭhaṃ taṃ dubbhāsitaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 754, III, p. 1459).

It is one of the Āpattis grouped under Aduṭṭhullāpatti or Lahukāpatti or Desanā-gāmini Āpatti (i.e. light offence).

Dussa-Cālīnī

A cloth-sieve, particularly used for making fine medicinal powder. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Mv. p. 221).

Dussa-Palatthikā

A posture of squatting or sitting by tying a piece of cloth around the knees together with the backbone. (Cf. Ukkuṭikaṃ nisīditaṃ hatthehi jānuṃ bandhitaṃ hatthapalatthikā; tattha dussena piṭṭhikaṇṭakassa jānuṃ ca bandhanaṃ dussapalatthikā nāma.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 164).

A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī is not allowed to sit in this posture in a layman's house or in a village. (Sekhiyā Rule No. 26; Pm. (B), pp. 22 & 53). If one sits in this posture, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Pāc. p. 255).

Dedḍubhakam

A kind of belt like the water-snake's head. (Udakasappasāsadisam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). Its use was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 226).

Desanāgāmini-Āpatti

An offence which can be redressed by confession or acknowledgement of the offence; i. e. the Āpattis other than the Pārājikā and Saṅghādisesā. The Āpattis grouped under the Desanāgāmini-āpatti are : Thullaccay, Pācittiya, Paṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa and Dubbhāsita. This group of offence is lighter than the group of Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa and hence it is also known as Lahukāpatti or Aduṭṭhullāpatti. (Cf. Desanāgāmini āpattitī lahukadukasāṅgahitaṃ.—SP. Vol III, p. 1418; Also Cf. Pari. p. 211; Pāc. p. 173).

Dvaṅgulakappa

To regard the taking of meal as 'proper' even after the shade of the sun has passed away beyond the two finger's breadth in the after-noon. It was one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as 'proper'. But when this matter came up in the Second Buddhist Council held at Vesāli one hundred years after the Buddha, it was held as 'improper' since it involved an offence of Pācittiya (Rule No. 37; Pāc. pp. 120-121; Cv. p. 428).

DhaDhajabandhacora

A notorious thief. (Cf. Dhajaṃ bhandhitvā viya vicaratīti dhajabandho. Mūladevādayo viya loke pākato ti vuttam hoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1048). The Buddha prohibited the ordination of a Dhajabandhacora; and if anybody ordained him, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 78).

Dhammakaraka

A kind of water strainer for filtering the water; a water-filter. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 207).

Dhurabhatta or Dhuvabhatta

The (cooked) food (meal) supplied daily, constantly (Niccabhattam). It may be of two kinds: (1) Saṅghikaṃ, i.e. for the Saṅgha; (2) Puggalikaṃ, i.e. for a particular person. Usually such a meal is sent by a layman to the Vihāra or is offered at his own residence for which he makes an express invitation to a particular monk or to the Saṅgha. (Cf. Dhurabhattam ti niccabhattam vuccati, tam duvidham, saṅghikaṃ puggalikaṃ ca.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1357).

Uruvela Kassapa, a former Jaṭila ascetic, offered a Dhurabhatta to the Buddha which the latter accepted. (Mv. p. 27). Similarly a Dhurabhatta was offered by Citta Gahapati to the Venerable Sudhamma, when the latter was very busy. (Cv. p. 32).

Dhūmanetta (I)

A chimney to let out the smoke from the Jantāghara. This was recommended by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 209; Cf. Dhūmanikkhamanachiddaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1289).

Dhūmanetta (II)

A kind of smoke-pipe which was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks when they suffered from acute headache. The Dhūmanetta should not be made of costly materials like gold or silver; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. It might be made of ivory, bone, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, iron, fruit or of conch-shell. (Mv. p. 223). The Buddha also allowed its lids and two bags with strings to carry it. (Ibid. p. 223). (It is something like the modern Hukkā used in some parts of India for smoking).

Dhotapādaka

A cloth-door-mat; or a piece of cloth spread on the ground in order to wipe off the feet before entering into a house. (Cf. Pādadhovanaṭhāne dhotehi pādehi akkamanatthāya paccattharaṇaṃ atthataṃ hoti, taṃ akkamituṃ vaṭṭati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1292). The Buddha allowed the monks to step over it. (Cv. p. 218).

NaNatthukamma

Pouring of some medicine through the nose by a pipe (Natthukaraṇī). The Buddha allowed this for the monks when they suffered from acute headache. (Mv. p. 222).

Natthukaraṇī

A tube or dropper to be put in the nose to pour some medicine when suffering from acute headache. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. It might be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit, iron or conch-shell. But it must not be of costly materials like gold or silver; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. The Natthukaraṇī might be of two tubes (Yamakanatthukaraṇī). (Mv. pp. 222-223).

Namataka (I)

A razor-case or knife-case, made of a piece of cloth. (Cf. Satthakavethanakaṃ pilotikakhaṇḍaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1287). This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks to keep their razor or knife (Satthaka). (Cv. pp. 204; 224).

Namataka (II)

A kind of wool-mat, which was prepared not by weaving but by glueing. (It is called Namadā in Hindi). (Cf. Namatakam nāma santhatasadisam ti keci vadanti. Keci pana rukkhatacamayam ti.—Vimativinodanīṭṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 234; Eḷakalomehi kataṃ avāyimaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1290). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. As it was not a robe or robe-cloth, it did not need the 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna) or the 'assignment' (Vikappanā) before its use. (Cv. p. 213).

Navakamma

Repairs of a building, or construction of a new Vihāra or such a building. The Buddha allowed the monks to repair or to construct a new Vihāra for the purpose of the monks. The Saṅgha used to select a monk to look after the Navakamma. He was known as Navakammika. (Cv. p. 254). A work of minor nature should not be declared as Navakamma; for instance, preparing of mud, colouring of Vihāra etc. The duration of the Navakamma should not be very long, say of twenty or thirty years or one's whole life. If such a long work was undertaken, the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Ibid. pp. 268-271).

The Navakamma of a Vihāra which has not yet been started or not yet completed may be taken up. The duration of the Navakamma of a small Vihāra should not be more than five to six years; of an Adḍhayaṅga seven to eight years; of a big Vihāra or a Pāsāda according to the exigency of the work but never more than ten to twelve years. (Ibid. pp. 268-269 Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1330-1331). At a time only one building should be taken up; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Ibid. p. 269).

The Navakamma was allowed for the nuns also. (Ibid. p. 399).

Navakammika (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who is in-charge of the repairs or the construction of a new Vihāra or any such building is known as a Navakammika Bhikkhu. The Saṅgha selects a monk who is proficient in looking after the construction work. The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for the selection of such a Bhikkhu. (Cv. p. 254).

The Navakammika monk should not go away anywhere till the work is completed; otherwise he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 269). The Navakammika monk is also granted a 'preferential seat' (Varaseyyā) during the rainy season (Vassā). (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1331). In case the appointed Navakammika monk is not found fit, the work may be entrusted to another competent monk. (Ibid. pp. 269-270).

Navanīta

Butter. It was one of five medicines allowed by the Buddha for the monks; others being Ghee, oil, honey and molasses. (Mv. pp. 55, 100, 218). The butter from the milk of cow, goat, buffalo or of any such animal whose meat was not prohibited might be used by the monks. (Parā. p. 357).

Navanīta was used for the preparation of delicious meals (Paṇītabhojanāni). And if a monk himself asked a meal prepared with butter and took it, he committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 39; Pāc. pp. 123-124; Pm. (B). p. 14).

A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī was allowed to store it for seven days. But if it was kept for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25; Cf. Parā. p. 356; SP. Vol. II, pp. 721-722; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37).

It was also a thing to be licked (Paṭisāyanīya). (Parā. p. 356).

Navabhikkhu

A Bhikkhu who has not yet completed full five years since his Upasampadā is known as Navabhikkhu. (Cf. Ūnapañcavassatāya navo.—SP. Vol. I, p. 232; also Cf. Parā. p. 29).

Nālikāgabbha

A large apartment of a Vihāra with long quadrangular dimensions. (Cf. Vitthārato diguṇatiguṇāyāmo dīghagabbho.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1302-1303). The Buddha approved such an apartment in a Vihāra. In a big Vihāra it might be constructed in the middle; but in small ones it must be at one side. (Cv. p. 245).

Nāsacchinna

A person whose nose is cut. (Cf. Yassa ajāpādake vā agge vā ekapaṭe vā yatthakatthaci chinna hoti. Yass pana nāsikā sakkā hoti sandhetum so taṃ phāsukaṃ phāsukaṃ katvā pabbājetabho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1081). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person has got his ordination, this need not be cancelled. But his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Nāsanā

‘Revocation’ of the privileges of a Sāmaṇera (novice) or a Bhikkhunī (nun) (not of a Bhikkhu) on account of his or her misbehaviour, is known as Nāsanā. There are three kinds of Nāsanā, viz. (i) Liṅganāsanā; i. e. depriving of the robe (e.g. Mettiyā Bhikkhunī.—Parā. p. 244); (ii) Samvāsanaśanā, i. e. depriving of the association with other monks (e.g. Kaṇṭaka.—Pāc. pp. 186-187); (iii) Daṇḍakammaśanā, i. e. expelling of a Sāmaṇera for committing an offence (like Kaṇḍaka Sāmaṇera.—Mv. p. 89). (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1421).

Nāsanantikā

It is one of the 'eight occasions' when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) granted to a Bhikkhu who has received the Kaṭhina cīvara are forfeited or withdrawn. It occurs when a Bhikkhu goes away from his Vihārasīmā and then decides to make the robe there but not to return to his own Vihāra. The robe that he made was, of course, from the Kaṭhina cloth granted to him (Kaṭhinadussa); but since he did not return to his Vihāra, this robe should be regarded as 'lost' by itself. And hence it is known as 'Nāsanantikā'. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180). Also see KATĪHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Nikhādana

A chisel, (belonging to the Saṅgha). This is one of the things of the Saṅgha which cannot be 'given away' (Avissajjiya) nor can it be 'divided' (Avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1326).

Niṭṭhānantikā

It is one of the 'eight occasions' when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) granted to a Bhikkhu who has received the Kaṭhina cīvara is forfeited or withdrawn. It occurs when a Bhikkhu goes away from his Vihārasīmā and then decides to make the robe but not to return to his own Vihāra. This is known as Niṭṭhānantikā. (Here the robe has not yet been prepared; but he has decided not to return). (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180). Also see KATĪHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Nimantana

A direct invitation for a meal by a layman to a monk; or invitation through the Saṅgha to a monk. The Buddha allowed to accept such a meal. (Cv. p. 272; Mv. p. 55). The Nimantana is of two kinds; viz., (i) Puggalika : The invitation received from the donor directly; (ii) Saṅghika : The invitation received through the Saṅgha. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1344-1347).

Niyassakamma

Nillekha-Jantāghara

A special type of Jantāghara which was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 212). It was probably a fully covered Jantāghara in which a little space was left open in the roof (probably for smoke). (Cf. Āviddhapakkhapāsakaṃ vuccati. Gopānasīnaṃ upari maṇḍale pakkhapāsake thapetvā katakūṭacchadanassetam nāmaṃ.—SP. Vol. p. 1290; Cf. Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 233).

Nisada

A grinding stone. (Sila in Hindi). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks to grind the medicinal roots, etc. (Mv. p. 220; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1153).

Nisadapotaka

The grinding stone, a piece of stone of about six inches, to grind something on Nisada. (It is called Loṛhā in Hindi). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks to grind the medicinal roots, etc. (Mv. p. 220; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1153).

Nisīdana

A spreading, primarily used for sitting. This was one of the nine 'robes' allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, kāyaguttiyā cīvaraguttiyā senāsanaguttiyā nisīdanam.—Mv. p. 311). The recommended size of a Nisīdana is two Sugata-spans in length and one and half Sugata-spans in breadth and one Sugata-span as its fringe. If the size exceeds, it must be cut to the recommended measurement and then to be used; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 89; Pāc. pp. 226-227; Pm. (B), p. 19). The Nisīdana should have the fringe on its three sides only. (Cf. Santhasādisaṃ santharituṃ ekasmiṃ ante sugatavidatthipamāṇaṃ dvīsu tṛāṇesu phāletvā katahi tāhi dasāhi yuttassa parikkhārassetaṃ nāma.—Kv. (M), p. 270; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 914).

Before it is used it must be made 'ugly' (Dubbaṇṇakaraṇa) by patching a piece of old Nisīdana. If it is not so done and the Nisīdana is used, an offence of the Nissaggiya Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 15; Pārā. p. 332; Pm. (B) p. 9).

Its purpose was to protect the body, robe and bed. (Kāyaguttiyā, cīvaraguttiyā, senāsanaguttiyā.—Mv. p. 311).

Nissaggiya Pācittiya

A kind of 'offence' which requires a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī to abandon those robes or bowls etc. which are in question considering size, preparation etc.; and then to formally confess the 'offence' in the presence of the Saṅgha, or Gaṇa or a monk (as the case may be). (Cf. Saṅghamajjhe gaṇamajjhe ekasseva ca ekato nissajjitvā na deseti, tenetaṃ iti vuccati.—Pari. p. 263; Also Cf. Pārā. pp. 288-289; Pāc. p. 331. Also Cf. Nissajjanaṃ nissaggiyaṃ pubbabhāge kattabbassa vinayakammassa etaṃ nāmaṃ.—Kv. (M), p. 155; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 644-648).

• The number of the Nissaggiya Pācittiya is thirty, both in the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha and Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha; but considering the contents only eighteen are common to both and the remaining twelve are different.

The Bhikkhu Nissaggiya Pācittiyas are divided into three main groups (Vaggas); viz., (i) Cīvaravagga, (ii) Eḷakavagga and (iii) Pattavagga. Each Vagga consists of ten rules. The rules in the Cīvaravagga deal with the robe and robe cloth. In the Eḷakavagga, seven rules are connected with the rug-mat. The eighth rule of this Vagga refers to the restrictions for accepting gold, silver or coins or money. The ninth rule forbids a Bhikkhu from buying anything on cash payment. The tenth rule lays down the restriction for making any sale-purchase business with the laymen (Kayavikkaya). In the Pattavagga, two rules are connected with the bowl (Patta); the third one is related to the medicine and the next six rules are connected with the robe and robe-cloth. The tenth rule of this group is in respect of 'misappropriating' a proposed gift of the Saṅgha to himself. (Pm. (B), pp. 6-10).

As mentioned above, only twelve rules of the Bhikkhunī Nissaggiya Pacittiya are different from the Bhikkhu ones. The different rules are : No. 1, connected with bowl; Nos. 2-3 with robe cloth; Nos. 4,5,6,7,8,9 & 10 are connected with the breaking of promise or misappropriation of funds etc. Nos. 11 & 12 are connected with the shawls (Pāpuraṇa). (Pm. (B), pp. 34-38). The names of the Vaggās of the Bhikkhunī Nissaggiya Pacittiya are the following : (i) Pattavagga, (ii) Civara-vagga and (iii) Jātarūpavagga.

Nissaya (I)

The Four 'Resources' or 'Requisites' essential for the life of a Bhikkhu are known as Nissaya. These are : (i) Meal by begging (Piṇḍiyālopabhojana); (ii) Robe from collecting the rags (Paṃsukūlacīvara); (iii) Dwelling under the tree (Rukkhamūlasenāsana); (iv) Urine as the medicine (Pūtimuttabhēsajja). It is expected that the Bhikkhus would endeavour to uphold them for the whole life. (Mv. pp.55, 100). Of course, certain relaxations were also allowed. For instance, meals other than begging, such as invitation by a layman. Similarly, clothes of Khoma, Koseyya, Kambala, Sāṇa, Bhaṅga might be used by a monk. For residence, Vihāra, Adḍhayoga, Pāsāda, Hammiya and Guhā were also permitted; and for medicines, ghee, butter, oil, honey and molasses might be taken (Ibid.).

Nissaya (II)

An ecclesiastical act for seeking 'tutelage' or 'guidance' under a monk (who has spent at least ten years after his Upasampadā) by a fully ordained monk whose Upajjhāya has been 'lost'. In other words, it is a formal act of taking up an Ācariya in place of his Upajjhāya. Only an 'able' and 'competent' (hyatto paṭibalo) monk of ten years standing should accept this proposal. Under the guardianship of the Ācariya the Bhikkhu gets his training in the Dhamma and Vinaya and remains under his 'guidance' till he completes five years after his Upasampadā. The period of Nissaya may be extended if the trainee monk does not accomplish himself so as to live without any 'guidance'. The period may be extended even for the whole life no matter if the Ācariya is younger than him in respect of age. (Mv. pp. 57-58; 83-85; Cf. Pari. pp. 316-320; SP. Vol. III, p. 1055).

The procedure of taking up the Nissaya under the Ācariya is simple. The desirous monk approaches him and salutes him by squatting and utters thus for three times: "Please become my Ācariya; I wish to live under your 'guidance'. (Ekasmim uttarāsaṅgaṃ karitoṃ pāde vanditoṃ ukkuṭikaṃ nisīditoṃ añjaliṃ paggaheva eva- massa vacantiyo: Ācariyo me, bhante, hohi, āyasmato nissāya vacchāmi".—Mv. p. 58). The Nissaya is supposed to be granted if the Ācariya gives his assent either by speech or by gesture or by both. (Ibid.).

The Nissaya is regarded as 'nullified' and the Bhikkhu ceases to be the Ācariya under the following six circumstances: When the Ācariya goes away; or disrobes; or dies; or changes his religion; or the trainee monk is 'expelled' or when the trainee monk is 'united' with his Upajjhāya. (Chayimā, bhikkhave, nissayapaṭipassaddhiyo ācariyamhā. Ācariyo pakkanto vā hoti, vibbhanto vā, kālaṅkato vā, pakkhasaṅkato vā, āṇatti yeva pañcamī, upajjhāyena samodhānagato hoti.—Ibid. p. 67).

Sometimes the acceptance of 'guardianship' under the Upajjhāya is also regarded as Nissaya. (Ibid. p. 67). The Nissaya under Upajjhāya is considered as 'nullified' under the five circumstances, as mentioned above, except the last one. See also ĀCARIYA and ANTEVĀSIKA.

A 'shameless' bhikkhu (Alajjī) should never be granted Nissaya nor one should live under the 'guidance' of a 'shameless' Ācariya. For four or five days the nature of the person should be studied. (Ibid. p. 96).

Under certain circumstances a Bhikkhu may remain without a Nissaya for the time being. This may be when he is going on a long journey; or he is sick; or is to attend upon a sick person; or is residing in the forest with the hope to find an Ācariya. (Ibid. p. 96).

Nissayakamma or Niyassakamma

A kind of ecclesiastical action taken against a monk who is indiscreet and indiscriminate in his association with the house-holders; and who is prone to commit so many Saṅghādisesa offences that the Saṅgha has to remain always engaged in performing the ecclesiastical acts like Parivāsa, Mūlāyapaṭikassanā, Mānatta or Abbhāna. The Saṅgha then takes up this action. It is rather to persuade the 'wrong-doer' monk to take up a teacher and abide by his instructions (Nissaya vatthabbam.—Cv. p. 13; Mv. p. 348). This action may also be taken against a monk who is quarrelsome and picks up quarrel in the Saṅgha; is foolish; indolent and prone to commit other offences and never amends for his offences committed; is unscrupulous to 'higher morality' (Adhisīla=Pātimokkha rules) or to 'minor moral conduct' (Ajjhācāra=Rules other than Pātimokkha) or to the doctrinal views; speaks ill of the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. The Saṅgha may take this action against such a person if it so desires.

The procedure for taking this ecclesiastical action is thus : The guilty monk is made present before the Saṅgha (Sammukhā katam) and then he is interrogated for his offence (Paṭipucchā). He should then admit that he has committed something 'wrong' (Paṭiññāyakatam). He is then reminded of the rule of the Pātimokkha or any other rule that he has violated (Āpatti kataṃ). After that he is charged with the offence alleged to have been committed by him. (Codetvā, sāretvā, āpattiṃ āropetvā kataṃ hoti.—Cv. p. 13). A 'competent' monk moves a Ñatti (motion) before the full Saṅgha (samaggena) that so and so is guilty of such and such offence/s and requests three times to the Saṅgha to pronounce the Nissayakamma, if the Saṅgha thinks fit. (This is held as a Ñatticatutthakamma). Any deviation from this procedure makes the action invalid (Adhammakamma). (Ibid. pp. 12-17).

The monk against whom this action is pronounced (1) should not confer Upasampadā; (2) should not give Nissaya to others; (3) should not take service from a Samaṇera; (4) should not accept the nomination to 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs; (5) should not 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs even if already nominated; (6) should not commit the same offence for which he is condemned; (7) should not commit the similar offences; (8) should not commit graver offences; (9) should not denounce the action taken against him, (10) should not denounce those who took part in this action; (10) should not object to the presence of any Bhikkhu in the Upasatha ceremony; (12) or in the Pavāraṇā ceremony; (13) should not do any reproachable act; (14) should not act as a leader in any Saṅgha-kamma; (15) should not seek permission to 'interrogate' another monk alleged to have committed some offence; (16) should not 'interrogate' a monk who has committed some offence; (17) should not 'remind' a monk of the offence committed; (18) should not make the monks quarrel among themselves. (Ibid. p. 17).

In case the condemned monk observes the above 18 restrictions scrupulously without any demur against any member of the Saṅgha who took part in his Nissayakamma, he may approach the Saṅgha for its 'revocation' (Paṭipassambhanā). He then requests the Saṅgha for three times to this effect. A 'competent' monk then moves the Ñatti (motion) thus : "If the Saṅgha finds the condemned monk to have observed the restrictions scrupulously, the Saṅgha may take up his case of 'revocation'. This he utters for three times before the Saṅgha. Thus a Ñatticatutthakamma is held by the Saṅgha for this purpose; and when all the members of the Saṅgha agree to 'revoke' the Nissaya, then only the 'revocation' is formally granted; and the monk becomes free from the offence. (Ibid. pp. 17-19; Mv. pp. 353-354).

Nissaya-Paṭipassaddhi

'Nullification' of 'guidance' or 'tutelage' (Nissaya) of a trainee Bhikkhu under an Ācariya or Upajjhāya. In the following circumstances the Nissaya under the Ācariya is regarded as 'nullified' : When the Ācariya goes away; or disrobes; or dies; or changes his religion; or the trainee Bhikkhu is 'expelled'; or the trainee Bhikkhu is 'united' again with his Upajjhāya. (Cf. Chayimā, bhikkhave, nissaya-paṭipassaddhiyo Ācariyamhā : Ācariyo pakkanto vā hoti; vibbhanto vā; kālaṅkato vā; pakkhasaṅkato vā; ānatti yeva pañcamī; upajjhāyena vā samodhānagato vā hoti.—Mv. p.67). In the case of the 'nullification' under the Upajjhāya, it is effected under the above circumstances except the last one. (Ibid.).

Nissayamuccana

Release of 'guidance' or 'tutelage' from an Upajjhāya or Ācariya. When a trainee Bhikkhu is considered to have attained proficiency in the Dhamma and Vinaya and is able to live without any 'guidance', he may be granted Nissayamuccana. He should have the following six qualities before he is granted the Nissayamuccana. These are : He knows the nature of the deeds or acts which may lead to an 'offence'; or to no 'offence'; or to a 'light offence'; or to a 'grievous offence'; he has made himself proficient in both the Pātimokkhas; and he has spent five years after his Upasampadā. (Mv. pp. 83-86). In fact, a well-read and duly practised Bhikkhu is eligible for the Nissayamuccana. (Cf. Ibid. pp. 83-86; SP. Vol. II, p. 806).

Nissayamuccanaka-Bhikkhu

A trainee Bhikkhu who having obtained proficiency so as to live without any 'guidance' has got a 'release' from the Nissaya (guidance) of his Ācariya or Upajjhāya, is known as Nissayamuccanakabhikkhu. (Mv. pp. 83-16). See NISSAYAMUCCANA.

Nissāraṇā

'Rustication' of a monk from the Saṅgha on account of his 'offences' or of his improper association with the laymen; or of his improper acts. (Mv. pp. 337-338). When the 'actions' such as Pabbājanīya, Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Ukkhepanīya and Paṭisāraṇīya are taken up by the Saṅgha against a monk, they are also considered as Nissāraṇā. And then the condemned monk becomes non-eligible for taking part in any Saṅghakamma. (Cf. SP Vol. III, pp. 1218-1219).

No-Saññāvimokkhā-Āpatti

An 'offence' committed unintentionally is known as No-saññāvimokkhā-āpatti. (Cf. Acittako no-saññāvimokkhā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1421 also Cf. Pari. p. 212).

Pa

Paṃsukūla

Rags collected from the heap of the dust; unwanted clothes or rags thrown away in the rubbish, in the streets or in the funeral ground. (Cf. Rathikāsusāna-saṅkarakūṭādinam yattha katthaci paṃsūnam upari thitattā abbhuggatattāhena tesu tesu paṃsukūlamivā ti paṃsukūlaṃ.—Visuddhimagga, Chapt. II, p. 40). During the early stage of the Buddhist Order, the Buddha advised the monks to use Paṃsukūla for their robes. Not only that, he also included the Paṃsukūla as one of the four Nissayas ('Resources') on which alone the monks should depend for their robes. The Nissayas were considered so important feature in the life of a monk that the Buddha enjoined the Saṅgha to apprise of all the four Nissayas to the newly ordained monk soon after his Upasampadā, which he should bear in mind throughout his life. (Mv. pp. 55, 100). But later on, at the instance of Jīvaka Komārabhacca, the Buddha allowed the monks to accept the cīvara (robe or robe-cloth) donated by the laymen (Gahapati-cīvara). (Ibid. p. 297).

Those monks who practised the austere penances (dhutaṅgā) used to put on the Paṃsukūla-cīvara. They were known as Paṃsukūlikā. This practice is included in the list of 13 Dhutaṅgās. (Visuddhimagga, Chapt. II, p. 40).

Paṃsukūlika

A monk who puts on the robe made out of the Paṃsukūla (rags collected from rubbish). In the beginning of the formation of the Saṅgha, all the members of the Order used to put on the Paṃsukūla, but later on, at the request of physician Jīvaka Komārabhacca the Buddha allowed his followers to accept other kinds of robe-cloths offered by the laymen (Gahapati-cīvara). (Mv. p. 297). Those who were engaged in austere penances (Dhutaṅgā) used to put on the Paṃsukūla; and hence they were known as Paṃsukūlika. (Visuddhimagga, Chapt. II, p. 40).

Paṃsukūla-Cīvara

A robe made of Paṃsukūla (a rag thrown in the dust).

See : PAMSUKŪLA.

Pakāsaṇīyakamma

A kind of ecclesiastical 'action' taken against a monk who has changed his attitude towards the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha; and for which he has made a public proclamation.

This Kamma ('action') was taken against Devadatta, at the instance of the Buddha himself because of the change in his demeanour so much so that once he placed the proposal before the Buddha to retire and to allow him to lead the Saṅgha. The Buddha rejected the proposal and then asked the monks to hold a Pakāsaṇīyakamma against Devadatta, at Rājagaha. The Saṅgha then held a Ñatticatutthakamma for this purpose. The Saṅgha also decided to 'inform' (Pakāsaṇā) about it to the people of Rājagaha. Venerable Sāriputta was entrusted to announce to the public of Rājagaha about the changed nature of Devadatta, which was non-moral in accordance with the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. (Cv. pp. 288-290).

Pakuṭṭa

A varandah around the inner chamber of the Vihāra was known as Pakuṭṭa. (Cf. Majjhe gabbhassa samantā pariyāgāro vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303). It was approved by the Buddha in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 246).

Pakkammanantikā-Kaṭhina-Uddhāra

It is one of the eight 'occasions' when the 'privileges' (Ānisaṃsā) of Kaṭhina are 'forfeited' or 'withdrawn' from a Bhikkhu who has received the Kaṭhina-cīvara. This occasion arises when a Bhikkhu goes away from his Vihārasīmā taking the Kaṭhinadussa (robe-cloth) with a view not to return; and this is known as Pakkammanantikā-Kaṭhina-uddhāra. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180). Also see : KATHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Pakkhahata

A person who has paralysis, on his legs, hands or body. (Cf. Tassa eko haltho vā pādo vā addhasaṃsāram vā sukhaṃ na vahaṭi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1085). Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 95). In case he has already got his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, 1086).

Pakkhika (-Bhatta)

A meal offered by a lay-devotee on the 14th, 15th, 5th or 8th of every fortnight (pakkha). This meal is allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 272; Mv. p. 55). The Saṅgha arranges to despatch a monk or monks for such a meal. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1354).

Paghana

An inter-varandah between the inner and outer varandahs of a Vihāra. It falls on the way when going in or coming out of the Vihāra. (Cf. Yaṃ nikkhamantā ca pavasantā ca pādehi hananti. Tassa vihāradvāre kuḍḍaṃ nīharitvā katapadesassetam adhivacanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303; Also Cf. Ubhatokuḍḍaṃ nīharitvā katapadesassati yathā bahi tīhitā ujukaṃ anto nisinne na passantī. Evaṃ dvārābhimukhaṃ pidahanavassena bhittiṃ ca aññato dvāraṃ ca yojetvā kataṭhānam vadati.—Vimativinodanīṭkā (M), Vol. II, p. 239). This was approved by the Buddha in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 246).

Paccattharaṇa

*A kind of coverlet. It is made of rug. (Cf. Paccattharaṇaṃ nāma pāvāro kojavo ti ettakameva.—Kv. (M), p. 203).

It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under the term Seyyā approved for the use of the monks. (Pāc. p. 65).

A paccattharaṇa made of Kadalimiga-skin (a kind of deer-skin) was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks; and if anyone used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211).

The paccattharaṇa might be prepared of any size, as according to one's need. This was so allowed by the Buddha. (Ibid. p. 211).

Pacchābhatta

After the meal-time; i.e. from noon to sunset. (Cf. Majjhantike vuttivatte yāva atthaṅgate suriye.—Pāc. p. 373; also p. 139).

Pacchimikā-Vassūpanāyikā

The 'later' Vassāvāsa ('Rainy-season-resort') which commences from the first day after the full-moon day of Sāvana month. The 'earlier' one (Purimikā) starts one month before, i.e. from the first day after the full-moon day of Āsālha month. A Bhikkhu may take up any one of these two Vassūpanāyikās. (Aparajjugatāya āsālhiyā purimikā upagantabbā; māsaḡatāya āsālhiyā pacchimikā upagantabbā.—Mv. p. 144; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1127). Preferably the 'earlier' one (Purimikā) should be taken up. One can drop the 'earlier' one only if it is not possible due to some unavoidable circumstances; and then the 'later' one, the Pacchimikā Vassūpanāyikā should be taken up. (Mv. pp. 144-145; SP. Vol. III, p. 1127). But in that case the person is not considered fit for the award of Kāṭhina-civara. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1172).

Pajjam

A kind of medicinal oil for chilblains. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Mv. p.224; Cf. Yena phālitapādā pakatikā honti taṃ nālikerādīsū nānābhesajjāni pakkhipitvā pajjam abhisankharitum. Pādānaṃ sappāyabhesajjaṃ ti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155).

Pañca-Ābādhā

Five kinds of chronic diseases which make a person non-eligible for ordination in the Buddhist Order. The diseases are : leprosy, boil, eczema, consumption and epilepsy (Kuṭṭho, Gaṇḍo, Kilāso, Soso and Apamāro). If anybody ordains such a person suffering from any of these five diseases, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 76-77; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1046-1047).

Pañcapaṭṭika

Multi-coloured decorative pictures, painted in the Vihāra. The Buddha approved of such paintings. (Cv. p. 245; Cf. Jātiādipañcappakāraṇaṇṇamaṭṭhaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 238). Paintings of human figures, however, were not allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 245).

Paññatti

Enactment of an ecclesiastical rule. (Cv. p. 408; Parā. pp. 24, 27, 29; Pari p. 4). Nine types of Paññattis are mentioned in the texts, viz., Mūlapaññatti or Paññatti (the original enactment); (2) Anupaññatti (changes or additions to the original one); (3) Anuppannapaññatti (an enactment already laid down before the occasion has actually arisen. It is concerned with the Atthagarudhammā only which were prescribed for the nuns by the Buddha before any such occasion arose for this enactment.); (4) Sabbatthapaññatti (an enactment applicable to all regions); (5) Padesapaññatti (an enactment which is applicable to a particular region only); (6) Sādhāraṇapaññatti (an enactment of general rules applicable to all); (7) Asādhāraṇapaññatti (an enactment of uncommon rules, applicable either to the Bhikkhu Saṅgha or to the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha only); (8) Ekatopaññatti (an enactment of rules particularly either for the Bhikkhu Saṅgha or for the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha separately); (9) Ubhatopaññatti (an enactment of rules applicable to both the Bhikkhu and Bhikkhunī Saṅghas). (Pari. pp. 3, 4 ff.; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1395-1398; Kv. (M), p. 110).

Paṭaggi

A 'counter fire' which was arranged around a Vihāra in order to protect it from the forest-fire. The Buddha recommended the Paṭaggi for the monks if there was a danger from the forest-fire. (Cv. p. 228).

Paṭalika

A red woollen spreading with dense floral designs. (Cf. Ghanapupphako uṇṇāmayalohitattharaṇo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana, and so not allowed for the use of the monks. If anyone used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting only even if it belonged to a layman; but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Paṭika

A white woollen spreading. (Cf. Uṇṇāmayo setattharaṇo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). It is regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana and so not allowed for the use of the monks. If anyone used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. It might be used for sitting only even if it belonged to a layman; but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

• Paṭiggaha (I)

A receptacle or a dust-bin (for thrown food, water etc.). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 024).

Paṭiggaha (II)

A thimble. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks when stitching their robes. It is also laid down that the Paṭiggaha should not be made of a costly materials, like gold, silver etc.; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. It might be made of bone, ivory, reed, bamboo, wood, lac, fruit, iron, conch-shell, (Cv. p. 205).

Paṭiggahathavikā

A case for thimble. It may have strings also to hang. (Cv. p. 206).

Paṭicchanna-Abbhāna

See ABBHĀNA.

Paṭicchanna-Mānatta

See MĀNATTA.

Paṭicchādanīya

Meat gravy. (Cf. Mamsarasa.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156). The Buddha allowed the monks to use it as a medicine. (Mv. p. 225).

Paṭiññātakaraṇa

A kind of 'procedure' for the settlement of an Adhikaraṇa (case) when the condemned monk candidly admits the 'offence' which he has committed. This he does before the Saṅgha or before a monk. The condemned monk must be true to his statement that he is making. And the Saṅgha also should be fully ensured that the statement given by the condemned monk is perfectly true; and then only the Paṭiññātakaraṇa should be performed. This 'procedure' is essential prior to any kind of 'action' like Tajjanīyakamma, Niyassakamma, Paṭisāraṇīyakamma or Ukkhepanīyakamma, taken up against a monk. The offence of Dukkaṭa is committed if the Paṭiññātakaraṇa is not taken up before the above 'actions' (Kammas). (Cv. pp. 162-164; 188-190; Cf. Pari. p. 329). This 'procedure' is applicable to only one kind of Adhikaraṇa (case), viz., the Āpattādhikaraṇa (i.e. the case connected with the ecclesiastical 'offences'). (Cv. pp. 188-189; Pari p. 196; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 291).

Paṭinivāsana

A robe of the monk which is used inside the Vihāra, usually after returning from outside. Generally the Antaravāsaka (inner garment) is put on when living inside the Vihāra (not the Saṅghāṭī or Uttarāsaṅga). (Mv. pp. 44, 58; Cv. pp. 328, 337).

It is the duty of the Saddhivihārika and the Antevāsī to offer Paṭinivāsana to his Upajjhāya or Ācariya when the latter returns from outside. (Ibid.).

Paṭibala

A monk who is 'competent' enough to perform the ecclesiastical rites (Vinayakamma). (Cf. Yo pana kāsasosasemhādīnā vā gelanñhena oṭṭhalantajivhādīnaṃ vā asampattiyaṃ pariyattiyam vā akataparicayattā na sakkoti parimaṇḍalehi padavyañjanehi kammavūcam sūvetum vyañjanaṃ vā padaṃ vā hāpeti aññathā vā vattabbam aññathā vadati ayam appaṭibalo; tabbiparito paṭibalo ti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1033).

Paṭisāraṇīyakamma

A kind of ecclesiastical 'action' taken against a monk who attempts to cause loss to a householder (alābhāya anattāya); tries to make the householder quit his home (anāvāsa); reviles the householder (akkosati paribhāsati); creates dissension amongst the householders; speaks ill of the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha to the householder; scolds the householder contemptuously (hīnena khumseti vambheti); does not keep his words with the householder. It is an 'action' which if taken, makes the monk to beg pardon from the householder for the wrong or wrongs that he has done. (Cf. Yena kammaṇa akutthagahaṭṭhasāmiṭṭhameva paṭisāriyati so akkosako pacchā pesiyati, taṃ paṭisāraṇīyakammaṃ nāma.—Vajirabuddhīkā (M), p. 508).

The procedure of taking up this 'action' is thus : The guilty monk is made present (sammukhā kataṃ) before the Saṅgha and then he is interrogated for his offence (paṭipucchā). He should then admit that he has committed something wrong (paṭiññāya kataṃ). He is then reminded of the rule or rules of the Pātimokkha or any other rule that he is infringing (āpatti kataṃ). He is then charged with the offence alleged to have been committed by him (codetvā, sāretvā, āpattiṃ āropetvā kataṃ hoti). A 'competent' monk moves the Ñatti (motion) before the full Saṅgha (samaggena) that so and so is guilty of such and such offence, and the Saṅgha may pronounce the Paṭisāraṇīyakamma against the monk if the Saṅgha thinks fit. He requests this for three times. (It is a sort of Ñatticatutthakamma). Any deviation from this procedure makes the 'action' invalid (Adhammakamma). (Cv. pp. 32-37).

The monk against whom this 'action' is pronounced (1) should not confer Upasampadā; (2) should not give Nissaya; (3) should not take the service of a Sāmaṇera; (4) should not accept the nomination to 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs; (5) should not 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs even if nominated; (6) should not commit the same offence for which he is condemned; (7) should not commit the similar offences; (8) should not commit even graver offences; (9) should not denounce the 'action' taken against him; (10) should not denounce those who took part in the Paṭisāraṇīyakamma; (11) should not object to the presence of any Bhikkhu in the Upasatha ceremony; (12) or in the Pavāraṇā ceremony; (13) should not do any reproachable act; (14) should not act as a leader in the Saṅghakamma; (15) should not seek permission to 'interrogate' a Bhikkhu alleged to have committed some offence; (16) should not 'interrogate' a monk who has committed some offence; (17) should not 'remind' a monk of the offence committed and (18) should not make the monks quarrel among themselves. (Ibid. p. 37).

For the purpose of 'revocation' (Paṭipassambhanā) of this 'action', the guilty monk is required to approach the offended householder and to request him for pardon. In case the condemned monk needs an escort (anudūta) for his help, the Saṅgha may formally select a monk by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. This monk may go with him to beg pardon from the householder on behalf of the condemned monk, if it becomes so necessary. In the first instance the guilty monk should himself request for the pardon. In case the householder does not respond to his request, the escort-monk should himself beg pardon. Even then the householder does not respond to his request, he should beseech the householder for pardon in the name of the Saṅgha (saṅghassa vacanena). Even if this also goes in vain, the escort-monk should 'admonish' the guilty monk in the presence of the householder or at a place from where the householder can hear the 'admonition'. (Ordinarily this is not allowed). When the guilty monk is pardoned by the householder or 'admonished' in the presence of the householder, his case of 'revocation' is taken up by the Saṅgha. For this purpose the condemned monk approaches the Saṅgha and after proper salutation to the elder monks he informs the Saṅgha that he has been pardoned by the householder and also he has scrupulously observed the restrictions imposed upon him. The Saṅgha then takes up the case of his 'revocation' and that also if the Saṅgha deems him fit for 'revocation'. For this purpose the Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatutthakamma and then the 'action' is 'revoked'. (Ibid. pp. 37-40).

Paṭṭikā (I)

A kind of belt or girdle (kāyabandhana), allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. It is a simple stripe of cloth with a buckle at its one end. (Cv. p. 226; Cf. Pakativīṭā vā macchakaṇṭakavāyimā vā paṭṭikā vaṭṭati. Sesā kañjaracchikādibhedā na vaṭṭanti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294).

Paṭṭikā (II)

A strip of bamboo or palm leaf used for voting or for assigning the meal. It was like a ticket. (Cv. p. 273; Cf. Veluvilvatāḷapaṇṇādimayāya paṭṭikāya.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1347).

Paṇāmanā

The 'dismissal' of a Saddhivihārika (disciple) or an Antevāsī (pupil) by the Upajjhāya (preceptor) or Ācariya (teacher) respectively if the former does not behave properly. (Mv. pp. 51-52; 65-67). The behaviour of a Saddhivihārika or Antevāsī is to be deemed as improper if he 'does not have much affection, does not have much faith, does not have much shame, does not have much respect and does not have much amity towards his Upajjhāya or Ācariya'. (Cf. Nādhimattaṃ pemaṃ hoti, nādhimatto pasādo hoti, nādhimattā hirī hoti, nādhimatto gāravo hoti, nādhimattā bhāvanā hoti.—Ibid.).

When a Saddhivihārika or Antevāsī has to be 'dismissed', the Upajjhāya or Ācariya should say thus: "I dismiss you"; or "Do not come back here"; or "Take away your bowl and robes"; or "I need not to be waited upon by you". If the Saddhi- vihārika or Antevāsī repents for his improper behaviour and begs pardon, he should be granted exculpation and should be taken back (Khamāpanā). The 'dismissal' should never be imposed upon a Saddhivihārika or Antevāsī whose behaviour is upright; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid.).

Paṇṭabhojana

A sumptuous food prepared with Ghee (Sappi), butter (Navanīta), oil (Tela) honey (Madhu), molasses (Phāṇita), fish (maccha), meat (maṃsa), milk (khīra) or curd (dadhi). If a monk eats this kind of sumptuous meal by asking himself, he commits an offence of Pācittiya; except he is sick. (Rule No. 39; Pāc. pp. 124-125; Pm. (B), p. 14). In the case of a Bhikkhuni the offence would be Pāṭidesantiya. (Rule Nos. 1-8; Pāc. pp. 482-486; Pm. (B), pp. 52-53).

Paṇḍaka

A eunuch. He is not eligible for ordination. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. If he somehow or other happens to get his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 89).

There are five kinds of Paṇḍakas. These are : Āsittapaṇḍako, Usūyapaṇḍako, Opakammikapaṇḍako, Pakkhapaṇḍako and Napuṃsakapaṇḍako. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1068).

Paṇṇabhesajja

A medicine prepared out of leaves, such as of Nimba, Kuṭaja, Paṭola, Sulasī (Tulasī ?), Kappāsa or of any other plant not used by the people as food. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. The monks might keep it for any number of days, even for the whole life; but could use it only when necessary; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Mv. p. 220).

Paṇṇasanthāra

A mat made of leaves. It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped in the term Seyya, approved for the use of the monks by the Buddha, (Pāc. p. 65). See SEYYĀ.

Patta

A bowl, especially the alms-bowl of the monks and the nuns. It is one of the eight essential requisites (parikkhāra) of the monks. (Sumaṅgalavilāsaṇī (R), Part I, p. 306).

The monks were allowed to keep only one bowl at a time. Many rules were framed for the use of the bowl. Two offences are mentioned in the Nissaggiya Pācittiya section of the Pāṭimokkha. (Pm. (B), pp. 9, 34-35; Parā. pp. 345-353; Pāc. pp. 330-332). It is expected that every monk and nun would be scrupulous in keeping a bowl and would not desire to have a new one until the old one becomes out of use. If a new bowl is received by a monk or a nun, an adhiṭṭhāna ('resolve') or vikappanā ('assignment') should be made within ten days of its receipt by a monk and on the same day by a nun. (Parā pp. 346-348; Pac. pp. 331-332; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 714-716; Kv. (M), p. 178).

Usually a bowl was made of iron or clay. (Cv. p. 201). But if a bowl made of wood, gold, silver, ruby, Veluriya, Phalika, Kaṃsa (bronze), glass, tin, lead or copper or of skull was used, the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Ibid. pp. 201 & 203). Similarly a gourd (Tumbakaṭāha) or a water-pot (Ghaṭikaṭāha) or a skull should not be used as a bowl; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Ibid. pp. 203-204).

The bowl might be of three sizes; namely, Ukkatṭha (large), Majjhima (middle size) and the Omaka (small). The largest one, i.e. the Ukkatṭha had the capacity to keep two Magadha-nālī (a measurement) of cooked rice with the soup of about 1/4th quantity of rice upto its brim. And if the above quantum of cooked rice with soup is below the brim of the bowl, it is regarded as the largest among the large ones (Ukkatṭhukkatṭha); and if the rice with soup is above the brim, it is regarded as the smallest among the large ones (Ukkatṭhomaka). A bowl having half of the capacity of an Ukkatṭha bowl is known as Majjhima-patta (i. e. of middle size). The largest of the Majjhima-patta is called the Majjimukkatṭha-patta and the smallest of it is known as Majjhimomakapatta. The Omaka-patta (small bowl) is half of the capacity of the Majjhima-patta. The Omaka-patta is also in three sizes : (1) Omakukkatṭha (i.e. largest among the small); (ii) Omaka (middle size in the small); (iii) Omakomaka (i.e. the smallest). The largest among the large bowls (Ukkatṭhukkatṭha) and the smallest among the small (Omakomaka) are not fit for use as a bowl; but these can be used as Thālaka (a dish or beaker). (Kv. (M), p. 178; SP. Vol. II, p. 713; Cf. Khuddasikkhā (M), p. 74).

Patta-Adhiṭṭhāna

Making the 'resolve' to use a new bowl as his 'own' by speech or gesture. It is laid down that the monk must formally 'give up' the old one (Paccuddharāṇa) before he makes a 'resolve' for the use of the new one. (SP. Vol. II, p. 716; Khuddasikkhā (M), p. 74). An adhiṭṭhāna ('resolve') must be made within ten days after the receipt of the new one by a monk and on the same day by a nun. If it is not so done, an offence of Nissaggiya-pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 21; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 1; Parā. pp. 345-346; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 34).

The 'resolve' is considered as cancelled (Adhiṭṭhānavijahana) under the following circumstances : (1) When the bowl is stolen; (2) donated; (3) taken away by some one; (4) when the monk or nun disrobes; (5) or dead; (6) when the bowl is formally 'given up' (paccuddharāṇa); (7) when the sex of the person is changed; (8) when the monk or nun commits the offence of Pārājika; (9) or when the bowl has got a big hole. (Cf. Acchedadānagāhehi vibbhamamaraṇuddhaṭṭha līngasikkhā-dichiddena pattādhānamujjhati.—Khuddasikkhā (M), p. 74; also Cf. Aññassa dānena acchinditvā gahaṇena viṣṣāsaḡāhena, hīṇāyāvattanena, sikkhāpaccakkhātena, kālakiriyyāya liṅgaparivattanena, paccuddhārena, chiddabhāvenātt imehi navahi vijahati.—SP. Vol. II, pp. 716-717).

In case a monk or nun receives a new bowl and does not wish to 'formally give up' the old one and at the same time wishes to keep this without making a 'resolve', a Vikappanā ('assignment') should be made to formalise its retention. (Parā. p. 346).

Patta-Ukkujjana

On account of a layman's misbehaviour the monks decide not to accept the offerings (Pattanikujjana) but later when the layman amends his faults and assures for proper behaviour, the Saṅgha then pardons him and removes all such restrictions. This is known as Patta-ukkujjana. For this purpose the Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Cv. p. 215). This is also known as Osāraṇā. (Kv. (M), p. 258).

Pattakalla

Proper occasion, particularly to hold the Upasatha ceremony. (Cf. Patto anurūpo kālo imassā ti pattakallaṃ.—Pātimokkhapadattha-Anuvaṇṇanā (M), p. 26; Cf. Upasatho yāvalikā ca bhikkhū kammaṇṇā, sabhāgāpattiyo ca na vijjanti. Vajjanīyā ca puggalā tasmim na honti, pattakallaṃ ti vuccati.—Kv. (M), p. 87; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1122, 1435-1436; Pm. (B), p. 1). In the Pm. [(B) p. 1], it is stated thus: (i) Today is Upasatha; (ii) at least four Bhikkhus are present so as to constitute the Saṅgha; (iii) the assembled monks have not committed 'common offence/s'; (iv) the 'prohibited' persons are not present in the assembly. And so it is 'proper occasion' (Pattakalla) to hold the Upasatha.

Pattakuṇḍolikā

A kind of big basket to keep the bowls. (Cf. Mahāmukhakuṇḍasāṇṭhānā bhaṇḍukhalikā vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1287). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Co. p. 202).

Pattaggāhāpaka (I) (-Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu selected by the Saṅgha to accept the bowls offered to the Saṅgha by laymen, is known as Pattaggāhāpaka. The Saṅgha selects an 'able' monk for the purpose by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Cv. pp. 274-274).

Pattaggāhāpaka (II) (-Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu who is appointed by the Saṅgha to hold that bowl which has been 'given up' by a monk in favour of the Saṅgha on account of committing a Nissaggiya-pācittiya offence * (Rule No. 22). He is known as Pattaggāhāpaka. The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma for this purpose. It is laid down that only just, honest and scrupulous monk should be appointed for this purpose. It is the duty of this monk to find out the 'worst' bowl (Pattapariyanta) in the Assembly and which he should offer to the monk who has committed the offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Parā. pp. 350-351).

Pattathavikā

A bag for the bowl. It was found necessary when to be kept in the Pattakuṇḍalikā (big basket). For carrying it, strings were also fixed. (Aṃsabaddhakam bandhanasuttakam.—Cv. p. 203).

Pattadhāraka

A stand for keeping the bowl. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks, (Cv. p. 202). It might be made of wood, creeper, cane etc. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1285).

Patta-Nikkujjana

Boycott of a layman by not accepting his offerings. This is inflicted upon a layman (Upāsaka) who has misbehaved with the monks; for instance, by doing harm to their needs, abusing them, speaking ill of the Buddha, Dhamma, Saṅgha, etc. (Cv. pp. 214-215).

When the layman amends for his faults and behaves with the monks properly, the Saṅgha then removes this restriction. This is known as Patta-ukkujjana or Osāraṇa. (Ibid p. 215; Kv. (M), p. 258; SP. Vol. III, p. 1531).

Pattapaccuddharāṇa

To 'give up' formally the old bowl in order to make a 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna) for the new one, is known as Pattapaccuddharāṇa. (SP. Vol. II, p. 715; Kv. (M), p. 178).

Pattapariyanta

If a Bhikkhu desires a new bowl which is unbroken and fit for use, then he should surrender this additional new bowl to the assembly of the monks (Bhikkhu-parisa). This new bowl should then be offered to the eldest monk in the assembly (Thera); and if he accepts it, so far so good; but if he does not, it should be offered to the next senior monk. The monk who accepts this new bowl would naturally 'give up' his old one. This 'given up' bowl should be accepted by the next monk in seniority. Thus the last one i. e. the 'worst' one would come to that person who has to surrender his additional bowl first. This last or the 'worst' bowl is called Pattapariyanta. This, in fact, occurs when a monk commits the offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya (Parā. p. 350; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37; Cf. Evam parivattito pariyanta thitapatto.—SP. Vol. II, p. 718; Kv. (M), p. 180).

Pattamaṇḍala

A support to protect the bottom of the bowl (pattamūla) from being rubbed out, is known as Pattamaṇḍala. It may be made of tin or lead; but must not be painted with figures etc; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Cv. pp. 201-202).

Pattamālaka

A raised platform of wood or brick for keeping the bowls, is known as Pattamālaka. (Cf. Itṭhakāhi vā dārūhi vā kātum vaṭṭati.—SP. Vol. II, pp. 1285-1286; also Cf. Upacikānaṃ anuṭṭhahanatthāya bhūmito uccataraṃ kataṃ vedikākāramālakam.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 231). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 202).

Pattarajana

The dye made out of leaves. It is one of the dyes allowed for the monks for their robes. The other dyes recommended for the robes of the monks are those made out of the root, stem, bark, flower and fruit of a tree. (Mv. p. 302). The leaves of Alli or Nīli should not be used as the dye of the robes. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1194).

Pattarasa

Leaf-juice. All kinds of leaf-juices were allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks, except the boiled vegetable-soup (Dākarasa). The Pattarasa was regarded as Yāmakālaka and so may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (Mv. p. 260; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Padaso Dhamma-Vācana

Teaching of the Dhamma word by word (from the texts). If a Bhikkhu teaches to an unordained person by this method, he is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 4; Pāc. p. 27; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 100; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 45).

Padesapaññatti

Enactment of an ecclesiastical rule which is applicable to a particular region only, not to all countries. (Pari. p. 4; Cf. Vinayadharapañcamena gaṇena upṇasampadā gaṇaṅgaṇupāhanā dhuvaṇahānaṃ cammatthanaṃ ti etasaṃ vasena catubbidhā padesa-paññatti nāma Majjhimadesa eva etehi āpatti hoti.—Kv. (M), p. 110; also Cf. SP. Voll. III, p. 1396);

Pabbajjā

Usually it denotes the adoption of the ascetic life by abandoning the household life and putting on the yellow robe, the ascetic-dress. In the Buddhist Order, the Pabbajjā is the 'ordination' of a Sāmaṇera (novice) by undergoing the 'three refuges' (Tisarāṇa-gamana). (Mv. p. 86).

This ordination ceremony of a Sāmaṇera is performed thus: The desirous person firstly having his hair and moustache cut off, having got (some one) to offer him a yellow robe, arranges his upper robe over one shoulder, sits down on his haunches, and salutes the assembly with joined palms. He is then asked to speak thus: "I go to the Buddha for refuge, to the Dhamma and to the Saṅgha. And a second time I go.....And a third time I go....." Thus the person is ordained as a Sāmaṇera (a novice) by undergoing the 'three refuges'. (Ibid.)

There are certain persons upon whom the Pabbajjā should not be conferred. These are : One who has not obtained the permission from his parents; who suffers from any kind of five chronic diseases like leprosy (Kuṭṭho), boil (Gaṇḍo), eczema (Kilāso), consumption (Soso) and epilepsy (Apamāro); one who is in the 'king's army service' (Rājabhāṭa); a thief who 'bears an emblem' (Dhaja-bandhacoro); one who has run away from jail (Kārabhedakacoro); a 'registered thief' (Likhitakacoro); one who has been flogged; one who has been branded; a debtor; a slave; (Ibid. p. 82); one who has entered in the Saṅgha stealthily without proper ordination (Theyyasaṃvāsaka) (Ibid. p. 90); one who belongs to the non-human world (Tiracchānayani) (Ibid. p. 90); a matricide; a patricide (Ibid. p. 91); a murderer of an Arahanta; one who has seduced the nun (Ibid. p. 92); one whose hand or hands are cut off;.....foot or feet cut off;.....hand and foot cut off; nose cut off;.....ear or ears cut off;.....nose and ears cut off;.....fingers cut off;.....tendons of the feet cut off;.....one with webbed fingers; a hunchback; a dwarf; one who has goitre; one who has elephantiasis; one who is 'badly sick'; one who has 'disgraced' the assembly (Parisadūsaka) (on account of his abnormal physical stature); one-eyed person; one having a crooked limb; a lame person; a person who has paralysis on one side; a cripple; a person who has become infirm on account of old age; a blind; a deaf; a dumb; a blind and dumb; a deaf and dumb; a blind and dumb; a blind deaf and dumb. If anybody ordains such persons, he commits the offence of Dukkata. (Ibid. p. 95).

In the beginning of the Buddhist Order the Pabbajjā and Upasampadā were not specified by separate ceremonies or rites, and so we find many early monks getting their Pabbajjā and Upasampadā simultaneously. The Buddha, in the beginning, enjoined the monks to confer the Pabbajjā and Upasampadā together by undergoing the 'three refuges' only. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, imehi tīhi saraṇagamanehi pabbajjam upasampadam ti.—Mv. p. 24). But later as the multitude of the Saṅgha increased and a host of persons started to seek their admission into the Saṅgha, the rules of Pabbajjā and Upasampadā were laid down separately and the previous rulings were repealed. (See Ibid. p. 53; Cf. UPASAMPADĀ).

Pabbājanīya-Kamma

If a monk becomes the 'difier' of good families (Kuladūsako) and gives himself to unholy conduct (Pāpasamācāro) like garlanding or playing, singing, dancing etc., he deserves the punishment of Pabbājanīyakamma. It is a sort of temporary removal from the monastery where he is residing. (Cf. Yena tato āvāsato gāmato ca pabbājenti kuladūsakam tam pabbājanīyakammaṃ nāma.—Vajirabuddhiṭṭikā (M), p. 508). The Buddha asked Sāriputta and Moggallāna to turn out Assaji and Punabbasu along with their other associate-monks from Kiṭṭagiri by holding a Pabbājanīyakamma. (Cv. pp. 19-24). The Pabbājanīyakamma may also be pronounced against a monk who is quarrelsome; indiscreet to his moral conduct and doctrinal views; picks up quarrel in the Saṅgha; speaks ill of the Buddha, Dhamma, Saṅgha; is frivolous (Davā) in speech or action or both; lacks in manners of speech or action or both (anācāra); harms others by speech, action or both (Upaghātik); earns his food by evil means through speech, action or both. (Ibid. pp. 27-29).

The procedure of taking up the action of the Pabbājanīyakamma is thus: The guilty monk is first made to be present (Sammukhā katam) and then he is 'interrogated' for his offence (Paṭipucchā katam), he should then admit that he has committed something 'wrong' (Paṭiññāya katam). He is then 'reminded' of the rules of the Pātimokkha or the other rules that he has violated (Āpatti katam hoti); and then he is charged with the particular offence alleged to have been committed by him (Codetvā sāretvā āpattiṃ āropetvā katam hoti). A 'competent' monk moves the Ñatti (motion) in presence of the full Saṅgha (samaggena) stating that so and so is guilty of such and such offence and requests the Saṅgha to pronounce the Pabbājanīyakamma against the monk if the Saṅgha may find fit. He moves the 'motion' for three times. (It is a sort of Ñatticatutthakamma). Any deviation from this procedure makes the action invalid (adhammika). (Ibid. pp. 25-27).

A monk punished for the Pabbājanīyakamma is required to leave the monastery or the place where he has been living in and to behave properly at his new residence by observing the following 18 restrictions scrupulously. The restrictions are : (1) He should not confer Upasampadā; (2) should not give Nissaya; (3) should not take the service of a Sāmaṇera; (4) should not accept the nomination to 'exhort' (Opāda) the Bhikkhunis; (5) should not 'exhort' the Bhikkhunis even if he has been nominated before he is punished of this 'action'; (6) He should not commit the same offence for which he is condemned; (7) should not commit similar offences; (8) should not commit any graver offence; (9) should not denounce the 'action' taken against him; (10) should not denounce those who took part in the Pabbājanīyakamma taken against him; (11) should not object to the presence of a particular Bhikkhu in the Upasatha ceremony; (12) or in the Pavāraṇā ceremony; (13) should not indulge in any reproachable act; (14) should not act as a leader in any Saṅghakamma; (15) should not seek permission to 'interrogate' a monk alleged to have committed some offence; (16) should not 'interrogate' a monk who has committed some offence; (17) should not 'remind' a monk of the offence committed and (18) should not make the monks quarrel amongst themselves. (Ibid. p. 29).

For the purpose of the 'revocation' of this 'action' the condemned monk should approach the Saṅgha and having properly saluted the elderly monks, he should request the Saṅgha three times for the 'revocation' of this 'action'. At this a 'competent' monk places his case of 'revocation' before the Saṅgha. If the Saṅgha finds that the condemned monk has scrupulously observed the above restrictions, his case of 'revocation' (Paṭipassambhanā) may be taken up. For this purpose the procedure of Ñatticatutthakamma is adopted by the Saṅgha. The Pabbājanīyakamma is then 'revoked'. (Ibid. pp. 30-31).

Parampara-Bhojana

Taking or accepting the Bhojana (a meal of five kinds, i. e. Odana, Sattu, Kummāsa, Maccha and Maṃsa) at another person's place setting aside the previous invitation of a person. (Pañcannaṃ bhojanānaṃ aññatarena bhojanena nimantite taṃ thapetvā aññaṃ pañcannaṃ bhojanānaṃ aññatram bhojanaṃ bhuñjati etaṃ parampara-bhojanaṃ nāma.—Pāc. p.111). If a monk does so, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 13; Ibid. p. 111; Pm. (B), p. 13). This meal is, however, allowed when the Bhikkhu is sick or during the robe-season or when the robe is being made. (Ibid. p. 110).

Parammukha-Vikappanā

A method of formal 'assignment' to another monk of an extra robe or bowl by the monk who desires to keep more robes or bowls than usually prescribed. (Only three robes and one bowl are allowed for the monks; otherwise an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya is committed). The desirous monk 'assigns' to another monk the additional robe or bowl expressly for the purpose of Vikappanā. The desirous monk approaches another monk (known as Vinayadhara) and tells him thus: "Imaṃ cīvaraṃ (pattam) vikappanatthāya dammi" ti, i. e. "I 'assign' you this robe (bowl) for the purpose of vikappanā only". The other monk then enquires: "Who is your friend or acquaintance?" Having known his name, he 'assigns' that robe (or bowl) in the name of his friend and returns the robe (or bowl) telling, "I am giving this robe (or bowl) to your friend. It is now your friend's belonging. You use it or throw it away as you like". The desirous monk takes it back and then he is entitled to use it without being involved in any 'offence', because legally he does not possess more than what are prescribed for a monk as his 'own'. (Pāc. pp. 165-166; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 242-243; SP. Vol. II, pp. 653-655).

No monk was allowed to retain the robe offered by another monk for the purpose of Vikappanā. If one did so, he was liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 59; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 140; Pāc. pp. 165-166; Pm. (B), pp. 16 & 49). See VIKAPPANĀ.

Parasu

A large axe. It is one of the things of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' nor can be 'divided'. (Avissajjiya & Avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268).

Parikkhāra

The 'necessaries' or 'requisites' of the monks are known as Parikkhāra. (Parikkhāraṇāti kappiyabhaṇḍena.—Kv. (M) p. 310; Cf. Sumaṅgalavilāsinī (M), p. 185).

Usually eight articles are regarded as the Parikkhāras of a Bhikkhu practising penances. These are : Three robes (Ticīvara), an alms-bowl (Patta), a razor (Vāsī), a needle (Sūci), a girdle (Kāyabandhana) and a water strainer (Parissāvana). (Kv. p. 184; Abhidhānappadīpikā, Gāthā No. 439). But ordinarily for the monks, even the small articles were also regarded as the Parikkhāra. In the Khuddasikkhā [(M), pp. 90-92] some pages are devoted to the Parikkhāras in which a good number of petty articles such as umbrella, cīvaragaṇṭhī, pāsaka, key, lighter, walking-stick, pillow etc. are mentined as the Parikkhāras of the monks. (Cf. Para. p. 190).

Parikkhāracolaka

The cloth used as a strainer or a bag etc. was called Parikkhāracolaka. The Parikkhāracolaka is the additional cloth other than the eight kinds of robes prescribed for the monks. The eight robes are : Saṅghāṭī, Uttarāsaṅga, Antaravāsaka, Vassikasāṭikā, Nisīdana, Paccattharaṇa, Kaṇḍupaṭicchādi and Mukhapuñchanacola. The Buddha allowed the monks to used the Parikkhāracolaka. (Mv. p. 312).

Paribbājaka

A mendicant of other sect, i. e. other than Bhikkhu or Samaṇera of the Buddhist Order. (Pāc. pp. 129, 389, 413). A Buddhist monk is not allowed to offer himself any food or any other eatable to a Paribbājaka; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 41; Ibid. p. 128; Pm. (B), p. 14). Similarly a Bhikkhunī is forbidden to offer any food or cīvara to a Paribbājaka; otherwise the Pācittiya offences are committed. (Rule Nos. 28 & 46; Pāc. pp. 386 and 413; Pm. (B), pp. 40 & 42).

Paribbājikā

A lady mendicant of other sect, i.e. other than a Bhikkhunī, Sikkhamānā and Sāmaṇerī. (Pāc. pp. 129, 389, 413). A Bhikkhunī should not offer herself any food or eatables to a Paribbājaka. If she did so, an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Rule No. 41; Ibid. p. 128; Pm. (B), p. 14). So also, the Bhikkhunīs were not allowed to offer any food or cīvara to a Paribbājikā. If they did so, two Pācittiya offences were committed. (Rule Nos. 28 & 46; Pāc. pp. 389 & 413; Pm. (B), pp. 40 & 42).

Paribhaṇḍa (I)

A supplementary stitching over the robe breadthwise, is known as Paribhaṇḍa. (Kucchiānūvātāropanamattena.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1176; Cf. Puthulato anuvātassa āropanamattam.—Vimativinodanītikā (M), Vol. II, p. 123). The Buddha allowed the monks to do so. (Mv. p. 312; Cf. Cv. p. 205).

Paribhaṇḍa (II)

The outer projected ledge of a wall. (Bāhirāpasse katāya tanuka miḍḍhikāya.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1285). A bowl should not be kept there. If one did so, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 202).

Parimaṇḍala-nivāsana

Putting on the lower garment, the Antaravāsaka around the waist in such a manner so as to cover up the body from navel to the feet (four aṅgulas down from the knee). The folds should also hang evenly. (Pāc. p. 245; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 920; Kv. (M), p. 276).

Parimaṇḍala-pārupana

Putting on the upper garments, the Uttarāsaṅga and Saṅghāṭī in such a manner so that both the lower ends of the garment hang evenly and the upper body is fully covered. (Pāc. p. 246; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 922; Kv. (M), p. 278). A Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī should dress up in this manner; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Bhikkhu Sekhiyā Rule No. 2; Bhikkhunī Sekhiyā Rule No. 1; Pm. (B), pp. 24-6).

Parimukhaṃ

Removing the breast's hair is known as Parimukhaṃ. (Parimukhaṃ ti ure lomasaṃharaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1293). A Bhikkhu is not allowed to remove the hair of his breast. If one does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 224).

Parivāsa (I)

Living apart by a monk, as an 'unclean' person, on account of the punishment for concealing the Saṅghādisesa offence (s). (Pārā. pp. 152, 276 etc.). When a monk happens to commit a Saṅghādisesa offence, he is required to approach another monk immediately with a view to apprising him of the offence he has committed in order to 'expiate' himself. In that case he has to observe six nights of Mānatta only. But in case a monk conceals the offence of Saṅghādisesa for some time, he is then required to undergo a Parivāsa for the period he has concealed the Saṅghādisesa in addition to the six nights of Mānatta. For the 'expiation', he should approach the Saṅgha and request three times to 'pronounce' upon him the Parivāsa. The Saṅgha then holds a Ñatticatutthakamma to this effect.

The condemned monk then observes all the restrictions scrupulously for the period he has concealed the Saṅghādisesa offence besides the six nights of Mānatta, (Ibid. p. 277.; Cv. pp. 109-110). In case a Bhikkhunī happens to commit the Saṅghādisesa offence and whether she has concealed it or not, she is not required to observe the Parivāsa but she has to undergo only a Mānatta of a fortnight. (Pāc. p. 328; Pm. (B), p. 34).

The monk who has been condemned of the Parivāsa by the Saṅgha, has to observe as many as ninety four restrictions of which three being most important, viz. Sahavāsa (i. e. not dwelling with other monks under the same roof), Anārocanā (i. e. not failing to announce his Parivāsa to the incoming monks to his own Vihāra or to other monks when visiting another and Vihāra) and Vippavāsa (i.e. not going to a Vihāra where no monk is living). He should inform about his Parivāsa when the Upasatha or Pavāraṇā is held by the Saṅgha. There are certain restrictions about his movement from his own Vihāra to another Vihāra. (Cv. pp. 67-71). He is not even allowed to accept the honour or respect ordinarily due to a monk. If he accepts such respect or honour, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkata (Ibid. p. 67). Similarly the condemned monk is not allowed to confer Upasampadā or Nissaya; or to take the service of a Sāmaṇera; or to accept the nomination for the 'exhortation' (Ovāda) to the Bhikkhunīs; or to 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs even if he is allowed to do so by the Saṅgha; should not commit the same offence on account of which he is condemned of the Parivāsa; he should not commit the similar or graver offence (s); he should not deprecate the punishment he is undergoing; nor should he deprecate to those who took part in the proceeding; he is not eligible to prohibit anyone present in the Upasatha or Pavāraṇā ceremony; he should not indulge in any reproachable act; nor should 'interrogate' any alleged monk; he should not create quarrel among the monks. He should behave as a most 'lowly monk' in the Saṅgha and so, he should occupy the lowest seat and reside in the worst part of the Vihāra. He should not go to reside in the forest or observe such a begging as if a Dhutaṅga in order to escape himself from knowing others of his Parivāsa. He should not ask others to bring his meals in order to hide his punishment. He is required to get up from his seat when any monk comes to him and sit himself at a lower seat. He should not walk on the same 'walking-path' (Caṅkama) which is meant for the use of other monks. (Cv. pp. 67-71). When the Saṅgha holds any Saṅgha-kamma (ecclesiastical action) like Parivāsa, Mūlāyapaṭikassanā or Mānatta, he is not eligible to be included as the 'fourth monk' (four is the minimum number of the Saṅgha for this purpose) or as the 'twentieth monk' for Abbhāna (where 20 is the minimum number to constitute the Saṅgha). (Ibid. p. 71).

In case such a monk resides with another monk under the 'same roof' (Sahavāso); or lives at a place where there is no monk (Vippavāso), or fails to inform of his Parivāsa to the incoming monks in his Vihāra or to other monks when visiting himself to another Vihāra (Anārocanā), then his observance of Parivāsa is regarded as null and void for the nights he has spent thus. This period is, therefore, not counted with the period of his Parivāsa. (Ibid. p. 71).

An occasion may arise when Vihāra may have too many monks and so it may be difficult to observe the Parivāsa with all its restrictions scrupulously. The Buddha has, therefore, allowed the monks to 'drop off' the Parivāsa for the time being so long as such circumstances remain. But he must 'take it up' again as soon as he finds the appropriate time to observe it. For this purpose the monk is to approach another monk and inform him of his 'dropping off' and 'taking up' of the Parivāsa. (Ibid. p. 71; Cf. Kv. (M), p, 147; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1248-1270).

In case a monk commits another offence of Saṅghādisesa during the Parivāsa period, he is required to take up the Parivāsa anew and then the period of Parivāsa already spent is not taken into account. The fresh Parivāsa is taken up combining with the Saṅghādisesa offence (s) committed during the period. This is known as Mūlāyapaṭikassanā. (Cv. p. 101).

In case a Bhikkhu is punished to undergo Parivāsa on account of more than one Saṅghādisesa offences that he has committed and also concealed, the period of his Parivāsa would be in accordance with that which is concealed for the longest period; but the punishment of all the offences would go concurrently. This is known as Agghasamodhānaparivāsa. (Ibid. p. 109).

In case a monk does not remember the number of the Saṅghādisesa offences he has committed or does not remember the number of the days he has concealed them he is required to recollect the approximate number of the offences and days; and he should then observe the Parivāsa accordingly. This is known as Suddhanta-parivāsa. (Ibid. p. 122 ff.).

It may happen that a monk while observing the Parivāsa disrobes or goes mad or falls ill seriously or something happens which makes the Parivāsa disrupted, he is then allowed to take it up again when he finds fit. He then observes the Parivāsa for the rest of the period only. (Ibid. p. 124 ff.).

When the Parivāsa period is fully observed and the Mānatta period of six nights is also over, the monk then approaches the Saṅgha (consisting of at least 20 'pure' monks) and requests for three times to 'call him back' (Abbhāna). The Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatuttha Kamma for the purpose and if it is agreed upon, he is declared as 'clean' and free from the Saṅghādisesa offence (s). (Ibid. p. 87 ff.).

Parivāsa (II)

The probation period of four months prescribed for the mendicant of a different sect seeking admission into the Buddhist Order as a Bhikkhu. (Mv. pp. 73-75). It is a sort of 'personality test' to find out whether the desirous person is keen enough to accept the Dhamma and the Vinaya of the Buddha. Before undergoing the Parivāsa the desirous mendicant has to be shaved and the yellow robe has to be put on and he should salute the monks in order to take up the three 'refuges' under the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha for three times. He should then approach the Saṅgha and request thus for three times: "I was a heretic before, and I now wish to have my 'higher ordination' (Upasampadā) and hence, I request the Saṅgha for a Parivāsa of four months". The Saṅgha then holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for the purpose. The Parivāsa is then regarded as granted. (Ibid. pp. 73-74).

During the Parivāsa period the activities of the desirous person are closely watched with a view to ascertaining whether he is really desirous of becoming a Bhikkhu. If he goes to the village at right hours and returns by the right time; if he abstains from regular visits to the notorious places or to the house of a widow or an unmarried lady or to a eunuch or to a Bhikkhunī; if he is conscientious in performing the works of the Saṅgha; if he is found keen to learn and practise the Dhamma and Vinaya; if he is not found offended when his previous teacher and his views are criticised; if he is happy when the Dhamma of the Buddha is discussed and he associates his faith with the Buddha, and then he is considered as eligible for 'higher ordination' after the expiry of four months of Parivāsa. (Evam arādhako, kho, bhikkhave, aññatithiyopubbo āgato upasampādetabbo.—Ibid. pp. 75-76; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1041-1046).

If the mendicant comes naked, the Upajjhāya should arrange for his robes; and if he has not shaved earlier, the Saṅgha should be first 'informed' of his shaving and then he should be shaved. (Mv. p. 76).

The Buddha exempted the Jāṭila ascetics from the Parivāsa as he found them Kammavādi and also the Sākyas as they belonged to his race. (Ibid. pp. 65-76).

Pariveṇa

The courtyard of the Vihāra surrounded by walls. (Cv. p. 247). Anāthapiṇḍika provided a Pariveṇa in the Jetavanārāma. (Ibid. p. 25).

A Pariveṇa may be in a Jantāghara (Ibid. p. 325), or in a Vaccakuṭṭi (privy) (Ibid. p. 327). (Cf. Vaccakuṭṭipariveṇaṃ ti vaccakuṭṭiparikkhepabbhantaram.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1297). When the Pariveṇa becomes muddy, sand should be spread; and if the sand is not effective, stone chips may be laid down. And if water stagnates there, an outlet should be constructed. (Cv. p. 210-247).

It was desirable that the Pariveṇa should be kept neat and clean. It was the duty of the Saddhivihārika or the Antevāsika to sweep the Pariveṇa if it was unclean. (Mv. pp. 46, 50, 60, Cv. pp. 331, 339, etc.).

Parisadūsaka

A person whose presence 'defiles' the assembly on account of some physical freak in his body. (Cf. To attano virūpatāya parisam dūseti.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1082-1085). For instance, the person is too tall, too short, too fat, too thin, of too big head, of too small head, etc. (Ibid. pp. 309-312).

Such a person is not eligible for ordination. If anybody ordains such a person, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95).

Parissāvana

A water-strainer. It may be a simple cloth, or fixed in a frame (Kaṭacchupa-rissāvanam), or it may be a filter (Dhammakaraka). (Cv. p. 207). A big strainer, for the use of many monks, especially when they are engaged in construction work, is usually fixed with rods (Daṇḍaparissāvana) or installed in a pond (Ottiharaka).

The Parissāvana is one of the eight 'requisites' of the monks. It is laid down by the Buddha that if the water is impure and full of insects, the monks must use their strainer before drinking it; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 62, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 143; Pāc. pp. 167-170). If the strainer is not readily available, the monk may use even the edge of his Saṅghāṭi as a strainer. (Cv. p. 208). The Buddha has also asked the monks to lend the strainer to another monk if they are on long journey. If one does not lend the strainer to another monk, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 208).

Palālapīṭha

A kind of chair having its seat stuffed with rice-straw. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

Paligha

A full-bolt to close the door; a cross-bar. (Gāmadvāresu viya cakkayuttam dvāra-thakanakam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1303, Cf. Cv. p. 248).

Pallaṅka (I)

A bedstead or couch having its legs with animal carvings. (Pādesu vāḷarūpāni ṭhapetvā kato.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1149; Cf. Āharimehi vāḷehi kato hoti.—Pāc. p. 409). It is Palaṅga in Hindi.

It is regarded as a 'high couch' or Uccāsayanamahāsayana which is not allowed for the use of the monks. If a monk uses it, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211; Cv. p. 258). And if a Bhikkhunī uses it, the offence is a Pācittiya. (Rule No. 42; Pāc. p. 409; Pm. (B), p. 41).

Pallaṅka (II)

A posture of sitting cross-legged. A Bhikkhunī is not permitted to sit in this posture; and if she does so, she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. Of course when she is sick, she may sit by half cross-legged (Aḍḍhapallaṅka). (Cv. p. 401).

Pallattha or Pallatthikā

A posture of squatting or sitting. When sitting in this posture and the hands are around the knees, it is known as Hatthapallatthikā; and when the knees are tied round by a piece of cloth together with the backbone, the posture is called Dussapallatthikā. (Cf. Ukkuṭikaṃ nisīditvā hatthehi jānūnaṃ bandhanaṃ hatthapallatthikā; tathā dussena piṭṭhikaṇṭakassa jānūnaṃ ca bandhanaṃ dussapallatthikā.—Kaṅkhāyo janāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. IV, p. 337). The Dussapallatthikā is also known as Āyogapallatthikā. SP. Vol. II, p. 924).

It is laid down by the Buddha that a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī should not sit in this posture in a layman's house or in a village (Sekhiyā. Rule No. 26; Pm. (B), pp. 22 & 53); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Pāc. p. 255). And also, no preaching should be done by sitting in this posture. (Ibid. p. 273; Pm. (B), p. 24).

Pavattinī

Same as Upajjhāyinī or Upajjhāyā, the feminine of Upajjhāya. (Pāc. p. 448).

Pavāraṇā

A ceremony held at the end of the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) by the Buddhist monks on the full-moon day of the month of Āsvina or Kattika (as the case may be). On this occasion every monk is expected to 'invite' (Pavāreti) his fellow-monks of the Saṅgha to point out his 'wrongs', if any, seen, heard or suspected. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, vassaṃvutṭhānaṃ bhikkhūnaṃ tīhi thānehi pavāretum—ditṭhena vā sutena vā parisāṅkāya vā.—Mv. p. 167).

For holding the Pavāraṇā the Saṅgha assembles at one place, and the ceremony is proclaimed by a Ñatti (formal declaration). After this 'proclamation' each monk, beginning from the eldest to the youngest (in respect of Upasampadā, not of age), makes himself present before the Saṅgha and after saluting the Saṅgha sits in the 'squatting posture' (Ukkuṭika) and then 'invites' (pavāreti) three times thus: "Sirs, I 'invite' the Saṅgha to let me know kindly if any 'wrong' of mine has been seen, heard or suspected. If it is found so, I will make amends for it." (Saṅghaṃ āvuso pavāremi ditṭhena vā sutena vā parisāṅkāya vā. Vadantu maṃ āyasmanto anukampaṃ upādāya. Passante paṭikarissāmi.—Ibid. p. 167).

It is laid down by the Buddha that all the monks must sit in the 'squatting posture' (ukkuṭika). If they do not sit in this posture, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. But of courses if anybody is old or infirm, he may sit at ease, except when his own turn comes to 'invite', he should then sit in this posture. (Ibid. p. 168).

There are two Pavāraṇās, viz., Cātuddasikā and Pannarasikā (i. e. of the fourteenth day and of the fifteenth day) according to the calculation of the months. (Ibid. p. 168).

It is also laid down that all the monks of one 'residence' (Āvāsa) must assemble at one place and then only the Pavāraṇā ceremony should be held. It should never be held by the 'group' (Vagga) of the monks; otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Ibid. pp. 169, 171). And if the Vagga-pavāraṇā (not by all the monks) is held with a view to creating dissension in the Saṅgha, the offence is 'grievous' one, the Thullaccaya. (Ibid. p. 180). In case a Bhikkhu is ill and unable to be present himself at the ceremony, he should 'despatch' his 'invitation' (Pavāraṇā) through another Bhikkhu, known as Pavāraṇāhāraka. The Pavāraṇāhāraka Bhikkhu acts there on behalf of the absent sick monk. In case the sick monk is too weak and infirm and cannot move by himself, he may be carried on a stretcher or on a chair so as to be present himself before the Saṅgha. But if his removal from the seat may cause his death or aggravate his disease, the Saṅgha should go there and perform the Pavāraṇā at his place; but it should never be performed without him or without getting his 'despatched Pavāraṇā;' otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Ibid. p. 169).

A group of five monks, living at one place, may perform the Pavāraṇā (as this number constitutes the Saṅgha); but if there are two, three or four monks living at one place, they are regarded as Gaṇa (group, not Saṅgha) and so, they are required to 'invite' the Pavāraṇā among themselves. This is known as Gaṇa-pavāraṇā. And in case a monk is residing all alone, he should then make a 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna) with a view to performing the Pavāraṇā if any other monk or monks happen to come to his place; and if not, by himself thinking that to-day is the Pavāraṇā. (Ajja me pavāraṇa ti adhiṭṭhātabbam.—Ibid. p. 173). This is known as Puggala-pavāraṇā.

If a Bhikkhu has committed any 'offence' (āpatti), he is not eligible to attend the Pavāraṇā ceremony unless he has 'expiated' for it. If he attends the ceremony without 'expiation', he commits the offence of Dukkata. (Ibid. p. 189). The Saṅgha is to await till such a Bhikkhu gets his 'offence' (āpatti) 'expiated'. In case a Bhikkhu apprehends that he has committed an 'offence', he should disclose it there and should promise that he would get it 'expiated' soon after the Pavāraṇā ceremony is over. (Ibid. pp. 173-175).

The Pavāraṇā should not be held in the presence of the following 'prohibited persons' (Vajjanīya puggalā): Bhikkhunī, Sikkhamānā, Sāmaṇera, Sāmaṇerī, Sikkhāpacakkhātaka (i. e. one who has abandoned the Bhikkhuhood), one who has committed the Pārājika offence, three types of Ukkhittaka (i. e. 'rusticated' monks), a eunuch, one who has entered into the Saṅgha by 'stealth' (Theyyasaṃvāsaka), one who has gone over to another sect (Titthiyapakkantaka), one who belongs to the non-human world (Tiracchānagata), the murderer of his mother or of his father or of an Arahanta, one who has seduced a Bhikkhunī, one who has created a 'dissension' in the Saṅgha, one who has shed the blood of the Buddha (Lohituppadaka), a hermaphrodite and a layman. If the Pavāraṇā ceremony is held in their presence, the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Ibid. p. 187).

As a rule, every monk should make the 'invitation' (pavāraṇā) three times before the Saṅgha; but if there arises some danger or emergency or the time is too short, the 'invitation' may be made short by twice or even by once or by collectively (but only by those who are equal in age by Upasampadā-Samānasaṃvāsika). (Yadi saṅghassa pattakallaṃ, saṅgho dvevācikaṃ, ekavācikaṃ samānasaṃvāsikaṃ pavāreyyāti. —Ibid. pp. 188-189).

After the Pavāraṇā ceremony the monks are free to wander about and go round the country-side and the Vassāvāsa (rainy season resort) is then formally over. (Ibid. p. 197, Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1135-1142).

The Bhikkhunī Saṅgha holds its Pavāraṇā ceremony separately; but soon after that each Bhikkhunī is required to 'invite' the Bhikkhu Saṅgha also to 'point out if any 'wrong' has been 'seen, heard or suspected.' If it is not so done, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 57; Pāc. p. 429; Pm. (B), p. 42; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 338-340). After the Pavāraṇā ceremony, the Bhikkhunī must take a long journey of at least five to six Yojanas; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 40; Pāc. p. 406; Pm. (B), p. 41).

An occasion may arise when the Saṅgha is unable to hold the Pavāraṇā ceremony on the full-moon day of Āsvina month on account of 'dissension' in the Saṅgha. But later when the 'dissension' is overcome, the Saṅgha may hold the Pavāraṇā on any day in the month of Kattika. This is known as Sāmaggī-pavāraṇā. (Cf. Kv. (M), p. 86).

As mentioned above a monk who has committed some 'offence' (āpatti) is not allowed to attend the Pavāraṇā ceremony till he 'expiates' it, and so the Pavāraṇā is 'postponed' for the time being for the 'expiation' of the 'offence'. This 'postponement' of Pavāraṇā is known as Pavāraṇā-ṭhapana. (Mv. pp. 189-191; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1140).

Pavāraṇādāna

In case a monk is sick and physically unable to be present himself to attend the Pavāraṇā ceremony, the Buddha has allowed him to 'despatch' his Pavāraṇā ('invitation') through another monk. It is known as Pavāraṇādāna. For the despatch of his Pavāraṇā the sick monk should approach another monk and after paying due respects he should request him by speech or by gesture to carry his Pavāraṇā to the Saṅgha and to act there on his behalf accordingly. (Pavāraṇaṃ dammi, pavāraṇaṃ me hara, pavāraṇaṃ me ārocehi, mamatthāya pavārehi. — Mv. p. 169; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1136).

Pavāraṇāsaṅgaha

In case the Bhikkhus happen to spend their Vassāvāsa (rainy season resort) at such a Vihāra where they find a comfortable living and so they desire to stay there for some time more even after the first Pavāraṇā (i. e. Āsvina Pūnnimā), the Buddha has allowed the monks to stay there and to hold the Pavāraṇā on the next full-moon day instead of the first Pavāraṇā. The act of postponement of the first Pavāraṇā is known as Pavāraṇāsaṅgaha. For this purpose a Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the Saṅgha in which every member of the Saṅgha must be present. On this day the Uposatha is observed and the Pātimokkha is recited. This decision of Pavāraṇāsaṅgaha must be unanimous and all the monks must attend it as no Chanda (proxy) is admissible on this occasion. (Mv. pp. 196-197; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1142).

Pavāraṇābāraka (–Bhikkhu)

A Bhikkhu who carries the Pavāraṇā ('invitation') of a sick monk to the Saṅgha on the occasion of the Pavāraṇā ceremony is known as Pavāraṇāhāraka (-Bhikkhu). It is the duty of this monk to carry the Pavāraṇā of the sick monk and apprise it to the Saṅgha and to act there on behalf of him in the Pavāraṇā ceremony. If he does not act so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭṭa. (Mv. pp. 169-170).

Pavārita (I)

A monk who has taken up his meal. This he expresses by refusing to any further food other than what he has in his bowl which he is still eating. This refusal he may express either by speech or by gesture. The following conditions are laid down to consider a monk as Pavārita : (i) The Bhikkhu is still eating (Asanaṃ paññāyati); (ii) The meal being taken by him is of five kinds of Bhojanāni (Bhojanaṃ paññāyati); (iii) The donor is still standing at a distance of 2½ hands (Hatthapāse thito); (iv) The donor is still ready to offer (Abhiharati); (v) The Bhikkhu expresses his refusal by speech or gesture (Paṭikkhepo paññāyati). (Pāc. pp. 116, 329; Kv. (M), p. 219; SP. Vol. II, pp. 841-842).

A Pavārita monk should not eat up again any kind of meal or eatable 'afresh' (Anatirittam bhojanīyaṃ vā khādanīyaṃ vā); otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 35; Pāc. p. 116; Pm. (B), p. 13).

Pavārita (II)

A monk who has 'invited' the Pavāraṇā. (Mv. p. 175 ff. p; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1138) see PAVĀRANĀ.

Passāvakumbhī

An urinal soak-pit. The Buddha has recommended it in an Ārāma. (Cv. p. 231).

Passāvadonikā

A trough for urine in the latrine. This was recommended by the Buddha to be kept in the Vaccakuṭṭi (privy). (Cv. p. 231).

Passāvapādukā

A foot-stool fixed in the urinal. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 210; Cv. p. 231).

Pākāra

The fencing-wall of the Vihāra, made of brick, stone or wood (Iṭṭhakāpākāra, Silāpākāra, Dārupākāra). This was allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 247).

Pācittiya

A kind of ecclesiastical offence which ought to be 'expiated' when committed. By committing this offence, the monk becomes 'non-virtuous' and all his activities are regarded as against the moral rules; and thereby his mind is supposed to be 'deluded'. (Cf. Pāṭeti kusalam dhammam ariyamaggaṃ aparajjhati. Cittasamohanaṭṭhānam tenetaṃ iti vuccati.—Pari. p. 263).

There are as many as 92 Pācittiya offences in the Bhikkhu-Pātimokkha and 166 in the Bhikkhunī-Pātimokkha. (71 offences are common). The Bhikkhu Pācittiya offences are grouped into the following nine groups (vaggas), namely; (i) Musāvādavagga; (ii) Bhūtagāmaṇḍavagga; (iii) Bhikkhunovādavagga; (iv) Bhojanavagga; (v) Acelakavagga; (vi) Surāpānavagga; (vii) Soppāṇakavagga; (viii) Sahadhammikavagga; (ix) Ratanavagga. The Bhikkhunī Pācittiyas are divided into the following sixteen groups: (i) Lasunavagga; (ii) Rattandhakāravagga; (iii) Naggavagga; (iv) Tuvaṭṭavagga; (v) Cittāgāravagga; (vi) Ārāmaṇḍavagga; (vii) Gabbhinīvagga; (viii) Kumārībhūtavagga; (ix) Chattupāhanavagga; (x) Musāvādavagga; (xi) Bhūtagāmaṇḍavagga; (xii) Bhojanavagga; (xiii) Carittavagga; (xiv) Jotivagga; (xv) Diṭṭhivagga; (xvi) Dhammikavagga. (Pm. (B). pp. 11-20 & 38-52).

If a monk or nun commits an offence of Pācittiya, this may be 'pacified' by (i) Sammukhavinīya (i. e. in the 'presence' of Śiṅha, Puggala, Vinaya and Dhamma) (ii) Paṭiññātakaraṇa (i. e. by admitting the offence before the Saṅgha or a monk); or (iii) by Tiṇavatthāraka (i. e. by 'covering up'). (Cv. p. 188).

The Pācittiya offences are grouped under the Aduṭṭhullāpatti and are also known as Lahukāpatti (minor offence). The matters concerning the Pācittiya are included the Āpattādhikaraṇa. (Ibid. p. 188).

Pāṭidesanīya

A group of offences which ought to be 'confessed' (before a monk) in the prescribed manner as laid down in the text, thus : "Gārayham, āvuso, dhammam apajjam asappāyam pāṭidesanīyam, taṃ paṭidesemi" ti. (i. e. "I have fallen into a blame-worthy matter, unbecoming, which ought to be confessed, I confess" it.). (Pāc. pp. 234, 236, 238, 241, 282, 284; Pm. (B). pp. 20, 52-53).

The Pāṭidesanīya offences are connected with the food taken by asking. There are four offences in this group relating to the monks and eight to the nuns. (Ibid. Cf. Pari. pp. 42-43, 126-128; cf. SP. Vol. II. p. 993).

Pāṭipadika (—Bhatta)

The meal offered by a layman on the first day of the fortnight (Pakkha), i. e. one day after the Upasatha. When invited, the Saṅgha sends a monk or monks. The Buddha has allowed such a meal. (Cv. p. 272, Mv. p. 55; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1354).

Pātimokkha or Pāṭimokkha

A collection of various monastic rules as contained in the Vinayapīṭaka. It is laid down that this must be recited by the fraternity fortnightly, on the Upasatha day (i.e. on the 14th or 15th day of a month). The recitation of this must be done collectively by the Saṅgha. There are two Pātimokkhas, viz., Bhikkhu-Pātimokkha and Bhikkhunī-Pātimokkha. The former consists of 227 rules while in the latter there are 311 rules.

In the Mahāvagga [p. 106] the word Patimokkha is explained thus : Ādimetaṃ mukhametaṃ pamukhametaṃ kusalanāṃ dhammānaṃ, i.e. it is the beginning, it is the 'face', it is the supreme of all the 'good'. Similarly in the Kv. [(M) p. 84] the meaning of the term is given thus : Pātimokkhaṃ: Atipāmomkhaṃ, atiseṭṭhaṃ, atiuttamaṃ iti attho. (the 'supreme', the 'excellent', the 'principal'; i.e. the most important rules for the Saṅgha).

This word has also been used in the sense of 'strict observance of the Sīlas'. For instance, 'Pātimokkhasaṃvarasaṃvuto viharati' refers to one who is leading a life of strict observance of the Sīlas. (Cf. Majjhimanikāya, Vol. I, p. 47; Vol. III, p. 62; Vibhaṅgapāli, p. 294).

The Bhikkhu-Pātimokkha is divided into eight sections as according to the gravity of the offences. These are : (i) Pārājikā, (ii) Saṅghādisesā, (iii) Aniyatā (iv) Nissaggiyā Pacittiya, (v) Pacittiya, (vi) Pāṭidesanīyā, (vii) Sekhiyā; (viii) Adhikaraṇasamatha. The Bhikkhunī-Pātimokkha has only seven sections, the same as above, except the Aniyatā.

Pātimokkha-Uddesa

'Recitation' of the Pātimokkha text. There are two kinds of Pātimokkha-uddesas, viz., (i) Ovādapātimokkha-uddesa, (ii) Āṇāpātimokkha-uddesa. The 'admonition' by the Buddha to the Saṅgha in Gāthās beginning with 'Khanti paramaṃ tapo, titikkhā...', or 'Sabba pāpassa akaraṇaṃ...' or 'Anupavādo anupaghāto...' etc. is described as the Ovādapātimokkha. As the Vinaya text of the Pātimokkha is a sort of 'command' for the monks and nuns, it is also called Āṇāpātimokkha. (Kv. (M), p. 93-94; SP. Vol. I, pp. 176-177).

The recitation of the text of the Pātimokkha must be made in full; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. Should there be any 'danger' (Antarāya), the Pātimokkha text may be partially recited. The 'dangers' are: Rājanantarāya (danger from a king or state), Corantarāya (from a thief), Agyantarāya (from fire), Udakantarāya (from water, flood etc.), Manussantarāya (from human being), Amanussantarāya

(from non-human being), Vāṇantarāya (from wild animals), Sarīsapantarāya (from reptiles), Jīvitanantarāya (from death), Brahmacariyantarāya (danger on mendicant's life). Under such circumstances the recitation of the Pātimokkha text may be in five ways, viz., (i) the Nidāna portion of the text is recited in full but the rest four Uddesas in brief; (ii) the Nidāna and four Pārājikās could be recited in full but the remaining three in brief; (iii) the Nidāna, four Pārājikās and seventeen Saṅghādisesās could be recited in full but the remaining two Aniyatās and Vitthāruddesas in brief; (iv) the whole text could be recited except the last one, the Vitthāruddesa; (v) the full text of the Pātimokkha is recited. (Ibid. Cf. Mv. p. 114).

Usually the recital of the Pātimokkha should be made by the eldest Thera provided he can. (Therāhikaṃ Pātimokkhaṃ). In case he cannot do so, a 'competent' and 'able' monk may recite. (Mv. p. 117).

The Pātimokkha must be recited by the full Saṅgha on every fortnight. (Ibid. p. 108).

Before the recitation of the Pātimokkha necessary 'arrangements' (Pubbakaraṇāni) have to be done. Its necessary 'arrangements' are: sweeping of the Vihāra; keeping the light ready; keeping the water there; and keeping the seats ready. (Sammañjanī paṭiṭṭha ca udakaṃ āsanena ca. Uposathassa etāni pubbakaraṇāni ti vuccati.—Cf. Ibid. p. 119; Pm. (B), p. 1). Similarly before the actual recitation of the Pātimokkha begins, the following 'preliminaries' (Pubbakiccāni) are to be fulfilled. These are: (i) Chanda-akkhāna (declaration of the 'consent' of an absentee by a messenger); (ii) Paṇisuddhi-akkhāna (declaration of the 'purity' of an absentee by a messenger); (iii) Utu-akkhāna (declaration of the month, day, date, etc.); (iv) Bhikkhugaṇanā-akkhāna (declaration of the number of the monks present); (v) Opāda-akkhāna (declaration of the wishes of the nuns for their 'exhortation'). (Mv. p. 117-121; Pm. (B), p. 1).

The recitation of the Pātimokkha should be made only in the assembly of 'pure' monks. No 'objectionable' person should be present in the assembly when the recitation is made. If the recitation is made in the presence of any 'objectionable' person the offence of Dukkaṭṭa is committed. (Mv. pp. 117, 141-142).

Pātimokkha—Thapana

'Postponement' of the recitation of the Pātimokkha on account of the presence of an 'undesirable person', as the assembly has been defiled by his presence. It has been laid down by the Buddha that the Pātimokkha should be recited in the presence of only 'pure monks'. The 'postponement' of the recitation of the Pātimokkha may be made if any Bhikkhu in the assembly is found having committed an offence of the *Pātimokkha (Sīlavipatti); or any offence other than the Pātimokkha (Ācāravipatti); or holding wrong views (Diṭṭhivipatti); or earning wrong livelihood (Ājīvaṇṇipatti); or having committed any offence like Pārājika, Saṅghādisesa, Pacittiya, Pāṭisaṇṇiya, Dukkaṭa; or whose offence has not yet been 'sumed up' (akatāya) or still under consideration (vipṭakatāya); or having committed Thullaccaya, Dubbhāsita offences; or whose case of Pārājika is still under consideration (Pārājika-kathā vipṭakatā hoti); or one who has declared himself to disrobe (Sikkham pacckkhātako); or whose declaration of disrobing is still under consideration (Sikkham pacckkhātakathā vipṭakatā hoti). The recitation of the Pātimokkha may also be postponed if the assembly of the monks is not found legally complete (Dhammikaṃ sāmaggim na upeti); or if a monk withdraws his acceptance from the legally complete assembly of monks (Dhammikaṃ sāmaggim paccādiyati); or the matter of the withdrawal is still under consideration (Dhammikāya sāmaggiyā paccādānakathā vipṭakatā). The recitation of the Pātimokkha should be postponed if a monk is present in the assembly whose offence in respect of Sīlavipatti or Ācāravipatti or Diṭṭhivipatti is seen or heard or suspected. (Cv. pp. 359-364).

It has been laid down by the Buddha that the recitation of the Pātimokkha should not be heard by the monk who has committed any 'offence.' If the monk with some 'offence' listens to the Pātimokkha, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. And if the monks find such a monk listening to the Pātimokkha, the recitation of it should be postponed till he leaves the assembly. (Ibid. p. 358),

If the monks find these 'undesirable monks' (mentioned above) present in the assembly, a Ñattikamma (notification) should be held to announce this situation and then the recitation should be 'postponed.' (Ibid. p. 362 ff.).

But the recitation of the Pātimokkha should never be postponed on account of some faulty or fake reasons. (Ibid. p. 359).

Pātheyya

Provision for the journey. It is allowed by the Buddha for the monks when going on a long journey where the road is deserted (kāntāra) and the food is scarce to find. The provisions may be rice, Mugga, Māsa (phaelus Indica), salt, molasses, oil, Ghee and even some money (Hirañña). The money may be carried only if a Kaṣṭhiyakāraka (a lay-disciple) is there to carry the money. (Mv. pp. 258-259).

Pādakathalikā or Pādakaṭhalikā

A basin made of wood to wash the feet. (Adhotapādaṭṭhapanaṃ—SP. Vol. II. p. '950, III, pp. 1236). Buddhaghosa describes it as a pot for rubbing the feet also. (Pādagaṃsaṇaṃ vā—Ibid. Vol. III 1236).

A Pādakathalikā was usually kept in each Vihāra; and it was customary to offer it to a guest or to the teacher when they arrive at the Vihāra. If a guest is not offered the Pādakathalikā by the resident monks, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (See Āvāsikavattakathā in the Cv. p. 314; Cf. also pp. 52, 71, 75, 77, etc.). Any person entering into the Vihāra should wash his feet in the Pādakathalikā.

When the Buddha, for the first time visited Isipatana Migadāya after his Enlightenment, his five disciples offered him the Pādakathalikā as a mark of respect. (Mv. p. 12).

Pādakhilābādho

A kind of disease caused by a corn in the feet. (Pādato khīlasadisam maṃsam nikkhantaṃ hoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1148). If a monk suffered from it, the Buddha allowed him to use a sandal (Upāhanā). (Mv. p. 207).

Pādaghamsani

A feet scrubber. For this purpose a stone-chip (Sakkhara), or a potsherd (Kathala) or the sea-foam (Samuddaphenakam) may be used by the monks. (Cv. p. 219).

Pādacchinna

A person whose foot or feet or a part of it are mutilated. (Yassa aggapade vā gopphakesu vā jaṅghāya vā yattha kattha ci eko vā pādā chinnā honti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1080). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and others who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Pādapiṭṭha

A foot-stool. It was used to put the foot on after washing (probably from the Pādakathalikā). (Dhotapādaṭṭhapanakam.—SP. Vol. II, p. 950).

A Pādapiṭṭha was usually kept in each Vihāra; and it was customary to offer it to a guest, or teacher, or preceptor along with the Pādakathalikā (water basin) when they arrived at a Vihāra. It was one of the duties of the monks to offer it to a guest; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (See Āvāsikavattakathā in the Cv. p. 314; also Cf. pp. 71, 74, 77, etc.).

When the Buddha, for the first time after his Enlightenment visited Isipatana Migadāya (Mod. Sarnath, Varanasi), his five disciples offered him the Pādapiṭṭha along with the Pādakathalikā as a mark of respect. (Mv. p. 12).

It is interesting to observe that on the Gupta gold coins the king is seen sitting on a throne with his foot on a foot-stool. (For instance see: The Catalogue of Gupta Gold Coins in the Bayana Hoard by A. S. Altekar, p. 57; Plate VI—3, 4).

Pādapuñchanī

A door-mat to wipe out dust from the feet. The Buddha allowed the bear's skin, or a coir made of rotten rug, wool etc., or any other cloth to use as Pādapuñ- chant. (Cv. pp. 271; 413; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1334; Vimativinodanī Tīkā (M), Vol. II, p. 248).

Pādabhañjana

An ointment for chilblain. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Pādukā

A sandal (made of any material other than leather). It may be made of wood, palm leaves, bamboo leaves (Tālapatta-pādukā), grass (Tiṇa-pādukā), Muñja grass, marshy date-palm (Hintālapādukā), wool, or may be decorated with gold, silver, gem, lapis lazuli (Veluriyamayapādukā), quartz (Phalikamayapādukā), bronze (Kaṃsamayapādukā), siliceous clay (Kācamayapādukā), tin (Tipumayapādukā), lead (Sīsamayapādukā), copper (Tambamayapādukā). (Mv. pp. 207-210).

The Pādukā was not allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Na, bhikkhave, kāci saṅkamaniyā pādukā dhāretabbā. Yo dhāreyya āpatti dukkaṭassa.—Ibid. p. 210).

The term Pādukā is also used for the foot-stand fixed in the privy, in the urinal for rinsing purposes. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, tisso pādukā dhuvaṭṭhāniyā asaṅkamānīyo vaccapādukam, passāva-pādukam, ācamanapādukam.—Ibid. p. 210; Cf. Cv. pp. 231-232).

Pāna

Sweet-drinks. There are eight kinds of sweet-drinks allowed by the Buddha for the monks. These are: Mango juice, Jambu-juice (rose-apple juice), Coca-juice (wild banana juice), Moca-juice (banana-juice), Madhu-juice (Honey-tree, bassia latifolia juice), grape-juice (Muddikāpāna), sweet-drink of water-lily root (Sālūkāpāna) and the sweet drink of the juice of Phārusaka (Phālasā in Hindi). (Mv. p. 260). According to the SP. [Vol. III, pp. 1166-1167], these sweet drinks are regarded as Yāmakālika and hence, may be taken at any time even in the afternoon or in the evening. But these drinks should be taken only cold but never hot. If necessary, it may be warmed in the sun. (Ibid.; also Cf. Kv. (M), p. 231). These drinks should be taken only when one feels its necessity (satipaccaye); but never as food; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Pāc. p. 121).

Pāṇiyamaṇḍapa

Same as PĀNĪYASĀLĀ. (Cv. p. 247). It was probably a hut to keep the water in the Vihāra.

Pāṇiyasaṅkha

A cup or glass (of conch) for drinking the water, kept in the Pāṇiyasālā (water-place). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 247; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1303).

Pāṇiyasarāvaka

A small water-cup for drinking the water, usually kept in the Pāṇiyasālā (water-place) in a Vihāra. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 247; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1303).

Pāṇiyasālā

A small room or hut for keeping the drinking water in a Vihāra; a drinking waterplace. It was usually constructed near the Upatthānasālā where the monks used to take their meals. The provision of such a room was allowed by the Buddha in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 247). It is also mentioned that if the floor of this room is low, it may be raised by bricks, stone or even by wood. The stairs also may be constructed if necessary. Bamboo or string may be provided for hanging the robes. (Ibid.).

Pāparogi

A person who is suffering from an incurable or filthy disease. (Arisabhagandarapittasemhakaśasosādīsu yena kenaci rogena niccāturo atekiccharogo jeguccho amanāpo. — SP. Vol. III, p. 1082). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 95). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Pāpasamācāra

Improper act of a monk or nun; for instance, planting of flower plants, etc. (in order to attract many lay-devotees). Such a person is liable to commit an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 13; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 17; Parā. p. 275; Pm. (B), pp. 4 & 33. Also see KULADŪSANĀ. Cf. Kv. (M), p. 143; SP. Vol. II, p. 632).

Pāmaṅga

A kind of thread, put on the body for decoration or such other purposes. (Yam kiñci palambakasuttaṃ. — SP. Vol. III, p. 1282; Cf. Brāhmaṇaṃ yaññopacitasuttādi akāraṃ vuccati. — Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 228). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Pārājika

The most grievous type of offence which if committed entails the removal of a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī and other members from the Saṅgha for ever. He or she is then never readmitted to the Saṅgha. In fact, it relates to those immoral acts which make a monk instantly lose his monkhood and make him utterly unfit for the whole life to live as a monk. Literally, he is 'defeated' to remain as a monk. (Pārājiko hotīti parājito hoti. Parājayam āpanno.—Kv. (M), p. 109).

Four Pārājikās are mentioned in the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha (and also in the Pārājikapāli of the Vinaya Piṭaka), while eight in the Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha. These are the following Pārājikās: (1) Sexual intercourse (methunadhamma); (2) Theft (adinnaṃ theyyasaṅkhātāṃ); (3) Murder of a human being or abetment of murder (manussaviggaham jīvita voropanam); (4) Exaggeration of one's supernatural power of performing miracles, etc. (uttarimanussadhammam). In the Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha additional four Pārājikās are mentioned besides the above four Pārājikās. The additional four are: (5) Enjoying the contact of a male person between the collar-bone and knee (Ubbhajānumaṇḍalikā); (6) Concealing the Pārājika offence of another Bhikkhunī (Vajjapaṭicchādikā); (7) Becoming the follower of a monk who has been 'suspended' (Ukkhittaka bhikkhu) (Ukkhitānuvattika); (8) Possessing such eight dispositions which are tinged with sexuality (Atthavattukā).

In the Kv. [(M), p. 126; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 510-511] all those persons who are not eligible for ordination are also included in the list of the Pārājika persons. These are 24 in number; viz., (a) Bhikkhu Pārājika—4, (b) Bhikkhunī Pārājika or Asādharaṇa (additional)—4; (c) Abhabba puggala, i. e. unsuitable persons for ordination—11 (These are: Paṇḍaka (eunuch), Theyyasaṃvāsaka (imposter monk), Titthiyapakkhan-taka (a monk gone over to other sect), Tiracchāna (non-human being), Mātughātaka (matricide), Pitughātaka (patricide), Arahantaghātaka (murderer of an Arahanta), Lohituppādaka (a shedder of the blood of the Buddha), Saṅghabhedaka (a schism-maker in the Saṅgha), Bhikkhunīdūsaka (a seducer of the nun) and Ubhatooṇājanaka (a hermaphrodite); (d) Vibbhanta Bhikkhunī—1; (e) Lambī puggala (one having unusual long sex-organ)—1; (f) Mudupitthika (a person having a soft back)—1; (g) A women who takes the organ of another person in the mouth—1; (h) who sits on the organ of another person—1. Thus total=24. All these persons are unfit for ordination and hence, their admission into the Saṅgha is impossible; and even if they somehow or other happen to get their admission into the Saṅgha, this should be cancelled and they should never be readmitted.

If a monk or nun commits an offence of Pārājika, he or she is compared with 'a person whose head is cut off, or a withered leaf dropped from the tree, or a stone slab split into two, or a palm tree cut from the top'. As they can never be 'brought to their original state, so also a monk or nun who commits the Pārājika cannot be reinstated to the position of monkhood. (Mv. pp. 100-101; Cf. Pāc. pp. 287, 294, 297; Parā. pp. 35, 58, 91, 115).

Pārivāsika (I)

A Bhikkhu condemned for the punishment of Pārivāsa on account of concealing the Saṅghādisesa offence. There are many restrictions imposed upon a monk who is undergoing the punishment of Parivāsa. These restrictions are given in detail in the Pārivāsika-khandhaka of the Cullavagga. (Cv. pp. 67-71). It is laid down that a Pārivāsika monk should not accept due honour or respect from any other 'pure' monk; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Ibid. p. 67). The Pārivāsika monks may, of course, behave amongst themselves respectfully. He cannot confer Upasampadā; cannot become ācariya; cannot take the service of a Sāmaṇera; cannot accept the appointment to give 'admonitions' to the nuns (Bhikkhunovāda sammuti); cannot 'admonish' even if appointed by the Saṅgha for the purpose; he should not commit the same offence for which he has been punished or any other similar offence; he should not deprecate the punishment nor should he criticise those who took part in the ecclesiastical action conducted by the Saṅgha against him. He should not suggest for holding the Uposatha or Pavāraṇā ceremony. He should not accuse the other monks of their offences; should not be a preacher; should not seek permission to accuse other alleged monks; should not 'rebuke' other monks. He should not create any disturbance amongst the monks. He should not go or sit in front of a monk, rather he should take the last seat or bed and should occupy the worst place in the Vihāra for himself. He should not 'go behind' any 'pure' monk nor should he allow any other monk 'to go behind' him. He should not take up the vow of dwelling in the forest or living only on alms. He must apprise of his offence to the monks if visiting to another Vihāra or to the monks who are visiting his own Vihāra. He must announce to the Saṅgha that he is a Pārivāsika on every Uposatha and Pavāraṇā day. If he is sick, this should be communicated through a messenger. He is not allowed to live in a Vihāra or elsewhere if there lives no monk, unless he is accompanied with a 'pure' monk or there arises some emergency. He is however allowed to visit a Vihāra all alone where friend monks live and that also if he can reach there within one day. He is not allowed to reside under the same roof with any 'pure' monk. If a 'pure' monk happens to come to him, he has to get up and vacate his seat for him. He is not allowed to keep a higher seat or higher place while sitting or strolling with other monks. There are such other restrictions numbering 49 mentioned in the text. (Ibid. pp. 67-71; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1236-1247).

A Pārivāsika is however permitted to enjoy some privileges (as according to his age from Upasampadā) on the following occasions only : Uposatha, Pavāraṇā, Vassikasāṭṭika (rainy season robe), Oṇojana (food given by an other 'pure' monk) and Bhatta (feast). (Cv. p. 68).

In case a Pārivāsika happens to live under the same roof with another 'pure' monk or lives at a place where there is no monk or does not inform of his state of being a Pārivāsika to the incoming monks to his Vihāra, then his Parivāsa for that night is regarded as cancelled. (Tayo kho pārivāsikassa bhikkhuno ratticchedā — Sghavāso vipphavāso anārocana.—Ibid. p. 71).

A Pārivāsika monk may drop his Parivāsa temporarily by informing the Saṅgha or a monk (if the Saṅgha is too large and it is not physically possible to inform each and every monk). But as soon as he is in a position to take up the Parivāsa, he should take it up again. (Ibid. p. 71). After the Parivāsa period is over, the Pārivāsika undergoes a period of six nights as his Mānatta. After this period, he is 'called back' (abbhāna) and accepted as a 'pure monk' by the Saṅgha. (Ibid. pp. 81-92).

Pārivāsika (II)

A mendicant of another sect who is granted a 'probationary period' of four months in order to test his personality, is known as Pārivāsika. (Mv. pp. 73-75). See PARIVĀSA (II).

Pārivāsikachanda

An occasion may arise when a Chanda ('consent' of an absentee monk) is brought to the Saṅgha by a monk. But as soon as this Chanda is intimated to the Saṅgha, the assembly is dismissed on account of some disturbance. The Saṅgha sometime later meets again and the same Chanda is placed before the assembly. This Chanda is called Pārivāsikachanda. But this Chanda is not considered as legitimate one because it was valid only on the previous occasion (not on this occasion). The Saṅgha, therefore, cannot perform the Saṅgha-kamma with this Pārivāsikachanda. A fresh Chanda should again be brought. (Pāc. p. 466; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p.987 Kv. (M), p. 348-349).

Pārivāsikapārisuddhi

An occasion may arise when a Pārisuddhi (the 'purity' of an absentee monk) is brought to the Saṅgha by another monk on the Upasatha day. But as soon as the Pārisuddhi is intimated to the Saṅgha, the assembly is dismissed on account of some disturbance. Sometime later the Saṅgha meets again to perform the Upasatha and then the same Pārisuddhi is placed before the Saṅgha. This Pārisuddhi is known as Pārivāsikapārisuddhi. But this Pārisuddhi is not considered as legitimate one because it was valid only on the previous occasion (not on this occasion). The Saṅgha, therefore, cannot perform the Upasatha ceremony with this old Pārisuddhi. A fresh Pārisuddhi should be brought from the absentee monk on this occasion. (Mv. pp. 348-349).

Pārisuddhi

Literally it means 'purity' (on the basis of the rules laid down in the Pātimokkha). It is compulsory that all the monks of one Sīmā (area) should attend the Upasatha ceremony together. An occasion may arise when a monk is sick and he cannot be present by himself. Under such circumstance it is desirable that the sick monk should 'despatch' his 'purity' through a competent monk so that the Saṅgha may know that he is 'pure' in respect of Vinaya rules. By despatching the 'purity' the absentee monk is supposed to have performed the Upasatha formally. If an absentee monk fails to despatch his 'purity' through a 'competent' and 'able' monk, he commits the offence of Dukkata. (Mv. pp. 121-122; Pm. (B) p. 1; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1120; Kv. (M), p. 96).

The despatch of 'purity' is called Pārisuddhidāna; and the monk who carries the 'purity' is known as Pārisuddhihāraka. It is the duty of the Pārisuddhihāraka monk to inform the 'purity' to the Saṅgha without fail. If the Pārisuddhihāraka hands over the 'purity' to another monk who also in turn to another and he also to another and so on, then the Pārisuddhi is not considered as carried. This is known as Bilālasaṅkhalikā Pārisuddhi, i. e. 'a Pārisuddhi in chain.' (SP. Vol. III, p. 1120; Kv. (M), p. 96).

Pārisuddhi-Upasatha

Same as Gaṇa-Upasatha. (Mv. pp. 125-126; Kv. (M), p. 93). When there are only two or three monks (not four, the minimum number to constitute the Saṅgha) and they hold the Upasatha, then they announce only their Pārisuddhi ('purity') among themselves, because they cannot recite the Pātimokkha as this is possible only before a Saṅgha. As in this Upasatha only the Pārisuddhi is announced, it is known as Pārisuddhi-uposatha (Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1114-1237). See also UPOSATHA.

Pārisuddhihāraka

An 'able' and 'competent' monk who carries the Pārisuddhi ('purity') of a sick monk or of one who being too busy is unable to attend the Upasatha ceremony personally, is known as Pārisuddhihāraka. It is the duty of the Pārisuddhihāraka to convey the Pārisuddhi to the Saṅgha without fail. (Mv. p. 122; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1114 & 1237).

Pāvāra

A shawl. It was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 298). It may be made of cotton or wool or silk. (Ibid. p. 298; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1187).

Pāvuraṇa

A mantle or covering of the Bhikkhunīs. It was of two kinds, (i) for the winter season, the heavy one, the Garupāvuraṇa and (ii) the lighter one, for the summer season, Lahupāvuraṇa. The Bhikkhunī might beg for it but never for costly one. The maximum price of a Lahupāvuraṇa should not be more than $21\frac{1}{2}$ Kaṃsas or 10 Kahāpaṇas and that of Garupāvuraṇa not more than 4 Kaṃsas or 16 Kahāpaṇas. If a Bhikkhunī begged for a costlier Pāvuraṇa, she committed the offences of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule Nos. 11 & 12, Pāc. pp. 348 & 350). The Gurupāvuraṇa was usually made of wool while the Lahupāvuraṇa was made cotton or silk.

Pāsaka

The button-festener. It is essential that a Pāsaka should be affixed at the end of the Uttarāsaṅga and Saṅghāṭī in order to fasten the Gaṇṭhika (button). (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, gaṇṭhikaṃ pāsakaṃ ti.—Cv. p. 226). It should be stitched at one end by attaching a lining at about four to eight aṅgulas away from the edge. (Ibid. pp. 226-227).

Pāsakaphalaka

A lining of the cloth to be stitched at one end of the Uttarāsaṅga or Saṅghāṭī in order to stiffen the corner for stitching the Pāsaka (button-fastener). This should be stitched at about seven to eight aṅgulas away from the fringe. (Cv. p. 227).

Pāsāda

A large building with high plinth, terraces and domes is called Pāsāda. (Dīghapāsādo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1298, Vol. II, p. 798). It is one of the five 'lodgings' allowed by the Buddha for the monks; the others are Vihāra, Aḍḍhayoga, Hammiya and Guhā. (Cv. p. 239; Mv. p. 55, 100).

The period of its construction should not be more than ten to twelve years, if constructed by the monks themselves (Cv. p. 269).

Piṭṭhakhādaniya

The sweet-ball or pastry prepared from flour.

The Buddha permitted the monks to take all kinds of Piṭṭhakhādaniya. (Mo. p. 262).

Piṭṭhamadda

Paste of oil-seed cake. (Cf. Piṭṭhakhali —SP. Vol. III, p. 1302; Hindi Khali).

It was used with the white chunam (Setavaṇṇa) for plastering the Vihāra. Its use was allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 244).

Piṭṭhasaṅghāṭa

The door-frame or lintel. (Cf. Dvārabahā.—Abhiṭṭhānappadīpikā, Verse No. 218). As the doors of the Vihāra were found not strong, the Buddha allowed the Piṭṭhasaṅghāṭa in the Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Piṇḍa

A lump of food, especially alms, given as food to the monks. (Cf. Mv. p. 39). Also see PINḌAPĀTA.

Piṇḍacārikavatta

Duties of a monk when going round for alms. The Buddha has laid down certain rules which a monk should follow during his alms begging. For instance, the monk must dress himself properly before going round for alms. He should be very careful of his movement when entering a house. He must be courteous in accepting the alms in his bowl. He should not look at the face of the person offering the alms. After returning to the Vihāra he should arrange his seat, water, chair, etc. and take the foot gracefully. (For details see Cv. pp. 319-321).

Piṇḍapāta

The food received in the alms-bowl of a Bhikkhu.

This food must be taken up before noon. It is, therefore, called Yavakālīka. The Piṇḍapāta may consist of five kinds, viz., Odana (cooked rice), Sattu (baked grain flour), Kummāsa (junket, pulse & rice mixed), Maccha (fish) and Mam̐sa (meat). (Pāc. p. 98; Kv. (M) p. 220, 281; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 861).

It is laid down that a monk should not eat the piṇḍapāta if it is arranged by a nun. If one takes it, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 29; Pāc. p. 97). Similarly there are other fifteen Pācittiya offences, four Pāṭidesaniya offences and thirty Sekhiya offences mentioned in the Patimokkha which are connected with the piṇḍapāta of the monks.

Pitughātaka

A patricide. Such a person should never be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkata. In case he has already got his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 91; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1077).

Piṭṭha

A chair, stool or bench. It should not be too high, Its recommended height for the monks is 'eight Sugata fingers' (Sugataṅgula) from the ground. If a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī used a too high piṭṭha, he committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Pācittiya Rule No. 87; Bhikkhunī Pācittiya Rule No. 163.—Pāc. pp. 19, 52, 223; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52). If the height of the piṭṭha is more than the recommended size, it should be cut to the normal height before it is used.

The piṭṭha should not be stuffed with cotton; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 88; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 164.—Pāc. p. 225; Pm. (B), p. 19 & 25). If it was so, the cotton should be taken out before it was used. A cushioned piṭṭha belonging to a lay-man might be used only for sitting but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

There were four kinds of Piṭṭhas, viz., Masārakapiṭṭha, Bundikābaddha-piṭṭha, Kulīrapādaka-piṭṭha and Āhaccapādaka-piṭṭha. (Pāc. pp. 62, 223). The Masāraka-piṭṭha was made by boring a hole into its feet and by putting through a notched end. The Bundikābaddha-piṭha was made by cutting out from one piece of wood, i.e. not by fixing or tying together the feet with the slats. The Kulīrapādaka-piṭha was a decorated chair with its carved or curved legs. Literally it was a 'crab-footer' chair or stool. Its legs were carved like the feet of an animal like horse, ram, etc., or were curved like a crab. (Cf. Assameṇḍakādīnaṃ pādasadisehi pādehi kato. Yo vā pana koci vaṅkapādako ayaṃ vuccati kulīrapādako.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790.; Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354). The Āhaccapādakapiṭha was a chair or bench whose legs were placed in the mortice of the horizontal slat. (Ibid.). All these piṭhas were permitted by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

Another kind of Piṭha which was kept in the Jantāghara was known as Jantāgharapiṭha. This was used in order to protect the robes from being soiled by dirt. (Cv. p. 210). The cane chair was called Bhaddapiṭha. (Cf. Bhaddapiṭhaṃ ti vettamayaṃ piṭhaṃ vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 242). The cloth-seated chair was known as Piṭhikā. (Cf. Piṭhikā ti pilotikabaddhā piṭhameva.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). The Buddha allowed its use for the monks. (Cv. p. 242). The Eḷakapādakapiṭha was a wooden seated chair. (Cf. Dārupaṭṭikāya upariṇāde ṭhapetvā bhājanaphalakam viya katopiṭhaṃ vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). This was also allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 242). A multi-legged chair was called Āmalakavaṭṭikapiṭha. (Cf. Āmalakākārena yojitaṃ bahupādapiṭhaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1300). Its use was also allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 242). A chair whose seat was stuffed with the rice-straw, was called Palālapiṭha. The monks were permitted to use it. (Cv. p. 242). A chair with fixed-stuffed-seat was also allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. This was called Onandhapiṭha. (Ibid. p. 244).

The chair belonging to the Saṅgha must be properly kept after use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 14; Bhikkhunī Rule 110.—Pāc p. 62).

Piṭhikā

A cloth-seated chair (probably an easy chair with cloth seat). (Cf. Piṭhikā ti pilotikabaddhā piṭhameva.—SP. (M), Vol. III, p. 1299). The Buddha allowed this type of chair for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

Puggala-Uposatha

Since one Bhikkhu alone cannot perform the Uposatha ceremony, he is required to take up the 'resolve' (Adhiṭṭhāna) only for holding the Uposatha. This is known as Puggala-uposatha. It is also called Adhiṭṭhāna-uposatha. (Mv. p. 126; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 93, 95). See UPOSATHA.

Pupphadasā-Cīvara

A robe with floral printed fringe. The Buddha prohibited the use of such a robe. If any monk used it, he committed the offence of Dukkata. (Mv. p. 321).

Puppharajana

Dye made out of flower. It was one of the six dyes allowed for the robes of the monks. The other dyes were made out of root, trunk, bark, leaves or fruits of a tree. (Mv. p. 302). According to the SP. [Vol. III, pp. 1194-1195] the flower of Kusumbha or Kimsuka should not be used as the dye.

Puppharasa

Flower-juice. All kinds of flower-juices, except Madhūka (bassia latifolia) flower-juice, were allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). The flower juice was regarded as Yāmakālīka and so, may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. II, 861; Vol. III, p. 1167).

Pubbakaraṇa

‘Arrangements’ to be kept ready before holding the Upasatha ceremony. These are the following : (i) Sweeping of the Upasathāgāra (Sammajjanī); (ii) Light arrangement (Padīpo); (iii) Keeping the water ready for drinking and washing purposes (Udakaṃ); (iv) Sitting arrangement (Āsanaṃ). (Sammajjanī padīpo ca, udakaṃ āsanena ca. Upasathassa etāni pubbakaraṇaṃ ti vuccati.—Kv. (M), p. 95; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1121, 1435; Cf. Pm. (B), pp. 1; Mv. pp. 119-120).

Arrangements on other occasions are also known as Pubbakaraṇa; e.g. Pubba-karaṇa of Kāthina. (Pari. p. 310).

Pubbakicca

‘Preliminaries’ to be observed prior to the ‘recitation’ of the Pātimokkha in the Upasatha ceremony. These are the following five : (i) Chanda-akkhāna, i. e. proclamation of the ‘consent’ (chanda) of the absentee monks; (ii) Pārisuddhi-akkhāna, i. e. proclamation of ‘purity’ (pārisuddhi) of the absentee monks; (iii) Utu-akkhāna, i. e. proclamation of the date and season of the Upasatha day; (iv) Bhikkhugaṇanā-akkhāna i. e. proclamation of the number of the monks in the assembly; (v) Ovāda-akkhāna i. e. announcement of the desire of the Bhikkhunis for ‘exhortation’ (ovāda). (Chandapārisuddhiutukkhānaṃ bhikkhugaṇanā ca ovādo. Upasathassa etāni pubbakiccaṃ ti vuccati.—Kv. (M), p. 95; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1122, 1435; Cf. Mv. pp. 118-123; Pm. (B), p. 1).

Purimikā-Vassūpanāyikā

The first Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) which commences from the first day after the full-moon day of Āsāḷha month. The second one (Pacchimikā) starts one month after this, i. e. from the first day after the full-moon day of Sāvaṇa month. A Bhikkhu may take up any of the two Vassūpanāyikās, preferably the first one. (Aparajjugatāyaāsāḷhiyā purimikā upagantabbā; māsaगतāya āsāḷhiyā pacchimikā upagantabbā.—Mv. p. 144; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1126). See VASSĀVĀSA.

Purebhatta

Before the meal-time; i. e. from dawn to noon. (Cf. Aruṇuggamaṇaṃ upādāya yāva majjhantikā.—Pāc. pp. 139, 371).

Pūga

A religious corporation or trust or guild. (Cf. Pūgaṃ ti dhammagaṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 946; Dhammagaṇoti sāsane loke vā anekappakārapuññakārako gaṇo.—Vimati-vinodanīṭṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 72). In case a lady comes for ordination from the region administered by a Pūga and the nuns find her a thief, then this matter must be reported to the Pūga. If the nuns ordained her without informing this fact to the Pūga, an offence of Saṅghādisesa was committed. (Rule No. 2; Pāc. p. 302; Pm. (B), p. 29).

Pokkharani

A pond or a tank. The Buddha allowed the monks to accept a pond if donated by a lay-devotee. The pond may have Ghāṭs, railings, sluices, etc. (Cv. p. 212).

Potthaka

A kind of heavy cloth made of Makaci fibre. (Cf. SP. Vol. III p. 1204). The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks; and if anyone used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 320-321).

PhaPhaṇaka

A kind of comb. (Cf. Dantamaādisu jena kena ci.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1282). Its use was prohibited for the monks by the Buddha. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Phaṇadasā-Civara

A robe arranged in such a manner so that its fringe looked like the hood of a snake. The Buddha did not allow the monks to form the fringe of the robe like this. If a monk put his robe in this fashion, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Phaṇahatthaka

A person with webbed fingers. (Cf. Yassa vaggulipakkhaka viya aṅguliyo sambaddha honti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1081). Such a person should not be ordained.

If one ordained him, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95). In case such a person happened to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination were not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1036).

If a person possessed six fingers, he also should not be ordained unless his extra finger was removed. (Yassa pi cha aṅguliyo honti na pabbājetabbo, pabbājetukāmena adhi-kaṅgulim chinditvā phāsukaṃ katvā pabbājetabbo.—Ibid. p. 1081).

Phalakacīra

A slip of wood or bark used as dress by the ascetics. The Buddha prohibited its use for the monks. If any monk used it, he was liable to commit the offence of Thullaccaya. (Mv. p. 320). Since it was used by the mendicants of other sects, it was also called Titthiyadhaja. (Ibid.).

Phalakhādaniya

The fruit taken as an eatable, just as food (not as a medicine). The Buddha allowed all kinds of fruits for the monks to use as food. (Mv. p. 263). Some such kinds of fruits are mentioned in the SP. [Vol. II, p. 857]; e. g. jackfruit (panasa), bread-fruit (labuja), palmyra fruit (tāḷa), coconut (nālikera), mango (amba), rose-apple (jambu), ambāṭaka (Amaṭā in Hindi ?) tamarind (tintiṇika), mātuluṅga (a kind of citrus fruit, probably matābī in Hindi ?), wood-apple (kapittha. Kaitha in Hindi), gourd (alābu Laukī in Hindi), Kumbhaṇḍa (Kumhaṇḍa in Hindi), timbarūsaka (?), tipusa (a kind of cucumber), vātiṅgaṇa (egg plant. Probably Baigana in Hindi), coca (a kind of wild banana with seeds), honey-tree fruit (madhūka), etc.

Phalabhājaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk selected for the distribution of fruits belonging to the Saṅgha. An 'able' monk is selected for this purpose by the Saṅgha by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma (Cv. p. 273).

Phala-Bhesajja

The medicinal fruit, not used as food by the people, such as Vilaṅga, Pippali, Marica (pepper), Haritika, Vibhītaka (Baheṭā in Hindi), Āmalaka, Gotṭhapphala, etc. Such fruits were allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. The monks might keep these fruits for any number of days, even for the whole life; but could use it only when necessary, otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Mv. p. 220).

Phalarajana

The dye made out of a fruit. It is one of the six dyes allowed for the robes of the monks. The other dyes were prepared out of the root, trunk, bark, leaves or flowers. (Mv. p. 302).

Phalarasa

The fruit-juice. All kinds of fruit-juices were allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks, except the fruit-juice of grains (dhaññarasa). (Mv. p. 260). It was regarded as Yamakālika, and so may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167 Cf. Vol. II, p. 861; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 231).

Phāṇita

Mollasses or other produce of sugar-cane juice. (Cf. Ucchurasam upādāya apakkā vā avatthukapakkā vā sabbā pi avatthukā ucchuvikati phāṇitaṃ ti vuccati.—S? Vol. II, p. 726). It is regarded as a medicine, and so it may be stored for seven days after it's acceptance. But if it is kept for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25; Pārā. pp. 356-357, Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37; Mv. p. 218).

Phāṇita was also used for preparing the delicious food (paṇita bhojana). If a monk took such a food by asking himself, he committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 39; Pāc. pp. 123-125). If a Bhikkhunī used it by asking (not being sick), she committed an offence of Pāṭidesanīya. (Rule No. 3; Pāc. p. 485; Pm. (B). 52).

Phātikamma

In case a monk receives an expensive blanket or rug from another monk, it may be accepted by giving any furniture of higher value or at least of equal value; but never of less value. This is called Phātikamma. (Cv. p. 271; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1333; Vimativinodanīṭikā, (M), Vol. II, p. 248).

Phārusapāna

Sweet-drink of Phārusa-juice. (Phālasā in Hindi). It was one of the eight sweet drinks allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It is regarded as Yamakālika, and so it may be taken even in the afternoon or even in the night. (SP. Vol. II, p. 861; Vol. III, pp. 1167; Cf. Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 122, 240, 243, 425, Kv. (M), p. 231).

BaBaddhasīmā

A 'boundary' or 'limit' of the 'residence' (āvāsa) of the monks to be determined by the Saṅgha for purpose of their Uposatha or other Saṅgha-kamma (ecclesiastical act) by fixing the 'signs' (nimitta) for it. A Ñattidutiya-kamma is held by the Saṅgha for the purpose. For the 'signs' eight objects may be taken, such as, a mountain (Pabbata-nimitta), a block of stone (Pāsāṇa-nimitta), a wood (Vana-nimitta), a tree (Rukkha-nimitta), a highway (Magga-nimitta), a water (Udaka-nimitta). As this Sīmā is demarcated by the 'signs' (for which a Ñattidutiya-kamma is held), it is called Baddha-sīmā. (Mv. p. 109; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1113-1114; Kv. (M), pp. 88-90). See also SĪMĀ.

Badhira

A deaf person. Such a person should not be ordained. If one ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 94). If he has already got the ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Should a person be able to hear a loud voice, he may be ordained. (Yo sabbenā sabbaṃ na suṇāti. Yo pana mahāsaddaṃ suṇāti taṃ pabbājetuṃ vaṭṭati.—Ibid.).

Bāhanta

The two extreme pieces on the either sides of the anuvivaṭṭa of the monk's robe, are known as Bāhanta. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1196—Anuvivaṭṭānaṃ bahi ekekaṃ khaṇḍaṃ). See CĪVARA.

Bāhiralomī-Uṇṇī

A kind of rug outside with hairs and plain inside. Its use was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 197). It may however be used by reversing the hair-side to inside. (Lomāni anto katvā pārūpitum vaṭṭati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1284).

Bidalakam

A split-bamboo or skewer used for folding the mat fixed underneath the Kaṭhina (wooden frame), if the mat is found bigger than the Daṇḍakaṭhina, the under-frame. This was sometimes found necessary when stitching the smaller robes. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Daṇḍakaṭhinapamāṇena kaṭasīrakassa pariyante paṭisaṃharitvā duguṇakaraṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, 1288; also Cf. Vajirabuddhiṭīkā (M), p. 523; Vimativinodanīṭīkā (M), Vol. II, p. 233).

Bidala-Mañca

A bedstead made of laths of split bamboo or cane. (Cf. Vettamañcaṃ veluvilivehi vā vītaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 241). (Is it Maciyā in Hindi?).

Bimbohana

A pillow. The Buddha allowed the use of the pillow for the monks (of a size suited for the head) (Sīsappamāṇaṃ). A pillow of large size (aḍḍhakāyika) was not permitted for the use of the monks. If a monk used a large pillow, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭṭa. (Cv. p. 243). The usual size prescribed for the monks was one span and four aṅgulas from the three corners; and from the middle it should be one close-fisted hand. (Cf. Sīsappamāṇaṃ nāma yassa vithārato tīsu kaṇṇesu dvinnam kaṇṇānaṃ antaraṃ miniyamānaṃ vidatthi ceva caturāṅgulaṃ ca hoti. Majjhātṭhānaṃ muṭṭhi-ratanaṃ hoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1300). The Bimbohana was usually stuffed with cotton. The cotton might be taken from a tree or from a creeper or from grass. (Rukkhatūlaṃ, latātūlaṃ, potakilatūlaṃ.—Cv. p. 243).

The Bimbohana belonging to the Saṅgha can neither be 'distributed' nor 'divided' (avissajjiya, avebhaṅgiya). If it is so done, the offence of Thullaccaya is committed. (Ibid. pp. 266 & 268).

Biḷālasaṅkhalikā-Chanda

A Chanda or 'consent' which is handed over to a Bhikkhu by a sick monk and then that Bhikkhu (Chandahāraka) hands over to another and that also to another and so on. It is known as Biḷālasaṅkhalikā-chanda. Literally it means 'a Chanda in chain'. (SP. Vol III, p. 1120; Kv. (M), p. 26). This Chanda is not regarded as 'carried' to the Saṅgha. (Cf. Mv. p. 123).

Biḷālasaṅkhalikā-Pārisuddhi

The 'purity' or Pārisuddhi which is handed over to a monk by a sick monk and then that monk (Pārisuddhi-hāraka) hands over to another and that also to another and so on. It is known as Biḷālasaṅkhalikā-pārisuddhi. Literally it means 'a Pārisuddhi in chain'. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1120; Kv. (M), p. 96). This Pārisuddhi is not regarded as 'carried' to the Saṅgha. (Cf. Mv. p. 122).

Bundikābaddha-Piṭha

A kind of chair or stool or bench made out of one piece of wood; not by fixing or tying together its feet with slats. (Cf. Bundena pādena saha ekabaddhā aṭṭhā yassa so Bundikābaddho.—Abhidhānappadīpikāṭīkā, Gāthā No. 310). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 242; Pāc. p. 62).

Bundikābaddha-Mañca

A kind of bed or couch which is made out of one piece of wood; not by fixing or tying together its feet with the slats. (Cf. Bundikābaddhā ti aṭṭhāhi mañcapāde daṃsāpetvā pallaṅkasāṅkhepena kato.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790. Bundena pādena saha ekabaddhā aṭṭhā yassāti bundikābaddho.—Kaṅkhāyojanāmahāṭīkā, (M), Vol. III, p. 354; Bundena pādena saha ekabaddhā aṭṭhā yassa so bundikābaddho.—Abhidhānappadīpikāṭīkā, Gāthā No. 310).

It is one of the four kinds of Mañcas allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 242; Pāc. p. 223).

Byatta

A person who is clever or able in the Vinayaṭṭhaka, is regarded as Byatta. (Cf. Byatto nāma yassa sūṭṭhakathāṃ vinayaṭṭhakaṃ vācuggataṃ pavattati. Ayaṃ byatto nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1033).

This word is usually combined with Paṭibala ('competent'). (Cf. Mv. p. 67).

Brahmaḍaṇḍa

A kind of very severe punishment, something like a social boycott. A monk who is scurrilous (mukkhara) and who behaves with other monks very impolitely, angrily, harshly is condemned of Brahmaḍaṇḍa. (Cf. Yo añño bhikkhu mukharo hoti bhikkhū duruttavacanehi ghaṭṭento khumṣento vambhento viharati tassa pi dātabbo.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1522-1523). When the monk is condemned of this punishment, other monks should not speak to him, nor exhort him, nor instruct him. (Neva vattabbo na ovaditabbo nānusāsitaḍḍo.—Cv. p. 414). It is a sort of complete boycott of the monk and then no connection should be kept with him.

Once the Buddha asked Ānanda to request the Saṅgha to punish Channa with the Brahmaḍaṇḍa. After the Mahāparinibbāna of the Buddha, the Saṅgha pronounced the punishment of Brahmaḍaṇḍa against Channa at the end of the First Buddhist Council held at Rajagaha, as desired by the Buddha. Ānanda then apprised him of this punishment at Kosāmbī. (Ibid.).

When the Saṅgha gives this punishment, a monk is deputed to inform the condemned monk about it. This punishment is given by the procedure of Apalokanakamma. If the condemned monk behaves properly and requests the Saṅgha for pardon, the Saṅgha may revoke the punishment. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1522-1523).

Bhaṅga

A kind of coarse cloth made out of the hemp of Bhaṅga plant. It was prescribed as one of the six cloth-materials for the robes of the monks. The others were Khomaṃ, Kappāsikaṃ, Koseyyaṃ, Kambalaṃ, Sāṇaṃ. (Mv. pp. 55; 100; 298. Cf. Etehi pañcahi missitvā katasuttaṃ pana bhaṅgaṃ ti veditabbaṃ, i. e. the cloth made of mixed materials.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1187).

Bhaṅgodaka

A kind of medicinal water prepared from different leaves cooked together. This was used for the treatment of gout (Aṅgavātā). (Cf. Nānāpañṇabhaṅgakuthitaṃ udakaṃ tehi pañṇehi ca udakena ca siñcituṃ sedetabbaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Bhaṇḍāgāra

A store-room for keeping the robes etc. of the monks. The store-room may be a Vihāra, an Aḍḍhayoga, a Pāsāda, a Hammiya or a Guhā, as selected by the Saṅgha (by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma). (Mv. p. 301). The Bhaṇḍāgāra should be in the middle of the Ārāma, easily accessible to every person. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1190).

Bhaṇḍāgārika (—Bhikkhu)

A monk in-charge of the store-room of the civara etc. is known as Bhaṇḍāgārika. The Saṅgha selects a 'just', intelligent and fearless monk for this purpose by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Yo na chandāgatiṃ gaccheyya, na dosāgatiṃ gaccheyya, na mohāgatiṃ gaccheyy, na bhayāgatiṃ gaccheyya, gahitāgahitaṃ ca jāneyya.—Mv. p. 301; Cf. Cv. p. 273; SP. Vol. III, p. 1191).

The Bhaṇḍāgārika is given a particular place in the Vihāra; and from there he should not be removed. If anybody causes him to vacate from this place, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 301).

Bhaṇḍukamma

The act of close-shaving. It is essential that the Saṅgha should be informed before a person is shaved for his ordination. (Mv. p. 80; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1054).

Bhattagga

A refectory, a dining-hall. The monks used to take their meals there. (Mv. p. 262; Cv. p. 317). It is a room in the Vihāra; but usually the laymen used to build it in the village. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1373). The Buddha has laid down that the monks must behave properly when going to meals in the Bhattagga. For details see Bhattaggavattakathā. (Cv. pp. 317-319).

Bhattaggavatta

Duties of the monks when visiting the 'refectory' (Bhattagga). The Buddha has laid down certain rules which should be observed by the monks when in a refectory for their meals. For instance, when informed of his meal, the monk should dress himself properly and go behind the elderly monk. When entering there, he should behave properly and take his seat only after the elderly monks have already taken their seats. When the meal is being served or water is being given or other things are being served, he should accept them decently. While eating, his movements should be mannerly. The elderly monks should start their meals only when the meal has been served to all the members in the company. When returning from the refectory, the junior monks should get up first then the senior monks. The movement there must be decent. (For details see: Cv. pp. 317-319; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1373-1374).

It has also been laid down that the eldest monk in the company should address the 'benediction' (anumodana) to the donor after the meal. (Ibid. pp. 316-317).

Bhattudesaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who makes the assignment of the monks for the meal 'offered' to the Saṅgha. An 'able' monk is selected by the Saṅgha for this purpose by holding a Ñattiḍḍitīyakamma. (Pārā. pp. 239-240; Cv. p. 273). Such a monk should be endowed with these five qualities: He should not be led away by greed, or anger, or delusion, or fear and he should know the proper way. If necessary, he may be permitted by the Saṅgha to make the allotment of the monks by lot or ticket (Salakā or Paṭṭikā). (Cv. p. 273; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1351-1352)

Bhaddapiṭṭha

A cane-chair. (Cf. Vettamayaṃ piṭṭhaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). This kind of chair was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 242).

Probably it was most decent (bhadda) and comfortable, hence it was called Bhaddapiṭṭha.

Bhikkhu

A fully ordained Buddhist monk, who is at least twenty years of age. (Cf. Samaggena saṅghena ñatticatutthena kammena akkuppēna thānārahena upasampanno ti bhikkhu.—Pāc. pp. 33, 41; Pārā. pp. 29, 30, etc.; Cf. SP. Vol. I, p. 232).

A Bhikkhu of ten years standing is known as Thera Bhikkhu. (SP. Vol. I, p. 232). This Bhikkhu alone can become an Upajjhāya or Ācariya of a monk and he alone can ordain a person. (Mv. pp. 57, 67).

Bhikkhugatika

A layman who associates with the Bhikkhus or resides in the Vihāra with the monks. (Cf. Ekasmiṃ vihāre bhikkhūhi saddhiṃ vasanakapuriso.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1130). If a Bhikkhugatika is ill and sends for the monks to see, the monks should go to him even during the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort); but should return within a week. (Mv. p. 155).

Bhikkhuni

A fully ordained Buddhist nun. When a lady gets her first 'initiation' (pabbajjā), she is known as Sāmaṇerī. After her pabbajjā she is trained and then she is allowed to attain the stage of Sikkhamānā. When she completes at least two years as Sikkhamānā, she then becomes fit for her 'higher ordination', the Upasampadā. After her Upasampadā, she becomes a Bhikkhuni. At the time of Upasampadā she must be at least twenty years of age. (Pāc. pp. 437-446 cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1383). See: UPASAMPADĀ.

Bhikkhunīdūsaka

A seducer or polluter of a Bhikkhūnī. (Cf. Yo pakatattam bhikkhunīnam tiṇṇam maggānam aññatarasmīṃ dūseti. Ayam bhikkhunīdūsako nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1077). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 92).

Bhikkhunovādaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk selected by the Saṅgha to deliver 'exhortation' of the Atthagarudhammā (Ovāda) to the nuns on the Uposatha day, is known as Bhikkhunovādaka-bhikkhu. The Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for selecting such a monk. A monk endowed with the following eight qualities should be selected, viz., (i) he should be virtuous and scrupulous in the observance of the Pātimokkha rules, (ii) he should be learned and should possess good knowledge of the scriptures, (iii) he should possess a thorough knowledge of both the Pātimokkhas, the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha & Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha, (iv) he should be a good and charming preacher, (v) he should be 'competent' to 'exhort' the nuns, (vi) his behaviour has never been unwholesome towards any Sāmaṇerī or Bhikkhunī on any previous occasion, (viii) he should be of twenty years standing or more since his Upasampadā. (Pac. pp. 75-78 cf. SP. Vol. III, 1505).

When a Bhikkhu has to 'exhort' the nuns, the courtyard should be swept, arrangements of the water for drinking and washing and of sitting should be kept ready. And then he should sit there with another monk. He should also enquire whether all the nuns have arrived or not. He should then ask them whether they fully know the Atthagarudhammā (eight 'important' rules) or not. If they reply in the affirmative, the Bhikkhu should 'exhort' them to observe the eight 'important' rules most scrupulously. In case they are found not having the thorough knowledge of these rules, he should preach them these rules. (Pac. p. 78; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1239).

If any monk other than the Bhikkhunovādaka-bhikkhu 'exhorts' the eight 'important' rules to the nuns, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 22; Ibid. p. 82). The 'exhortation' should not be held at a nunnery, except when a nun is sick; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 23, Ibid. pp. 83-85).

Bhikkhu-Sammuti

A formal permission obtained from the Saṅgha by a monk (when the observance of the ecclesiastical rule is not ordinarily possible). This permission is necessary on some special occasions. For instance, as a rule a monk cannot remain without any of the three cīvaras unless he has obtained the Bhikkhu-sammuti; otherwise he commits the offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule No. 29; Pārā. p. 371 Pm. (B), p. 10).

Bhittikhila

The wooden peg, provided in the Vihāra to hang the bag, etc. This was allowed by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 246). It is kūṇṭī in Hindi.

Bhisi

A kind of cushion or mattress stuffed with wool, cotton, bark, grass or talipot leaves. The cover of the bhisi may be made of cloth or leather. (Pāc. pp. 62-63; Kv. (M), p. 201; SP. Vol. III, p. 1303). This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. The bhisi belonging to the Saṅgha must be kept properly after use; otherwise an offence of Pacittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 14; Bhikkhuni Rule No. 110; Pm. (B), pp. 12 & 46).

Bhummattharaṇa

A carpet or a mat made of reeds to be spread over the Cimilikā (a kind of spreading); and if there is no Cimilikā, it may be spread on the bare ground. (Cf Bhummattharaṇaṃ nāma cimilikāya sati tassā upari, asati suddhabhūmiyaṃ attharitabbā kaṭa-sārakādi vikati.—SP. Vol. II, p. 792; Kv. (M), p. 203). It is one of the ten kinds of spreadings grouped under Seyyā allowed for the use of the monks by the Buddha. (Pāc. pp. 63, 64; Mv. p. 413). See : SEYYĀ.

Bhūtagāma

Vegetable kingdom, of roots (mūlabījaṃ), stems (khandhabījaṃ), joints (phalubījaṃ), buddings or shoots (aggabījaṃ), or seeds (bījabījaṃ). (Pāc. p. 55; Cf. Paṭiṭṭhitaharita tiṇarukkhādīnametaṃ adhivacanam—SP. Vol. II. p. 776). A monk or a nun is forbidden to destroy any kind of vegetation; otherwise an offence of Pacittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 11; Bhikkhuni Rule No. 107.—Pāc. p. 55; Pm. (B), pp. 11 & 46).

Bhedānuvattaka (—Bhikkhu)

The follower of a 'schism-maker.' Such a monk is warned for three times by the Saṅgha not to follow the 'schism-maker.' In case the monk does not pay any heed to this warning of the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 11; Bhikkhuni Rule No. 15. Parā. pp. 262-265; Pm. (B) pp. 4 & 32). But if the monk follows the 'schism-maker' innocently, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya (not the Saṅghādisesa). (Cv. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1124).

Bhesajja

Medicine. The Buddha, at the first instance, allowed only five kinds of medicines which may be stored by the monks for a period of seven days only. These were: Sappi (ghee), Navanīta (butter), Tela (oil), Madhu (honey) and Phāṇita (molasses). And if these medicines were stored for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25 Parā. pp. 256-257; Cf. Mv. p. 228). In course of time the Buddha allowed other kinds of medicines also, such as prepared from roots, leaves, herbs, haritika, etc. And he also allowed the monks to keep them even for the whole life and to use them at any time whenever necessary. These are, therefore, known as 'Yamakālika'. (Pāc. p. 121; Mv. pp. 219-220).

Medicine is one of the four 'requisites' of the monks. (Bhesajja-parikkhāra or Nissaya. Cf. Cīvarapiṇḍapātasenāsanagilānapaccayabhesajjaparikkhāra.—Mv. p. 100). In case a lay-devotee requests a monk (who is not at present sick) to accept some medicine, the monk may accept this offer, but can take it only when he falls ill. (Pāc. p. 142). This acceptance is valid for four months only. If this is accepted after the expiry of four months, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 47; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 128. Pm. (B), pp. 15 & 48).

Bhesajjathavikā

A medicine-kit. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. pp. 206-207). It may have strings to hang. (Ibid.).

Bhojaniya or Bhojana

A meal consisting of five kinds of food-stuffs (bhojana); viz., Odana (cooked rice), Sattu (powder of baked barley or wheat or gram etc), Kummāsa (mixed rice and pulse; Khicari in Hindi), Maccho (fish) and Mamsam (meat). (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 129, 240, 243, 311, 413, etc.; SP. Vol. II, pp. 842-844).

The Kv [(M), p. 220] informs that Odana sometimes implies other seven kinds of cooked grains, viz., Sali (rice), Vīhi (a kind of rice), Yava (barley), Godhūma (wheat), Kaṇḍu (millet white, red or black), Varaka (a kind of millet, probably Bājarā in Hindi), Kudrūsaka (a kind of rice. Kodo in Hindi). (Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 842-844). The Sattu may be prepared from any of these seven kinds of grains.

In the Pm. [(B), p. 14], the following things are regarded as the delicacies (Paṇītabhojanāni): Sappi (ghee), Navanīta (butter), Tela (oil), Madhu (honey), Phāṇita (molasses), Maccho (fish), Mamsam (meat), Khīra (milk) and Dadhi (curd).

Bhojjayāgu

In case the Yāgu (rice-gruel) gets too thick to be taken only by hand like food (not by sipping as usual), it is known as Bhojjayāgu. (Mv. p. 238; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 843). Also see YĀGU.

Ma

Mamsa

Meat. It was one of the five kinds of Bhojanas (food or meal); the others being odana (cooked rice), sattu (baked grain flour), kummāsa (mixed pulse & rice) and maccha (fish). (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 129, 240, 311, 413, 425; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 844-845). It was also regarded as a delicacy (pañīta-bhojana). (Pāc. pp. 123-124).

During the time of the Buddha non-vegetarian diet was very common and the monks used to get meat in their alms. And so, the Buddha could not prohibit meat-eating. (Cv. pp. 298-299). But he has laid down certain 'conditions' for taking meat. Before taking meat the monk must be certain that it is 'free in three ways', Tikoṭiparisuddha. That is, the monk has not seen that the animal was killed for him (adiṭṭham); nor has heard that the animal was killed for him (asutam); nor he has the least apprehension that the animal was killed for him (aparisankitam). A meat which is 'pure' from these three view-points, is only fit for a monk. Any meat other than this would involve the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253; Cf. Cv. pp. 298-299).

The offence of Dukkaṭa is also committed if the monk takes the meat of the following animals, whether intentionally or unintentionally:—elephant, horse, dog, snake, lion, tiger, leopard, bear, hyena. (Mv. p. 236). Similarly, taking the human meat was regarded as a heinous act; and if anyone takes it, knowingly or unknowingly, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya. (Ibid. p. 235). And so, the Buddha said to the monks to get themselves ascertained about the meat which they would be taking. If one fails to do so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 235; Cf. Pari. p. 249).

Makasakuṭikā

A mosquito-curtain. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 208; Cf. Civarakuṭikā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1289).

Maccha

• Fish. It was one of the five kinds of bhojanas (food or meal); the others being odana (cooked rice), sattu (baked grain flour), kummāsa (mixed pulse & rice) and mamsa (meat). (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 122, 129, 240, 243, 311, 413, 425; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 844-845). It was also regarded as a delicacy (pañīta-bhajana). (Pāc. p. 124).

During the time of the Buddha non-vegetarian meal was very common and the monks used to get fish or meat in their alms. And so, the Buddha could not prohibit fish for the monks. (Cv. pp. 298, 299). But he laid down certain 'conditions' before taking fish. The monk must be certain that it is 'free in three ways', Tikoṭiparisuddha. That is, the monk has not seen that the fish was killed for him (adiṭṭham), nor has he heard that it was killed for him (asutam); nor has he the least apprehension that it was killed for him (aparisaṅkitam). The fish which is 'pure' from these three view-points is only fit for the monks. Any violation of it would involve the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253; Cf. Cv. p. 299).

Macchavāḷaka

A fashion of putting on the under-garment in which the fringe hangs both sides. (Cf. Ekato dasantam ekato pāsantam olambitoṇṇa nivattham.—SP. Vol. III. p 1294). This fashion was not allowed for the monks. If anyone put on the under-garment in this fashion, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Majjhima (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who has completed five years after his Upasampadā but has not yet completed ten years, is known as Majjhima-bhikkhu. (Mv. p. 106; Parā. p. 29; Cf. Ātīrekapañcavassatāya majjhimo.—SP. Vol. I, p. 232).

Mañca

A bed or couch. It is laid down that the bed of the monks should not be too high. The recommended height of a bed for the monks is 'eight Sugataṅgulas', measuring from the ground upto the horizontal support. In case its height is more than this and a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī uses it, he or she is liable to commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 87; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 163.—Pāc. p. 223; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 52). It is, therefore, necessary that if it is more than the prescribed height, it must be made to the normal height by cutting. The bed should never be stuffed with cotton; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 88; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 164.—Pāc. p. 225; Pm. (B), p. 225). If it is already so made, the cotton from it should be removed before use. Even if such a bed belongs to a layman, a Bhikkhu can use it only for sitting but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Four types of Mañcas are mentioned in the text. These are : Masāraka, Bundikābaddha, Kuḷīrapādaka and Āhaccapādaka. (Pāc. pp. 62, 223, 225). A Masārakamañca is made by boring a hole into the feet of the bed and putting through a notched end. (Cf. Mañcapāde vijjhitoṇṇa tattha aṭṭaniyo pavisitvā kato.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790; Cf. Kaṅkhaṇāyojanāmahāṭṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354). The Bundikābaddha-mañca is one which is made by fixing or tying together the feet with the slats. The Kuḷīrapādaka-mañca is a bed whose feet are carved or curved. Literally it is a 'crab-footer'; i. e. a bed having its legs carved like the feet of an animal like horse, ram, etc. or curved like a crab. (Cf. Assameṇṇakādīnaṃ pādasadisehi pādehi kato. Yo pana koci vaṇkapādako, ayam vuccati kuḷīrapādako.—Ibid.). The Āhaccapādaka-mañca is that kind of bed whose legs are put in the mortice of the horizontal bar. (Ibid.).

The mañca belonging to the Saṅgha must be properly kept after its use; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 14, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 110.—Pāc. p. 62; Pm. (B), pp. 12 & 46).

Mañcapaṭipādaka

The leg-supporter of a bed or couch. A mañcapaṭipādaka should not be more than eight aṅgulas in height. This was the prescribed height for the monks by the Buddha. (Cv. p. 243).

Maṇḍala (of Cīvara)

There are five, seven or nine or more (odd) pieces in the Bhikkhu's robe, which are stitched together. Each such piece is also sub-divided into two pieces, one is big and the other small. The big piece is called Maṇḍala and the smaller sub-piece is known as Adḍhamāṇḍala. (Mv. p. 304; Cf. Pañcakhaṇḍikacīvarassa ekekasmīṃ khaṇḍe mahāmaṇḍalam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1196). See CĪVARA.

Matakacīvara

The robe of a dead monk. Usually all the belongings of a dead monk become the property of the Saṅgha; but if the Saṅgha desires, the robe of the dead monk may be handed over to that monk who attended upon him during his illness (Gīlānupaṭṭhāka). For this purpose the Saṅgha will have to hold a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Mv. pp. 318-319).

An occasion may arise when a monk may keep his robe with another monk but in the meantime he is dead. In that case the robe should be regarded as Matakacīvara. But that cīvara may be used by the monk who keeps it (provided it is so entrusted), only after obtaining the 'sanction' from the Saṅgha. (Ibid. p. 324).

Mattikā (I)

Clay or mud (usually mixed with water etc.) used as cosmetics, particularly to protect the face from the flame in the Jantāghara. The Buddha allowed the Mattikā for the monks. (Cv. p. 210; SP. Vol. III, p. 1289). When the Mattikā becomes decomposed or foul, it may be made scented. (Cv. p. 210; Cf. SP. Vol. III, 1289).

The Bhikkhunīs were however not allowed to use the scented Mattikā as cosmetics. They should use pure Mattikā or Kukkusa (rice husk) instead of Cuṇṇa. (Cv. p. 401-402).

Mattikā (II)

Clay lump, for building purposes. This mattikā may be even coloured. (Cf. Pakāiamattikā hotu, pañcavaṇṇā vā sudhā vā sajjurasakaṅguṭṭhasilesādīsu vā yaṃ kiñci.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1328).

The mattikā of the Saṅgha [kept in the form of a lump is not allowed to be 'divided' or 'distributed' (avissajjiya, avebhaṅgiya). If anybody 'divides' or 'distributes' it, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya. (Cv. pp. 266, 268).

Mattikā-Bhaṇḍa

An earthenware or pot or clay-articles or building materials; such as wares for cooking, pitchers, basins, fire-pans, incense-pans, bricks etc. are called Mattikā-Bhaṇḍa. (Cf. Sabba manussānaṃ upabhogaparibhogaṃ ghaṭapīṭharādi kulālabhājanaṃ pattakaṭāhaṃ aṅgākārakaṭāhaṃ dhūparukkhako dīpakapallikā cayanīṭṭhakā chadaniṭṭhakā thūpikā ti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1330). These clay-articles belonging to the Saṅgha should never be 'divided' or 'distributed', as these are avissajjanīyāni and avebhaṅgiyāni. If anybody does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. pp. 266, 268). Therefore, these articles are also known as Garubhaṇḍa; i. e. important clay-articles. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1322). But the following earthen pots may be 'divided' or 'distributed', viz., Ghaṭako (small water pot), Pattam (alms bowl), Kaṇṇanako (saucer), Kuṇḍikā (a small bucket to fetch water). (SP. Vol. III, p. 1330).

The monks are allowed to possess all kinds of earthen wares except the Kataka (a special type of scrubber) and the Kumbhakārika-kuṭi (a small house made of earth and then burnt in fire). (Cv. p. 233).

Maddaviṇaṃ

A kind of belt, with many strings like the Pamaṅga (Yajñopavīta etc.). (Cf. Pāmaṅgasanṭhānaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1244). Its use was not permitted by the Buddha for the monks. If any monk used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 226). It might however be used for mending the belt. (Ibid.).

Madhu

Honey. Its use was allowed by the Buddha as a medicine for the monks. (Mv. p. 219). Honey was used for preparing delicacies (pāṇītabhojanāni). And so, if a Bhikkhu used it by asking, he committed an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 39. Pāc. pp. 124-125; Pm. (B), p. 14); and if a Bhikkhunī did so, she committed the offence of Pāṭidesanīya. (Rule No. 3. Pāc. p. 485; Pm. (B), p. 53).

Honey might be stored and kept for seven days if to be used as a medicine. If it was kept for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25. Parā. pp. 356-357; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 725). It was also regarded as one of the things to be licked (paṭisaṇṇāni). (Ibid.).

Madhugolaka

A ball of molasses, usually taken with the Yagu (rice-gruel). Its use was permitted by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 238).

Madhupāna or Madhūkapāna

The sweet-drink of the fruit-juice of madhūka (honey tree, bassia latifolia). It was one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks (pānāni) allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It was regarded as Yāmakālika and so might be taken in the afternoon or in the night. It should be taken mixed with water, but never pure juice. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Maḷorikā

A tripod or a stick-stand for keeping the bowl. (Cf. Daṇḍadhārako vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1291). It was permitted for a sick monk who could not lift the bowl when taking his meal. (Cv. p. 214).

Mallaka

A sort of scrubber, formed like the foot of a spittoon with pointed teeth. It was made of clay. (Cf. Makaradantake chinditvā mallakamūlasaṇṭhānena kataṃ mallakaṃ ti vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281; Khelamallakamūlasaṇṭhānena. Idam ca vaṭṭadhārakaṃ sandhāya vuttam. Kaṇṭake utthāpetvā katavaṭṭakapālassetaṃ adhivacanaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭika (M), Vol. II, p. 228). Its use was prohibited for the monks by the Buddha. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 194).

Masakavijani

A sort of fan used for warding off the mosquitoes or flies. The monks were allowed by the Buddha to use it. (Cv. p. 219).

Masāraka—Piṭha

A kind of chair or stool or bench. It was made by boring a hole into the feet of the chair and putting through a notched end. (Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 790; Kaṅkhaṇyojanāmahāṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354). It was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. 242; Pāc. pp. 62, 223, 225). See also PĪṬHA.

Masāraka—Mañca

A kind of bed or couch which is made by boring a hole in its feet and putting through a notched end. (Cf. Mañcapāde vijjhivā tattha aṭaniyo pavesetvā kato.—SP. Vol. II, p. 790; Pāde masitvā vijjhivā tattha aṅgā aṭaniyo pavesetabbā evāti masārako.—Kaṅkhaṇyojanāmahāṭikā (M), Vol. III, p. 354).

It is one of the four kinds of mañcas allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Pāc. pp. 62, 223, 225; Cv. p. 242). See also MAÑCA.

Mahallaka—Vihāra

A big Vihāra. It is more spacious and also expensive than a Kuṭi. (Cf. Sassāmikabhāvena sayam yācikaṇṭito mahantabhāvo etassa atthiti mahallako. Yasmā vā vatthum desāpetvā...pamāṇamahantattāyāpi mahallako.—SP. Vol. II, p. 575).

If a monk desires to build a Mahallakavihāra by himself with the help of the donors, he should obtain the formal 'approval' of the site from the Saṅgha (Vatthudesanā). If he does not obtain this 'approval' from the Saṅgha before the construction, he commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Rule No. 7; Parā, pp. 233-239; Pm. (B), p. 3).

Mahājanika

The same as the Gaṇa of the Bhikkhunīs (not Saṅgha or puggala) i.e. a group of two or three or four nuns. (Pāc. p. 343; Kv. (M), p. 311).

Mahāpadesā

See CATUMAHĀPADESĀ. (Mv. pp. 263-264).

Mahāvikaṭāni

In the snake-bite, the Buddha recommended the following four things which a monk may take up without being offered by any person; viz., excreta (gūtha), urine (mutta), ash (chārikā) and clay (mattikā). These four things are known as Mahāvikaṭāni, effective in the snake-bite. (Mv. p. 224). In case a person drinks poison, he may be given excreta to drink so that he may vomit the poison. (Ibid. pp. 224-225).

Mahāsamaya

An occasion may arise when the number of the monks is large but the food available is too scarce. This is known as Mahāsamaya. Under this circumstance the Gaṇabhojana (meal in 'group') is allowed. (Pāc. p. 107; Pm. (B), pp. 13 & 47; Kv. (M), p. 217; SP. Vol. II, p. 833).

Mahāseḍa

A sort of treatment of gout by profusely sweating the body. An interesting account of its procedure is given in the Samantapāsādikā. It is mentioned that the fire of burning coal, ember, etc. is put in a pit and then covered with sand etc. The patient then lies down over there by putting oil on his body so that the body may have perspiration profusely. (Cf. Mahantasedam. Porisappamāṇam āvāṭam aṅgārānam pūretvā paṃsuvālikādīhi pidahitvā tattha nānāvidhāni vātaharaṇapaṇṇāni santharitvā telamakkhitena gattena nipajjitvā samparivattantena sarīram anujānāmi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155). This procedure was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Mātughātaka

A matricide. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. And if a matricide happens to get his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Mv. p. 91; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1076).

Mānatta

If a monk commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa and immediately informs about this offence to another monk, he is then required to undergo a kind of ecclesiastical penance (which debars him from enjoying the usual privileges as a monk) for a period of six nights. This penance is called Mānatta. (Cv. p. 86 ff.). The monk who commits the Saṅghādisesa offence is required to approach the Saṅgha and to request for the pronouncement of Mānatta on him for the period of six nights. The Saṅgha then holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for the purpose. (Ibid. pp. 86-87). This Mānatta is called Apaticchanna-mānatta because the Saṅghādisesa offence is not concealed for any period. In case a monk conceals his Saṅghādisesa offence, he is required to undergo a penance known as Parivāsa, for the days it is concealed. But the 'expiation' of the offence is not complete unless a Mānatta of six nights is observed after the Parivāsa. Since this Mānatta is attached with the Parivāsa (for concealing the Saṅghādisesa offence), it is known as Patichchanna-mānatta. (Cv. p. 90). In case a Bhikkhunī commits a Saṅghādisesa offence, she is required to undergo a penance of Mānatta for the period of a fortnight, no matter whether she has concealed the Saṅghādisesa for some time or not. She has to approach both the Saṅghas, the Bhikkhunīsaṅgha and the Bhikkhusaṅgha and beg for the pronouncement of the Mānatta. (Pāc. pp. 300, 328; Cv. p. 375). The Saṅgha then holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for the purpose.

The restrictions imposed upon the monk during the Mānatta period of six nights are almost the same as in the case of Parivāsa, except that the condemned monk has to inform about his Mānatta daily to the Saṅgha; and if sick, through a messenger. (Cv. p. 79). He should observe the Mānatta living in a Saṅgha which is not less than of four monks. (Ibid. p. 81). Some of the restrictions are the following : He should not dwell with another monk under the same roof (sahavāso); should not live at a place where there is no monk (Vippavāso); he is regarded as an 'unclean' monk and so he should not accept the respect or honour as due to a monk; he should not confer Upasampadā or Nissaya or accept the services of a Sāmaṇera; should not 'exhort' the Bhikkhunīs even if he is so allowed by the Saṅgha; should not commit similar or graver offence for which the Mānatta is pronounced against him; should not denounce the 'action' taken against him nor should he denounce those who took part in the 'action'; should not debar any person from the Uposatha or Pavāraṇā ceremony; should not so act as to be a topic of criticism; should not 'interrogate' a monk alleged to have committed some offence; should not make others quarrel. He should take the lowest seat and the worst apartment in the Vihāra. He should not live in the forest as a Dhutaṅga-dhara or despatch others for his meals with a view to hide his Mānatta. There are many other restrictions regarding his movement from his own Vihāra to another. For instance, he should not go to a Vihāra where there are no monks. Similarly, there are some other minor restrictions given in the text. (For details see Cv. pp. 77-81; Cf. PARIVĀSA).

There are four such occasions when the Mānatta is interrupted and the nights so spent are not taken into account (Ratticcheda). These are: (i) When he dwells with another monk under the same roof (sahavāsa); (ii) When he lives at a place where there is no monk (vip̐pavāso); (iii) When he fails to inform daily to the Saṅgha about his Mānatta; (iv) When he observes the Mānatta amidst a Saṅgha of less than four monks (Une gaṇe caraṇaṃ). (Ibid. pp. 80-81).

In case a monk happens to commit another Saṅghādisesa offence during his Mānatta and informs about it immediately to another monk, his days already spent as Mānatta become null and void and he has to take up the Mānatta anew; but if he conceals the Saṅghādisesa offence, the Mānatta is transformed into a Parivāsa. The Mānatta then only comes after the Parivāsa period is spent. This is called Mānatta-mūlāyapaṭikassanā. (Cv. p. 105).

After the observance of Mānatta of six nights, the monk becomes eligible to be declared as 'clean' and to be 'called back' to the Saṅgha. This is known as Abbhāna. (Ibid. p. 105; Cf. Pārā. p. 277; Pāc. p. 328; Pm. (B), pp. 5 & 34).

Mānattacārika (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who is observing the Mānatta penance, is known as Mānattacārika-bhikkhu. (Cv. pp. 70-74, 77-81, 257, etc.). See: MĀNATTA.

Mānattāraha (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who has completed the observance of Parivāsa but has not yet started the observance of Mānatta of six nights, is known as Mānattāraha-bhikkhu. Since he is not yet free from the Saṅghādisesa offence and is still 'unclean' because he has to observe the Mānatta of six nights, he is, therefore, required to observe almost similar restrictions as in the case of Parivāsa; except Ārocanā (i.e. informing to all incoming monks to his own Vihāra or to the monks if visiting to another Vihāra). (Cv. pp. 74-77).

In case the monk happens to commit a Saṅghādisesa offence during this interim period, his period of Parivāsa already observed is treated as cancelled and then he has to take up the Parivāsa anew, combining the previous Saṅghādisesa along with the present one. This is known as Mānattārahamūlāyapaṭikassanā. (Ibid. pp. 94-95).

Midḍha

The terraced floor in front of the varandah of a Vihāra is called Midḍha. A monk should not keep his bowl on the edge of the midḍha; otherwise the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Cv. p. 202. Cf. Midḍhante ti ālindakamiḍḍhikādīnaṃ ante.—SP. Vol. III, 1285; Pamukhamiḍḍhikādīnaṃ Uccavatthukānaṃ ti attho.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 237).

Middhi

A raised platform for the use of sleeping. It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 241). Its exact shape is difficult to say, but it was something like a bed. (Cf. Mañcāḍārena kaṭṭhamattikādīhi katavedikākāraṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, 237; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 1299 ff).

Mukhacūṇṇa

The face-powder, used as cosmetics. The Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs were not allowed to use it; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Cv. pp. 196 & 387; Cf. SP. Vol. III, 1283).

Mukhapuñchanacoḷaka

A cloth for wiping the face, a towel, a handkerchief. This was allowed, for the monks. It was one of the eleven cīvaras of the monks, which needs 'resolve' (adhiṭṭhāna) before use. (Mv. p. 312; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1448-1449).

Muttaharītikā

The Buddha allowed the use of Harītikā (yellow myrobalan) soaked in the urine of cow for the monks when suffering from jaundice. (Cf. Gomuttapariḥhāvitāṃ harītikāṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156; Mv. p. 225)

Muddhani-Telaka

A specially medicated oil, used when suffering from headache. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 222).

Muddikapāna

A drink of grape-juice. It was one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It is regarded as Yamakālīka and so, it may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Murajaṃ

A kind of belt made in a style like the strings of the Muraja (a kind of drum). (Cf. Murajavattisaṇṭhānena veṭhetvā kaṭaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). Its use was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. It might however be used only when mending the fringe of the belt. (Cv. p. 226).

Mūga

A dumb person. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

In case he has somehow or other got his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination were not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Mūgabadhira

A dumb and deaf person. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 95). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and those who took part in his ordination were not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Mūla-Bhesajja

The medicinal roots, allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. The roots may be of turmeric, ginger, vaca, vacattha, ativisa, kaṭukarohiṇī, usīra, bhaddamuttaka or other kinds of roots which are not used as food by the people. The roots may be used only as medicines when sick; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. This may be kept for the whole life after acceptance, like other medicines. The roots may be powdered according to the need. (Mv. pp. 219-210).

Mūlarajana

A dye prepared out of the root of a tree. It is one of the six kinds of dyes allowed for the robes of the monks. The others are made out of trunk, barks, leaves, flowers and fruits of a tree. (Mv. 302). In the SP. [Vol. III, p. 1194] however the Haliddi (turmeric) is not allowed as the dye for the robes.

Mūlāyapaṭikassanā

If a monk happens to commit an offence of Saṅghādisesa during the period of Parivāsa or Mānatta (as the case may be; i.e. before the Abbhāna is held), he is required to take up the Parivāsa anew and the period of Parivāsa already observed by him is not taken into account; and a fresh Parivāsa is to be taken up combining all the Saṅghādisesa offences (Samodhāna-parivāsa). This is known as Mūlāyapaṭikassanā; i.e. 'throwing back to the beginning' of the penance. (Cv. pp. 93 ff., 101).

The monk who has to observe the Mūlāyapaṭikassanā, approaches the Saṅgha and requests for pronouncing the Mūlāyapaṭikassanā. He repeats this request for three times and then the Saṅgha holds a Ñatticatutthakamma for the purpose. (Ibid. pp. 93-94). The monk condemned of Mūlāyapaṭikassanā has naturally to observe the same restrictions as in the case of Parivāsa, such as, Sahavāsa (not dwelling with another monk under the same roof), Vippavāsa (not going to a residence where there is no monk), Anārocanā (informing about his Mūlāyapaṭikassanā to the monks coming in his Vihāra) and the like. (Ibid. pp. 71-74).

Mūlāyapaṭikassanāraha (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who has committed a Saṅghādisesa offence during his Parivāsa penance but he has not yet been formally declared to take up the Parivāsa anew, is called Mūlāyapaṭikassanāraha-bhikkhu. There may be an occasion when the condemned monk has observed the Parivāsa, but he has not yet begun his Mānatta of six nights, such a monk is known as Mānattārahamūlāyapaṭikassanāraha. (Cv. pp. 94-95). Again, a similar occasion may arise during the Mānatta period also. This is known as Mānattacārikamūlāyapaṭikassanārahakāla. Similarly if a condemned monk has completed the Parivāsa and also the Mānatta but has not yet been formally 'called back' (abbhāna) by the Saṅgha and in the meantime he commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa; but for which he has not yet formally requested the Saṅgha for his new Parivāsa, such a monk is known as Abbhānārahamūlāyapaṭikassanāraha. (Cv. pp. 97-99).

Under all these above circumstances he is required to observe the same restrictions as in the case of Parivāsa, except informing of it to the incoming monks in his Vihāra (anārocanā). (Ibid. pp. 71-74).

Mūsala

A pestle for pounding the medicines, etc. in the Udukkhala. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 221).

Meraya

Intoxicating spirit or liquor. It may be brewed from the flowers (pupphāsava), fruits (phalāsava), Madhu (Madvāsava. Mahuvā in Hindi), molasses (guḷāsava) or from the mixed ingredients (Sambhāra saṃyutto). If a monk drinks any kind of meraya, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 51; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 132. Pāc. p. 151; Pm. (B), pp. 15 & 48. Cf. Pupphādīhi kato āsavo merayaṃ; piṭṭhādīhi kataṃ majjaṃ surā.—Kv. (M), p. 238; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 884). Abstention from drinking intoxicants is one of the Sikkhāpadas laid down for all the Bhikkhus, Bhikkhunis, Sāmaṇeras, Sāmanerīs and for the laymen as well. (Mv. p. 87).

Moghasuttaka

The thread which is used for printing the lines in order to have a straight stitching. It may be dipped in the turmeric. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Vaḍḍhakīnaṃ darūsu kālasuttena viya haliddisuttena saññākaraṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Mocapāṇa

A sweet-drink of banana juice. (Moca is a kind of banana without seeds while the other kind is called Goca, wild banana with seeds). It is one of the eight kinds of sweet-drinks (Pānāni) allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 260). It is regarded as Yamakālīka and so, may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Ya

Yantaka

A kind of lock. It was allowed by the Buddha to use in the Vihāra (Cv. p. 241).

Yāgu

The rice-gruel or conjei. It was taken as a breakfast. The monks used to take it after their morning wash. (Cf. Mv. p. 44). In the beginning the Bhikkhus hesitated to accept it when offered by the laymen; but later the Buddha sanctioned it for the monks. (Ibid. pp. 237-238).

The Buddha has highly praised the utility of the Yāgu. He has said the ten advantages of Yāgu. "By offering Yāgu, one gives life, beauty, ease, strength, intelligence; by drinking it, one checks hunger, keeps off thirst, regulates wind, cleanses the bladder and digests the food properly. It is as good as a medicine." (Ibid. pp. 237-238).

Usually the Yāgu is prepared with a large quantity of water and a handful of rice, salt, etc. In the Commentaries the preparation of other kinds of Yāgu is also found. The Ambilayāgu is a sour-Yāgu prepared with leaves, fruits, shoots, etc. (Paṇṇaphalakaḷīramissakambilayāguṃ). Another Yāgu is prepared with curd, sour-milk, leaves, fruits, shoots and a handful of rice. (Dadhitakkādīni āropetā bahu-paṇṇaphalakaḷīraṃ pakkhipitvāmuṭṭhimattāpi taṇḍulā pakkhittā honti.—SP. Vol. II, pp. 843-844). Even if the cooked rice is put in the boiling water with other things, it also becomes Yāgu. (Pakkuṭṭhitesu udakādī pakkhipitoā pacitoā denti yāgusaṅkhaṃ gacchati.—Ibid. p. 843). Sometimes meat or fish is also put in it. (Tasmiṃ vā añāsmiṃ vā yattha macchamasāṃ pakkhipanti.—Ibid. p. 843; Kv. (M p. 220.)

When the Yāgu becomes too thick and can be eaten only by hand (not by sipping, as usual), it is called Bhojjayāgu. (Mv. p. 238).

Yāgubhājaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who is selected for the distribution of Yāgu amongst the monks, is known as Yāgubhājaka-bhikkhu. An 'able' monk is selected by the Saṅgha for the purpose by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Cv. p. 273).

Yāna

A vehicle or carriage. The Buddha did not allow the use of a Yāna for the monks, except in case of illness. And for the sick monk also, the carriers of the Yāna must be the male persons (but never females). (Anujānāmi bhikkhave purisayuttaṃ hatthavaṭṭakam.—Mv. p. 211). If a monk used a Yāna without being sick, he committed the offence of Dukkata. (Ibid.). A Yāna was never permitted for the nuns (Cv. p. 397), except when she was sick; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Rule No. 85. Pāc. p. 471).

The Yāna included all kinds of vehicles, chariots, carts, Sandamānika (a kind of chariot), sedan chairs (sivikā) and palanquins (pāṭaṅki). All these were prohibited for the monks. (Mv. pp. 210-211; Pāc. p. 272; Parā. p. 60; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1148-1149).

Yāmakālika

Eight kinds of sweet-drinks and the like (Pānāni) may be taken even in the afternoon or in the night; and hence, they are known as Yāmakālika. (Cf. Saddhiṃ anulomapānehi aṭṭhavidham pānam yava rattiya paccimayāmasaṅkhāto yāmo tāva paribhuñ-jitabbato yāmo kālo assāti yāmakālikam.—SP. Vol. II, p. 861; Cf. Pāc. pp. 120-121). See PĀNA.

Yāvakālika

The food (Bhojanīya (meal) or Khādanīya (other eatables) when taken at the proper time is called Yāvakālika. The proper time means before noon. (Pāc. p. 123; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 861).

Yāvajīvikam

Medicines, other than sappi (ghee), navanīta (butter), tela (oil), madhu (honey) and phāṇita (molasses), may be stored even for the whole life and can be used whenever necessary by a monk; hence, they are called Yāvajīvikam. (Mv. p. 219 ff.; Cf. Thapetoṭa udakam avasesam sabbam yāvajīvam pariharitvā sati paccaye paribhuñ-jitabbo yāvajīvikam ti vuccati.—SP. Vol. II, p. 861; also see Pāc. pp. 120-121).

Yāvadatthacīvaram

When a monk gets the Kāṭhina, he is bestowed upon with the 'privilege' (ānisaṃsa) of keeping any number of robes without adhiṭṭhāna or vikappanā. This is called Yāvadatthacīvaram. (Mv. p. 266; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1172). Ordinarily if a monk keeps robes without adhiṭṭhāna or vikappanā, he commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 1, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 13; Ṛm. (B), pp. 6 & 35). It is one of the five 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) that a monk gets when he is offered the Kāṭhina. His other 'privileges' are : He can go out without telling any person even if there is an invitation for him (anāmantacāro); can remain without one of the three robes (asamādānacāro); can take the 'group-meal' (gaṇabhojana); and is entitled to share from the robes donated to the Saṅgha. (Yo ca tattha cīvarupphādo so nesam bhavissati—Mv. p. 266).

Yebhuyyasikā-Vinaya

A kind of procedure for settling a 'dispute' by majority of votes (salaka) of the righteous monks (Dhammavādī bhikkhū). This procedure is taken up only when the Ubbāhikā method (i. e. appointing a 'competent' bhikkhu or bhikkhus by the Saṅgha instead of taking up the matter by the whole Saṅgha) fails. The voting may be taken up by any of these three methods, viz., by secret ballot (gūḷhako), by open ballot (viṇaṭako) or by whispering in the ear (kaṇṇajappako). (Cv. pp. 182-184; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 290; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1272-1273).

A monk appointed by the Saṅgha to collect the ballots, is called Salākāgāhā-paka. (Cv. p. 164).

RaRajana

The dye. Six kinds of dyes are allowed for the robes of the monks by the Buddha. These are made from root (Mūlarajana), from the trunk of a tree (Khandharajana), from the bark of a tree (Tacarajana), from the leaves (Pattarajana), from the flowers (Puppharajana) and from the fruits (Phalarajana). The monks should not use cow-dung or yellow earth etc. for their robes. (Mv. p. 302). In the Commentary some roots, barks, flowers, leaves and fruits are not considered as fit for robes' dye. For instance, Haliddi (turmeric) among the roots; Mañjetṭha and Tuṅgahāra among the trunks; Lodda and Kaṇḍula among the barks; Alli and Nīli among the leaves and Kimsuka and Kusumba among the flowers. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1194-1195).

Rajanuḷuṅka

A laddle without handle, was known as Rajanuḷuṅka which was used by the monks for taking out the boiling dye. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 302). A laddle with handle was known as Daṇḍakathālaka. (Ibid. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1195).

Rajanaḥkumbhī

A big jar for boiling the dye for the robes of the monks, was known as Rajana-kumbhī. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 302).

Rajanakolamba

A big pitcher to keep the prepared dye for the robes of the monks, was known as Rajanakolamba. It was allowed for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 303; Cf. Rajanakolambam ti rajanakuṇḍam—SP. Vol. III, p. 1195).

Rajanaghata

A pitcher to keep the prepared dye for the robes of the monks. This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 302).

Rajanadoṇi

A wooden trough for dyeing the robes of the monks. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 303).

Rathattharaṇa

A kind of costly spreading, usually used on the chariots. It is regarded as Uccāsyānamahāsayaṇa; and hence, its use was prohibited for the monks. If anybody used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting even if it belonged to a layman; but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Rājabhata

A government army personnel. (Cf. Yo koci rañño bhattavetanabhato sabbo rājabhato ti saṅkham gacchati.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1047-1048). The Buddha prohibited the ordination of a Rajabhata in the Saṅgha. If anybody ordained him, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 78).

Rūpiyachaddaka

A monk who is made in-charge of 'throwing away' the coins etc. which have been 'given up' by the monk who has 'expiated' himself on account of the offence of Nissaggiyapācittiya. Since no monk is allowed even to touch the money or coins etc., the Saṅgha has to formally appoint a Rūpiyachaddaka monk by holding a Ñatticatutthakama. Only a scrupulous, just and honest monk is selected for the purpose. (Pāra pp. 339-340, 342).

Romanthana

Rumination. In case a monk is in the habit of ruminating, the Buddha allowed him to do so but without getting the cud out of mouth. (Cv. pp. 222-223).

LaLakkhaṇāhata

A person who has been branded, as a punishment. Such a person is not eligible for ordination. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 79; Cf. Yassa pana nalāṭe vā uruādīsu vā tattena lohena lakkhaṇaṃ āhataṃ hotīti lakkhaṇāhato.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1050).

Lajjī

A modest or conscientious person who never commits any 'offence' knowingly; nor does he ever conceal any 'offence' if committed. He is a firm man and is never led away by anger (dosa), stupidity (moha), favour (chanda) or by fear (bhaya). (Cf. Sañcicca āpattiṃ nāpajjati, āpattiṃ na parigūhati. Agatigamanam na gacchati, ediso vuccati lajjīpuggalo.—Pari. p. 281).

Lasuṇa

Garlic (of Magadhan variety). Garlic is not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. In case a monk takes the garlic, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa; and a nun commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 1. Cv. p. 230; Pāc. p. 235; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 959). But if anybody is sick, he can take the garlic without committing any offence. (Cv. p. 313).

Lahukā—Āpatti

'Minor type of offence'. (Cv. pp. 170, 178, 188; Pari. p. 211). The five offences (āpattis), viz., Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkaṭa and Dubbhāsita are grouped under the Lahukā-āpatti. (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1368, 1420). The other two offences, viz., Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa are known as Garukā-āpatti. The Lahukā-āpatti is also called Aduṭṭhulla or Desanīyāgāmanīyā-āpatti, while the Garukā-āpatti is known as Duṭṭhulla or Adesanīyāgāmanīyā-āpatti. (Ibid).

Lakhitakacora

A 'registered thief', who is sentenced to be killed whenever and wherever is seen by anybody. (Yattha passati tattha hantabbo.—Mv. p. 79; Cf. Yo koci corakaṃ vā aññaṃ vā garuṃ rājāparādham palāyito. Rājā ca naṃ paṇṇe vā potthāke vā itthannāmo yattha dissati tattha gahetvā māretabbo ti vā hatthopādānissa chinditabbānī ti vā ettakaṃ nāma daṇḍaṃ āhārāpetabbo ti vā likhāpeti, ayaṃ likhitako nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1049). Such a person is not eligible for ordination. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 79).

Lokāyata

The scriptures embodying the philosophy of 'sophistry' or 'materialism'. (Cf. Lokāyataṃ nāma sabbam ucchiṭṭham, sabbam anucchiṭṭham, seto kāko kālo bako, iminā ca kāraṇenāti niratthakakāraṇaṃ paṭisaṃyuttaṃ titthiyasattham.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1297). The Buddha prohibited the monks to study it or to teach it. If one did so, he committed the offence Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 229).

It is known as Cārvāka in the Indian Philosophy.

Loṇabhesajja

The medicinal salt. It may be the sea-salt (Sāmuḍḍaṃ), black-salt (kāḷaloṇaṃ), Sindhava-salt (mineral salt found in the Indus belt), Ubbhida-salt (the salt prepared out of earth. Cf. Bhūmito aṅkuraṃ utṭhahati.—SP. Vol. III. p. 1154; Usara-paṃsumayaṃ.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 186), the Bila salt (a chemically prepared salt. Cf. Dabbasambhārehi saddhiṃ pacitaṃ taṃ rattavaṇṇaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1154), or any other salt not used with food by the people. The Buddha allowed the monks to accept it and use it only as medicine. They might keep it for any number of days. This must be used only for medicinal purposes; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa was committed. (Mv. p. 220).

Loṇasakkharikā

A piece of salt-crystal, used as caustic for healing the wound. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Loṇasoviraka

The salted vinegar. The Buddha allowed its use for the monks when they suffered from any stomach trouble. And those who were not sick might also use it mixing with water. (Mv. p. 228; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1498). It is called Sirakā in Hindi.

Lohakaṭṭhā

A big pan of iron or copper. It is one of the few things of the Saṅgha which can neither be 'given away' nor can be 'divided' (avissajjiya, avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268 Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1324-1325)

Lohakumbhī

A large or small pitcher of iron or copper. It is one of the few articles of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1324-1325).

Lohabhāṇḍa

Iron or brass wares, allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks in the Vihāra, except the weapons (paḥaraṇī). (Cv. p. 233). A list of such iron wares are mentioned in the text. These things should neither be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Ibid. pp. 266 & 268). If one did so, he committed the offence of Thullaccaya. (Ibid.).

Lohabhāṇaka

A small iron or copper pot. It is one of the articles of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1321).

Lohavāraka

A jar made of iron or copper. It is one of the articles of the Vihāra which can neither be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). (Cv. pp. 266 & 268; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1321).

Lohituppādaka

A person who has shed the blood of the Buddha with a view to taking his life. Such a person should never be ordained; and in case he has got his ordination, this should be cancelled. (Lohituppādako bhikkhave, anupasampanno na upasampādetabo, upasampanno nāsetabbo ti.—Mv. p. 92 ; Cf. Yo Devadattoiya duṭṭhacittena vadhakacittena tathāgalassa jīvamānakasarīre khuddakamakkhikāya pivanakamattam pi lohitam uppādeti ayam lohituppādako nāma.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1078). Once Devadatta attempted to kill the Buddha by hurling down a stone which struck to his feet and shed the blood at the Gijjhakūta mountain. (Cv. pp. 293-295).

VaVaccakuṭi

A lavatory, latrine (complete with the doors, door-pans, door-handles, latches, etc.). The Buddha allowed the vaccakuṭi for the monks. (Cv. p. 231). Special rules were laid down by the Buddha for the proper use of the vaccakuṭi. For instance, before entering in the vaccakuṭi one must make coughing sound, must keep his robes on the hanger, (cīvaravaṃsa or cīvararajju), sit there carefully, rinse properly, etc. (Ibid. pp. 326-327). The vaccakuṭi should be kept neat and tidy. The Saddhivihārika and the Antevāsika should see that the vaccakuṭi is clean. (Mv. pp. 46, 60; Cv. pp. 335, 339; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1376).

The bhikkhunīs were not allowed to use the lavatory made for the monks. If a bhikkhunī used it, she committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. For the bhikkhunīs separate latrines, were provided. (Cv. p. 401).

Vaccakuṭivatta

Duties of the monks when using the privy. For this purpose the Buddha has laid down certain rules which should be followed by the monks. For instance, it would be the offence of Dukkaṭa if a monk does not rinse after relieving. The monks should use the privy in the order of arrival, not according to the age; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Cv. p. 326). Before entering the privy one should make coughing sound from outside; and if there is any person inside, he should also respond by coughing. Having kept his robe on the hanger (civaravamsa or cīvararajju) one should enter into the latrine very carefully and without any hurry. One should not enter into the privy in haste or forcibly. One should not relieve himself groaning. The care should be taken that the scrapping-wood may not fall in the cesspool. While coming out one should not be hasty or come out forcefully. One should not rinse by making sound; should not leave the water in the rinsing-pot. If anybody finds the privy dirty and soiled, it should be swept. If there is no water in the pot, it should be filled. (For details see : Cv. pp. 326-327; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1376).

Vaccakūpa

The cesspool. The Buddha recommended it in an Ārāma. It may be constructed of bricks, stone or wood. (Cv. p. 231).

Vaccaghaṭa

Same as Ācamanakumbhī, the pitcher kept in the privy for rinsing. (Mv. p. 165; Cv. pp. 232, 327).

Vaccapādukā

The foot-stool fixed in the privy. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 210; Cv. p. 231). It may be of stone, brick or wood. (SP. Vol, III, p. 1297).

Vaja

The residence of the cow-boy. (Cf. Gopālakānaṃ nivāsanaṭṭhānaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1131). The Buddha allowed this place as a residence of the monks during the rainy-season-resort (Vassāvāsa). (Mv. p. 158). In case the cowpen moves away, the monk living there during the rainy-season, should also move with it. (Ibid.).

Vajjanīyapuggalā

There are 21 'undesirable' persons who are prohibited to attend the Uposatha or Pavāraṇā ceremony. If they are present in the assembly, the Pātimokkha should not be recited. These are : Bhikkhunī, Sikkhamānā, Sāmaṇera, Sāmaṇeri, Sikkhā pacakkhātaka (i.e. one who has declared to disrobe himself), one who has committed the Pārājika offence, three kinds of Ukkhittakā monks (i.e. 'rusticated' monks), an eunch, an 'imposter' monk (Theyyasaṃvāsaka), one who has changed his religion, one who belongs to the non-human world (Tiracchānagata), murderer of mother, or father, or Arahanta, a seducer of nun, one who has created 'schism' in the Saṅgha, one who has shed the blood of the Buddha (Lohituppadaka), a hermaphrodite, a layman. (Mv. pp. 141-142; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93). If anybody recites the Pātimokkha in the presence of these persons, he commits the offence of Dukkata; but in the presence of an Ukkhittaka, the offence is Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 69; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 147; Pāc. pp. 184-185; Pm. (B), pp. 17 & 50; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93).

Vaṇatela

A medicated oil, to be applied on the wound. It is mentioned that if the oil does not stick with the wound, a bandage may be used (vikāṣika). The Buddha recommended such an oil for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Vaṇabandhanacola

A bandage. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks when suffering from a boil. (Mv. p. 224).

Vatthikamma

Taking out the pudendum by a thread or a leather-string etc. in order to cure fistula, is called vatthikamma. This was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If anybody did so, he committed the offence of Thullaccaya. (Mv. p. 233; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1157).

Vatthu-avalokanā

'Examination' of a land by the Saṅgha where a cottage (Kuṭī) or a Vihāra is to be constructed. A monk who intends to build a Kuṭī or a Vihāra, should approach the Saṅgha with a request to 'examine' the land as to whether it is suitable (anārambha) and sufficient (saparikkamana) for the building of a kuṭī or vihāra. If so requested, the Saṅgha should go for 'examination'. If it is not possible for the Saṅgha, some competent monks should be deputed for this purpose. The Saṅgha should do so by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. The deputed monks should go to the site and examine the land. If they find the land 'unsuitable' or 'insufficient', they forbid the monk to construct the kuṭī or vihāra. But if the land is found 'suitable' and 'sufficient', the matter is reported to the Saṅgha accordingly. The Saṅgha then gives a formal 'permission' by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma (vatthudesanā). (Pārā. pp. 221-222; 234-235 Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 569). If a kuṭī or a vihāra is constructed without the formal 'permission' of the Saṅgha (vatthudesanā), an offence of Saṅghādisesa is committed. (Rule Nos. 6 & 7; Ibid. pp. 220 & 233; Pm. (B), p. 3).

Vandiya

A reverend. The following three persons are to be revered by a monk. These are : (i) A Bhikkhu who is elder in age (by (Upasampadā); (ii) An elderly righteous (dhammiko) monk belonging to different residence; (iii) The Buddha. (Cv. p. 257). For non-reverend see : AVANDIYA.

Vallikā

An ear-ornament. (Cf. Kaṇṇato nikkhantamutto lambakādīnaṃ etaṃ adhivacanaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Vasā

The animal fat, to be used as medicine by the monks. The fat may be of bear, fish, porpoise (susu. Suṭsa in Hindi), pig or of ass. It is laid down that the vasā should be prepared and used as medicine before noon after its acceptance. It should never be left to be prepared in the afternoon. If one prepared it and used it in the afternoon, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 219; Cf. Pari. p. 231; SP. Vol. II, p. 724).

Vassam

Rainy season. (Mv. pp. 144-164). See : VASSĀVĀSA.

Vassaccheda

During the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) if a monk goes away from his residence and overstays even for one night without some 'tangible' reasons, or for more than seven nights on some emergent business (Sattāhakarāṇīya), the Vassāvāsa is regarded as 'broken.' This is called Vassaccheda. By involving the Vassaccheda the monk commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Yo pakkammeyya āpatti dukkaṭassa.—Mv. p. 145.).

If the movement from the residence is essential on account of some emergent work or reasons, the Vassaccheda of course takes place, but no offence is committed. He will then be deprived of Kāṭhina-cīvara-dāna. (Ibid. pp. 155-158; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1172). The emergent occasions may be the following: There is danger on account of wild animals; or reptiles; or thieves; or robbers, etc.; or pisāca (ghost); or the entire village of his subsistence or his own residence is destroyed by fire; or washed away by flood; or the village is pillaged by dacoits; or the entire population of the village moves away elsewhere; or there is not sufficient subsistence or medicine; or the food and medicine both are not suited to health; or there is no proper servitor to look after him (paṭirūpo upaṭṭhāko); or there are chances of being polluted and thereby to fall down from his Bhikkhuhood; or there has arisen the danger of Saṅghabheda (schism); or his presence is required at a place where the Saṅghabheda has arisen. (Ibid. pp. 352-353).

A Bhikkhu whose Vassāvāsa is 'broken' should not perform the Pavāraṇā. But he is allowed to remain present in the Pavāraṇā ceremony. He should perform only Upasatha in place of Pavāraṇā, because the Pavāraṇā is possible only by those who have spent the Vassāvāsa 'uninterrupted'. (Cf. Anujānāmi bhikkhave vassaṃ vutṭhānaṃ bhikkhūnaṃ tīhi thānehi pavāretum.—Ibid. p. 167; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1134).

Vassāvāsa

Rainy-season-resort, for the Buddhist order. It lasts for three months during which the monks stay at one place and do not move away from there.

Earlier, this tradition was followed by the mendicants of other sects. The Buddha also followed this practice and enjoined the monks to observe the Vassāvāsa. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave vassaṃ upagantum.—Mv. p. 144).

The Vassāvāsa should preferably be taken up after the full-moon day of Āsāḥa, i. e. from the first day of Śrāvāṇa. This is known as Purimikā Vassūpanāyikā. If it is not possible to take up this 'earlier one' (purimikā), the 'later one' (pacchimikā) must be taken up which commences one month after, i. e. from the first day of Bhādrapada. (Aparajjugatāyā āsāḥiyā purimikā upagantabbā, māsaḡatāya pacchimikā upagantabbā.—Ibid. p. 144). During these three months of Vassāvāsa the monks are not allowed to go out even for one night. If anybody goes out, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Yo pakkameyya āpatti dukkaṭassa.—Ibid. p. 144). But if there is some emergent business and going out is essential, the monk may go out from his residence but only for a period not exceeding seven nights. He must return within seven nights and then no offence is committed. The occasions for such emergent movement may be on account of some personal urgent matter; or on account of a matter relating to a Bhikkhu, or Bhikkhūnī, or a Sikkhamānā, or a Sāmaṇera, or a Sāmaṇerī, or an Upāsaka, or an Upāsikā; or on account of the illness of parents, brother, sister or any relative; or the matter may be on account of some business of the Saṅgha. The occasions may be to accept the donation of a Vihāra, an Adḡhayoga, a Pāsāda, a Hammiya, a cave, a Pariveṇa, a Koṭṭhaka, an Upaṭṭhānasālā, an Aggisālā, a Kappiyakuṭi, a lavatory, a Caṅkamasālā, a well, a shade for the well, a Jaṇṭāghara, a Jaṇṭāgharasālā, a Pokkharāṇī, a Maṇḡapa, an Ārāma, land for the Ārāma. These donations may be for the Bhikkhu Saṅgha or even for any individual of the Order. There may be a marriage ceremony at an Upāsaka's or Upāsikā's home. On the above occasions the monk may go out if he is specially invited with the purpose of offering Dāna, listening to the Dhamma or paying respects to the monks. (Āgacchantu bhadantā icchāmi dānaṃ datum dhammaṃ ca sotum, bhikkhū ca passitum.—Ibid. p. 146).

When a bhikkhu or a bhikkhūnī or a Sāmaṇera or a Sikkhamānā or a Sāmaṇerī is sick, or intends to disrobe (anabhirati) or has developed 'worry' (kukkucca), or has developed 'wrong views' (diṭṭhigata), or has committed 'grave offence' (Saṅghādisesa), or has to be punished for Parivāsa or Mūlāyapaṭikassanā or Mānatta, or is fit for Abbhāna, then the monk should go out even without any special invitation. The monk may also go out to attend any Saṅghakamma, such as Tajjanīya, Niyassa, Pabbājanīya, Paṭisāraṇīya, Ukkhepanīya, Upasampadā, even if he is not invited. But the period of his absence should not exceed seven nights. If his father or mother is sick and desires him to see, he should go without any special invitation. But if his brother, sister or any other relative is sick and desires him to see, he can go to him only if he is specially invited. Similarly on special invitation he can go out to see a Bhikkhugatika (one who stays with the monks in the Vihāra) if he is sick and desires to meet him. A monk may go out if he has to take part in any Saṅgha work, such as the construction of a Vihāra. But he must return within seven nights. (Cf. Anujānāmi bhikkhave saṅghakaraṇīyena gantum. Sattāhaṃ sannivatto kātabbo.—Ibid. pp. 145-155; Also Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1129-1130).

When the movement from the residence becomes essential on account of certain unavoidable circumstances, the Vassāvāsa is regarded as 'broken' (vassaccheda); but no offence is committed. He will however be deprived of the Kāṭhina-cīvara-dāna. (Mv. pp. 155-158; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1172). Such circumstances may be the following: There is danger of wild animals, or of reptiles, or of thieves, robbers etc., or of pisāca (ghost), or the entire village of his subsistence or his own residence is destroyed by fire or washed away by flood, the village is pillaged by the decoits, or the entire population of the village moves away elsewhere, or there is not enough subsistence or medicine, or the food and medicine are available but do not suit to his health, or there is no competent servitor (paṭirūpo upaṭṭhāko), or there are chances of him being polluted and thereby he may fall down from the Bhikkhuhood (brahmacariya), or there has arisen the danger of Saṅghabheda (schism in the Order), or he has to go to persuade those who are indulged in creating schism in the Saṅgha. (Mv. pp. 155-158; SP. Vol. III, pp. 1130-1132).

The monk should spend his vassāvāsa at a 'proper residence' fit for the monks, such as a Vihāra, Aḍḍhayoga, Pāsāda, Hammiya or Guhā. (Mv. p. 159; Cv. p. 237). If he does not reside at these places, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. Besides these places, the monks may take up the vassāvāsa even in a Vaja (cowboy residence), or with a caravan or on a boat. (Mv. pp. 158-159). In these places he must remain there for full three months even if he has reached the termination of the journey. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1131). The places like the hollow of a tree, or the fork of a tree, or open sky, or a 'cemetery hut' (chavakuṭṭi), or a big umbrella, or a large jar (cāṭi), or any such place which is not fit for the bhikkhu's residence are not to be selected for the rainy-season-resort. If anybody selects such a place, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 159).

After three months, the 'earlier one' (purimikā) terminates on the full-moon-day of the month of Āsvina; and the 'later one' (pacchimikā) one month after on the full-moon-day of Kattika. The vassāvāsa culminates with the Pavāraṇā ceremony. (See: PAVĀRṆĀ).

Vassikasāṭikā

A cloth for taking bath in the rains during the rainy season. It is one of the eleven cīvaras (robes) of the monks. The period for 'finding out' (pariyesanakāla) this civara includes the last month of the summer and the three months of the rainy season. This cloth may be used during all the months of the rainy season and also a fortnight before the rains. If this civara is obtained and used out of the season, an offence of Nissaggiya-pācittiya is committed. (Rule No. 24; Para. pp. 358-360; Pm. (B), pp. 9-10; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 730-733).

The size of this robe should be six sugata-spans in length and two and a half in breadth. (Pāc. p. 229; Pm. (B), p. 19).

The monks used to take their bath naked in the rains and so the Buddha recommended this vassikasāṭikā. (Mv. p. 310). The vassikasāṭikā when got, must be carried by the monk himself; except under the following circumstances: If he is sick, or when going out of the Sīmā, or crossing a river, or when the retention of it is safe in the Vihāra under lock and key, or if it is not yet prepared. (Gilāno vā kotī, nissīmaṃ gantum vā hotī, vassikasāṭikā akatā vā hotī vipakatā vā.—Ibid. p. 314).

Vassukkaḍḍhanā

When there is a leap year and thereby two Āsāḷha months fall in the year, the postponement of the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) may be extended till the end of the second Āsāḷha month. This extension of Vassāvāsa is known as Vassaukkaḍḍhanā. (Mv. p. 145; Cf. Vassunāmakam paṭhamamāsam ukkaḍḍhitukāmo sāvana-māsam akatvā puna āsāḷhimāsameva kattukāmo ti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1127).

Vassūpanāyikā

Same as VASSĀVĀSA, the rainy-season-resort. (Mv. pp. 144-164).

Vākacīra

A robe made out of the bark of a tree. This was not allowed for the monks by the Buddha. If anybody used it as his robe, he committed the offence of Thullaccaya. This was indeed used by the mendicants of other sects and so, it is also called Titthijadhaja. (Mv. p. 320).

Vāṭa

The fence of an Ārāma. (Bārā in Hindi). It may be of bamboo (veluvāṭa) or of thorns (kaṇṭakavāṭa) or it may be only a ditch (Parikhā). (Cv. p. 248).

Vātapāna

The window. The Buddha found some Vihāras very stuffy and dark as there were no windows. He then allowed the monks to provide windows in the Vihāras. Three kinds of ventilators or windows are mentioned. These are : Vedikāvātapāna (a triangular type; Cf. Cetiye vedikā sadisaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, 1299), Jalavātapāna (a window with net or grill) and Salākāvātapāna (a window with bars; Cf. Thambhaka vātapāna.—Ibid. p. 1299). (Cv. p. 241).

Vātapāna-Cakkalikā

The window-grill, made of coir etc. (Cf. Coḷakapādapuñchanam bandhitum anujānāmiti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). The Buddha allowed it in the Vihāra to protect from the squirrels or bats, etc. (Cv. p. 241).

Vātapāna-Bhisikā

A window curtain or a roll to keep away the birds, squirrels, etc. (Cf. Vātapānapamāṇena bhisim katvā bandhitum anujānāmiti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). Probably, it was allowed in place of the window-panes. (Cv. p. 241).

Vāmana

A dwarf. Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1081). In case a dwarf happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Vāraka

A jar or bucket. (Vārako ti ghaṭo—SP. Vol. III, p. 1321). Three kinds of Vārakas are mentioned. These are : Lohavāraka (an iron jar), Dāruvāraka (a wooden jar) and Cammakhaṇḍa (a leather bucket). The Buddha allowed the use of these Vārakas for the monks. (Cv. p. 212). The first two, i.e. Lohavāraka and Dāruvāraka are regarded as the common property of the Saṅgha and so cannot be 'given away' or 'divided'. (Avissajjiya, avebhaṅgiya.—Ibid. pp. 266 & 268).

Vāḷakambala

A blanket made from the hair of horse tail. Its use was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Thullaccaya. (Mv. p. 320). It was indeed used by the mendicants of other sects; and so it was also called Titthiyadhaja. (Ibid.).

Vāsi

A hatchet. It is regarded as the common property of the Saṅgha; and so it can neither be 'given away' nor can be 'divided'. (Avissajjiya, avebhaṅgiya.—Cv. pp. 266 & 268, Cf. Ibid p. 233).

Vikaṇṇa

When the corners of the robe are deranged, the Bhikkhus are allowed to cut it and arrange the corners properly. This is known as vikaṇṇa. (Vikaṇṇam uddharitum.—Mv. p. 312; Cf. Sūttam añchitvā añchitvā sabbintānam eko saṅghāṭikoṇo dīgho hoti. Vikaṇṇam uddharitum ti, dīghakoṇam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1198).

Vikatika

A kind of woolen spreading having designs of lions, tigers, etc. (Cf. Sīhavyagg-hādirūpavicitro unṇamayatttharaṇo.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1199). It is regarded as a costly thing and so called Uccāsayanamahāsayana. Its use was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If anybody used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used only for sitting even if it belonged to a layman, but never for sleeping. (Cv. p. 258).

Vikappanā

The formal 'assignment' of the 'extra' robe or bowl by a monk who desires to keep the 'extra' robes or bowls for himself. (For monks, only three robes and one bowl are allowed; and if more than these are kept, the offences of Nissaggiya Pācittiya are committed). The desirous monk approaches another monk (usually known as Vinayadhara) and tells him thus: "Imaṃ cīvaram (—pattam) tuyhaṃ vikappemi", i. e. "I 'assign' this robe (or bowl) to you". The other monk then gives back the robe (or bowl) telling thus: "Mayhaṃ santakaṃ paribhuñja vā vissajjehi vā yathā paccayaṃ karohi", i. e. "This is my belonging, but you may use it or throw it away as you like". The desirous monk then takes back the robe or bowl for himself. He is now formally entitled to use it for himself without any offence, because the robe or bowl formally belongs to the other monk (not to him). This is known as Sammukha-vikappanā. There is another way of Sammukha-vikappanā. When the desirous monk 'assigns' the robe or bowl in the name of another monk (instead of the Vinayadhara whom he is handing over); and then the robe or bowl is returned in the name of the said Bhikkhu. There is another kind of Vikappanā known as Parammukha-vikappanā. In this case the desirous monk approaches another monk and tells him thus: "Imaṃ cīvaram (—pattam) vikappanatthāya dammī ti", i. e. "I 'assign' you this robe (or bowl) for the purpose of vikappanā only". The other monk then enquires, "Who is your friend or acquaintance?" Having known his name, he then 'assigns' it in the name of that friend and returns the robe or bowl to the desirous Bhikkhu telling thus: "I am giving this to you for your friend. It is your friend's belonging. You may use it or throw it away, as you like". The desirous monk then takes it back and he is now entitled to use it without committing any offence. (Pāc. pp. 165-166; Mv. p. 305; Parā. pp. 44 & 348; Cf SP. Vol. II, pp. 716-717; Kv. (M), pp. 242-244).

If a monk keeps the robe or bowl for himself offered to him for the purpose of vikappanā, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 59; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 140; Pāc. pp. 165-166; Pm. (B), pp. 16 & 49).

Vikalaka

In case the share of the robe to a monk is not equal to others, the Cīvarabhājaka-bhikkhu (the monk in-charge of the distribution of the robes) should make it equal by adding something or by making the monk somehow or other contented. This is known as Vikalaka. (Mv. p. 302; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1194).

Vikāla

Literally it means 'time passed' (vigato kālo). But usually it is applied to the time passed for the meals of the monks. (Cf. Kālo ti bhikkhūnaṃ bhojanakālo adhi-ppeto.—SP. Vol. II, p. 953). The period of vikāla begins from the noon (majjhāhika) and remains upto the dawn of the next day (aruṇakāla). (Pāc. pp. 121, 220).

A bhikkhu or bhikkhunī is prohibited to take any food (khādanīya or bhojanīya) or eatables during this period. If any thing is eaten during this period, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 37; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 120; Pāc. pp. 120-121; Pm. (B), pp. 14 & 47). Even if a monk enters into a village in the afternoon without giving information to any monk of his Vihāra, except on some emergent business, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 85; Pāc. pp. 220; Pm. (B), p. 19).

Vikāsika

A kind of bandage of fine cloth, in order to check the oozing of the medicinal oil from the wound. (Cf. Telarundhanapilotikaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155). Such a bandage was approved by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 224).

Viggayha Parikamma

Rubbing one's body with another, when taking bath. (Cf. Aññamaññaṃ sarīrena sarīraṃ ghaṃsanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1281). This was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If any monk did so, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 194).

Vidhā

A buckle. It is affixed at the loop of the belt (kāyabandhana) in order to protect it from being worn out. The vidhā must not be made of costly materials like gold or silver. If anybody used a vidhā made of gold or silver, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. It may be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bamboo, wood lac, fruit (nut), iron, conch-shell or thread. (Cv. p. 226).

Vidhūpana

A kind of fan, allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Cv. p. 219; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1292).

Vinandhanarajju

The string to tie the Daṇḍakathina (under-frame) with the Kathina (the large wooden-frame), when stitching the robes. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Mahānissēṇiya saddhim khauddakam nissēṇim vinandhitum rajju.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Vinandhanasutta

The thread which is fixed in the Daṇḍakaṭhina (under-frame) for tying the robe, when stitching. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Khuddakanisseyiā cīvaram vinandhitum suttakam,—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288).

Vinītavatthu

An illustration which presents the exposition of an ecclesiastical rule (sikkhāpada), is called vinītavatthu. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1912). We find a number of such illustrations in the texts. For example, there are as many as 80 illustrations in connection with the First Parājika. (Pārā. pp. 42-50).

Vipatti

Literally it means 'failure'.

There are four kinds of Vipattis, viz., (i) Sīla-vipatti i.e. 'failure' of the first two moral rules, the Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa; (ii) Ācāravipatti, i.e. 'failure' of the remaining moral rules; (iii) Diṭṭhi-vipatti, i.e. 'failure' of right views regarding Dhamma and Vinaya; (iv) Ājīva-vipatti, i.e. 'failure' of right living. (Pari. pp. 168, 259; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1397).

Vivaṭaka-Salākaggāho

A method of collection of ballot-sticks (salākā) by open balloting. This is applicable in an assembly where the 'consciencious' (dhammika) monks are in majority. (Cf. Lajjussannāya parisāya vivaṭako.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1278; Cf. Cv. p. 184). See also SALĀKAGGĀHO.

Vivaṭṭa

Vivādādhikaraṇa

The 'legal question' arising out of the 'dispute' among the monks. This 'dispute' may be on account of any of the following eighteen topics: viz., (1-2) It is dhamma (just) or adhamma (unjust); (3-4) it is the Vinaya ('discipline') or Avinaya ('non-discipline'); (5-6) it is spoken by the Buddha (bhāsitaṃ) or not spoken by the Buddha (abhāsitaṃ); (7-8) it is practised by the Buddha (āciṇṇam) or not practised by the Buddha (anāciṇṇam); (9-10) it is laid down by the Buddha (paññattaṃ) or not laid down by the Buddha (apaññattaṃ); (11-12) it is an 'offence' (āpatti) or not an 'offence' (anāpatti); (13-14) it is a 'light offence' (lahukāpatti) or 'serious offence' (garukāpatti); (15-16) it is an 'offence' which can be 'done away with' and the monkhood remains (sāvasesāpatti, the 'offence' other than Pārājika) or which cannot be 'done away' with and the monkhood ceases for ever (anavasesāpatti, i.e. Pārājika); (17-18) it is the 'grievous offence' (duṭṭhullāpatti, i.e. Pārājika & Saṅghādisesa) or the 'non-grievous offence' (aduṭṭhullāpatti, i.e. other than the Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa). (Cv. pp. 170-171).

The 'settlement' of the Vivādādhikaraṇa may be arrived at by two ways, viz., (1) 'verdict' in presence (sammukhavinaya) and (2) 'verdict' by the majority of 'righteous' monks (yebhuyyasikā). (Cv. pp. 177-170; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1461).

Vissāsagahaṇa

Taking away a thing belonging to another person thinking that the owner will not mind it. It is known as vissāsagahaṇa. It is of course improper to take away any thing belonging to another monk; but a monk may take away the things belonging to a friend (sandiṭṭho), or to a very close friend (sambhatto), or when he is so asked to take away the things of another monk (ālapito) and that also if the owner-monk is alive (jīvati), (because the property of a dead monk belongs to the Saṅgha); or it is definite that if taken away, the owner-monk will be happy (jānāti ca gahite me attamano bhavissati). (Mv. p. 312; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1197-1198).

Vihāra

A monastery, a residential building for the Buddhist mendicants. It is one of five kinds of 'lodgings' (senāsanāni) allowed by the Buddha for the residence of the monks. The others are : Aḍḍhayoga, Pāsāda, Hammiya and Guhā. (Cv. p. 239. On p. 259, the utility of a Vihāra is mentioned. See also Mv. p. 55, the Gāthās 1-5).

The Vihāra is regarded as the property of the Buddhist Saṅgha at all the places and for all the times to come. (Cv. p. 240). And so, it can never be 'given away' (avissajjiya) nor can be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya). If anybody does so, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya. (Ibid. pp. 266-268).

The Vihāra may be plastered one, or coated or coloured with white, black or Geruka (reddish) materials. (Ibid. p. 244). It may be decorated with the paintings of flowers, creepers, etc., but never with the pictures of men or women. If one does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. p. 245).

A Vihāra may have three kinds of apartments or chambers, viz., 2, square (strikāgabbha), a long quadrangle (nālikāgabbha), a chamber on the upper storey (hammiyagabbha). In a large Vihāra the chamber (gabbha) may be in the middle, but in a small Vihāra it may be constructed at one side. (Ibid. p. 245).

The Vihāra should be provided with wooden pegs (Bhittikhīla nāgadantakaṃ), a bamboo or string (Cīvaraṇṇaṃsa, Cīvararajju) to hang the robes. (Ibid. p. 246). There should be a refectory (Upaṭṭhānasālā) for the purpose of taking meals. Near this place a small room should be built to keep the drinking water (Pāṇīyasālā). The water-room or Pāṇīyasālā should be provided with cups, glasses, etc. (Ibid. pp. 246-247). A fire-place or Aggisālā and a courtyard or Parivaṇa, etc. should also be provided in a Vihāra. For the protection of the Vihāra the Buddha recommended fence, hedge, gates, etc. (Ibid. pp. 247-248).

The roof of the Vihāra may be of brick, stone, Cunam (lime), grass or leaves. (Ibid. p. 248).

As regards the location of a Vihāra the most suitable place is that which is neither very far from the village or nigama or town nor too close to it. There should be easy approach, not crowded in the day and quiet at night. It is fit for the solitude, a lonely place, fit for meditation. The Veḷuvanārāma at Rājagaha (Mv. p. 38) and the Anāthapiṇḍikassa Jetavanārāma (Cv. pp. 252-253) at Sāvattthi were built in such surroundings (Cf. Gāmato neva atidūre na accāsanne, gamanāgamanasampannam, atthikānam atthikānam manussānam abhikkamanīyam, divā appākiṇṇam, rattim appasaddam, appanigghosam, vijanavātam manussārāhaseyyukam, paṭisallānasāruppaṃ.—Cv. pp. 252-253).

A Vihāra may be constructed for the personal use (puggalika) or for the use of whole Saṅgha (sāṅghikam). To construct a Mahallaka Vihāra (i. e. a large Vihāra; larger than a Kuṭī) for an individual monk (by a Dāyaka) the desirous monk must get the proposed site 'examined' (vatthu-olokana); and the formal 'approval' of the Saṅgha (vatthu-desanā) must be obtained. If such a Vihāra is constructed without the vatthu-desanā of the Saṅgha, an offence of Saṅghādisesa is committed. (Rule No. 7; Parā. p. 233).

No monk should turn out any monk from the Vihāra out of anger if the latter is already allowed to stay. (Cv. p. 262). If one does so, he commits the offence of Pacittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 17, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 113: Pāc. pp. 68-69; Pm. (B), pp. 12 & 46).

The Bhikkhu who is made in-charge of allotting the rooms or beds in a Vihāra is called the Senāsanagāhāpaka. He is selected by the Saṅgha by holding a Ñattidutiya-kamma. (Cv. 262; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1306-1307).

The following things of the Vihāra should never be 'given away' (avissajjanīya) nor be 'divided' (avebhaṅgiya): viz., Ārāma, its land, Vihāra and its land, couch (mañca), chair (pīṭha), bolster (bhisi), pillow (bimbohana), iron or copper pitchers (lohakumbhī), iron jar (Lohavāraka), iron or copper utensils (lohakaṭāha), hatchet (vāsi), large axe (parasu), axe (kuṭhārī), hoe (kuddāla), chisel (nikkhādana), creeper, bamboo, Muñja or Babbaja, grass, earth, wood-material, earth-material. (Cv. pp. 266, 267-268).

Vījanī

A fan. The Buddha allowed three kinds of fans for the monks; viz., (i) a fan made of bark (vākamaya), (ii) of Usīra grass (usīramaya) and (iii) of peacock feather (moraviñchamaya). (Cv. p. 219; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1292).

Visatimaṭṭha

Decorating all the twenty nails of hands and feet. This was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one did so, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. Of course the nails must be kept clean. (Cv. p. 224; Cf. Visati pi nakhe likhitamatthe kārāpeti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1293).

Vuṭṭhāna—Sammuti

The Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha gives the formal 'sanction' to a Sikkhamānā for attaining her Upasampadā. This is known as Uṭṭhāna-sammuti. For this purpose the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. After the Uṭṭhānasammati the Sikkhamānā is eligible to get her Upasampadā or higher ordination to become a Bhikkhunī. In case any nun confers Upasampadā upon a Sikkhamānā without having this 'sanction', she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 64; Pāc. pp. 438-439, 444; Pm. (B), p. 43; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 982-983. See SIKKHA—MĀNĀ also).

Vuṭṭhāpana—Sammuti

The Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha gives a formal 'sanction' to a nun who has at least completed twelve years as a Bhikkhunī, to confer the Upasampadā upon a Sikkhamānā and to act as her Upajjhāyinī. This 'sanction' is known as Vuṭṭhāpana-sammuti. For this purpose the Bhikkhunī-Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. In case a Bhikkhunī confers the Upasampadā or acts as Upajjhāyinī without this 'sanction', she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 75; Pāc. p. 457-458; Pm. (B), p. 44).

Veṭhana

A turban or a head-dress. It was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If one used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Vedikā—Vātapāna

A window having the form of a fire-altar, i.e. a triangular shaped ventilator. (Cf. Cetiye vedikā sadisaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1299). A Vihāra may have this type of window. (Mv. p. 241).

Vehāsa kuṭi

Another storey inside a room (like a loft) so built as to serve the purpose of putting a cot for sleeping or sitting. This upper storey does not have any floor but only beams are fixed. Hence it is called Vehāsa-kuṭi; i. e. 'a room in the sky'. This upper storey should be high enough so that a middle-size man can stand without knocking against the beams. (Pāc. p. 70; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 799; Kv. (M), p. 206).

Sa

Sauttaracchada

A bed with the red canopy over head, (Cf. Sahauttaracchadanena uparibandhena rattavitānena saddhiṃ ii attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1150). It was regarded as uccāsaya-namahāsāyana, not allowed for the use of the monks. If any monk used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It might be used for sitting but never for sleeping even if it belonged to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Samvāsa

Living together or co-residence with the monks of the Saṅgha. (Cf. Pakattā bhikkhū saha vasanti ethāti samvāsa. Ekakammādiko tividhopi vidhi samvāso nāma.—Kv. (M), p. 109). There are however three types of samvāsa, viz., (i) Living with those who perform the Saṅghakamma together within one Sīma (Ekākamma-samvāsa); (ii) Living with those who recite the Pātimokkha together within one Sīmā (Eku-ddesa-samvāsa); (iii) Living with those scrupulous monks who observe the precepts together (Samasikkhatā-sāmvāsa).

An asamvāsika monk is not eligible to live with other monks and he can not attend any Saṅghakamma.

Samvelliya (I)

A mode of putting on the under-garment, as a loin cloth; as the wrestlers put on. (Cf. Mallakammakārādayo viya kacchaṃ bandhitvā nivāsentī.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1295). A Bhikkhu is not allowed to put on the robe in this fashion. If one puts on his robe in this fashion, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Samvelliya (II)

A kind of cloth used during menses is also known as Samvelliya. This was allowed by the Buddha for the nuns. (Cv. p. 391).

Sakaṇṇajappaka-Salākaggāho

A method of collecting the ballot-sticks (Salākā-votes) by whispering in the ears the colours of ballot-sticks of different groups to each monk. This is required when in the assembly the majority belongs to the fools. (Cf. Bālussannāya parisāya sakaṇṇajappako.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1278-1279. Also Cf. Cv. p. 184). Also see SALĀKAGGĀHO.

Sakāya Nirutti

'Buddha's own language', Māgadhī. (Cf. Sakāya nirutti nāma sammāsambuddhena vuttappakārena māgadhiko vohāro.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1297). This was the language in which the Buddha recommended the monks to learn the 'words of the Buddha' (Buddhavacana). (Cv. p. 229).

Here the term 'own language' denotes the 'common language' which was spoken by the Buddha and his Saṅgha and also by the public at large. This was the lingua franca of the time, not particularly of the Buddha alone. It was, therefore, given the popular common name, Māgadhi. (Cf. Sakāya niruttiyā buddhavacanam dūsentī ti = Māgadhabhāsāya sabbesaṃ vatthum sukaratāya hīnajaccā uggāhantā dūsentī ti attho.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 236).

Saṅkacchikā or Saṅkaccikā

The bodice. A Bhikkhunī should not enter into the village without putting on the bodice. If one goes without it, she commits an offence of Pacittiya. (Rule No. 96; Pac. p. 480; Pm. (B), p. 45; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 991).

Saṅgāma vacara

The same as Codaka. This term occurs only in the Pariwārapāli. (Pari. pp. 289, 292; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1473).

Saṅgīti

Collective recitation of the 'words of the Buddha' in order to compile and edit the scriptures; a council. The First Saṅgīti was held at Rājagaha soon after the Mahāparinibbāna of the Buddha. This convocation was attended by five hundred monks; and so it was called Pañcasatikā Saṅgīti. (Cv. pp. 406-414). The Second Saṅgīti was held at Vesālī, a century after the death of the Buddha. This was attended by seven hundred monks and so it was called Sattasatikā Saṅgīti. (Ibid. pp. 416-430).

Saṅgha

The 'assembly' of Bhikkhus or Bhikkhunīs.

An assembly of eight 'Ariyapuggalas' (i.e. those who have attained the Magga or Phala stage of Sotāpanna, Sakadāgāmi, Anāgāmi and Arahata) is distinguished by the term 'Dakkhiṇeyya-saṅgha'. The Common assembly of the monks is called Sammuti-saṅgha. (Cf. Avisesena bhikkhusamūho sammutisaṅgho.—Kv. (M) p. 85).

An assembly of four monks is known as Catuvagga-saṅgha. This Saṅgha is competent to perform all types of Saṅgha-kammas except the Upasampadā, Pavāraṇā and Abbhāna. The Pañcavagga-saṅgha, i. e. the assembly of five monks is competent to perform all the Saṅgha-kammas except the Upasampadā (in the Majjhimadesa) and Abbhāna. The assembly of ten monks, the Dasavagga-saṅgha can perform all the Saṅgha-kammas except the Abbhāna. The assembly of twenty or more monks, Vīsativagga-saṅgha & Atirekavīsativagga-saṅgha, is fully eligible to perform all the Saṅgha-kammas. (Mv. pp. 333-336; Cf. Kv. (M) pp. 85-86). Thus an assembly of at least four monks or nuns is called Saṅgha. An assembly of two or three monks is known as 'Gaṇa' (i.e. group) and a solitary person is called 'Puggala'. The following four 'acts' (Kammas) can be performed only by the Saṅgha, viz., Apalokanakamma, Ñattikamma, Ñattidutiyakamma and Ñatticatutthakamma. (SP. Vol. II, p. 903).

Saṅghabhatta

A meal given to all the monks of a Saṅgha living at a place. It is a sort of congregational invitation. The Buddha allowed such a meal for the monks. (Cv. p. 272; Mv. p. 55; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1335).

Saṅghabheda

A 'schism' or 'disunion' in the Saṅgha. On any matter if there are at least five Adhammavādī (unrighteous) monks on one side and at least four Dhammavādī (righteous) monks on the other, it is called Saṅghabheda. But if the number of the parties is less than the above, it is known as Saṅgharāji, (because the minimum number of monks to constitute a Saṅgha is four, and so, 5:4 can alone create the Saṅghabheda in true sense). (Cv. p. 305).

The Saṅghabheda can be created by the fully ordained monks, not by Bhikkhunis, or Sikkhamānās, or Sāmaṇeras, or Sāmaṇerīs, or Upāsakas, or Upāsikās. They can however connive at a 'schism'. (Ibid. p. 305).

What are the characteristics of a Saṅgha 'split'? When the monks advocate the non-Dhamma as Dhamma, the Dhamma as non-Dhamma, the non-Vinaya as Vinaya, the Vinaya as non-Vinaya, the non-spoken by the Buddha as spoken, the spoken by the Buddha as non-spoken, the non-practised by the Buddha as practised, the practised by the Buddha as non-practised, the not-laid down by the Buddha as laid down, the laid down by the Buddha as not-laid down, the non-offence as offence, the offence as non-offence, the ordinary offence as serious offence, the serious offence as ordinary offence, the Sāvasesa offence (other than Pārājika) as Anavasesa (Pārājika), the Dutṭhulla offence (Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa) as Adutṭhulla (other offences). On these above points they differ and split and hold Upasatha, Pavāraṇā and other Saṅgha-kammas separately, then it should be regarded as the Saṅgha 'split'. This is known as Saṅghabheda or 'schism' in the Saṅgha. (Ibid. p. 306).

• If any monk endeavours to create a 'schism' in the Saṅgha, he should be warned three times for not doing so. But if he does not pay heed to these warnings of the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 10, Bhikkhunī Rule No. 14; Para. pp. 258-259; Pm. (B), pp. 31 & 32; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1364-1369).

Saṅghabhedaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk who creates a 'schism' in the Bhikkhu-Saṅgha is known as Saṅghabhedaka. Should a Bhikkhu endeavour to advocate Dhamma as Adhamma and Adhamma as Dhamma; or Vinaya as Avinaya and Avinaya as Vinaya; or what is told by the Bhaddha as not told and not told as told by the Buddha; or what was practised by the Buddha as not practised and not practised as practised by the Buddha; or what was instructed by the Buddha as not instructed and not instructed as instructed by the Buddha; or what was 'offence' as 'non-offence' and 'non-offence' as 'offence'; or serious 'offence' as light; light offence as serious; or Sāvasesa offence (other than Pārājika) as Anavasesa (Pārājika) and vice versa; or Dutṭhulla offence (Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa offence) as Aduṭṭhulla (other offences) and vice versa. Such a Bhikkhu is regarded as Saṅghabhedaka. (Cv. p. 306). Such a person should not be given Upasampadā; and in case already conferred upon, it should be cancelled (Mv. pp. 142, 187) Only a Bhikkhu can become the Saṅghabhedaka, but not a Bhikkhunī or Samānera or Sāmaṇerī or Sikkhamānā or Upāsaka or Upāsikā. (Cv. p. 305).

If a monk attempts to create the 'schism' in the Saṅgha, he commits an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 10; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 14; Para. pp. 258-262; Pm. (B), pp. 3 & 32).

Saṅgharāji

A 'dissension' in the Saṅgha where the number of the monks is eight or less. Such an occasion may arise when there are three Dhammavādī (righteous) monks on one side and four Adhammavādī (unrighteous) monks on the other and the eighth monk announces and distributes voting tickets (salāka) with these words : "This is Dhamma, this is Vinaya, this is the instruction of the Satthā, hold this voting ticket and give your approval of it". Under this circumstance it is regarded as 'dissension' or Saṅgharāji; but not a 'schism' (Saṅghabheda) because both the parties of the monks do not have the minimum number to constitute the Saṅgha in true sense. (In this case, one party has only three monks whereas the minimum number to constitute a Saṅgha should be at least four or more). On some occasions when there are nine monks, out of which four are on one side and four are on the other and the ninth monk announces as above, then also it may be a Saṅgharāji and not a Saṅghabheda, because in some ecclesiastical actions the minimum number of the Saṅgha is five, not four. But if the ecclesiastical action for which there needs only four monks to constitute the Saṅgha, then it may be regarded as a Saṅghabheda. Thus ordinarily any disintegration of the Saṅgha consisting of nine or less monks is called Saṅgharāji, and if more than nine monks, it is known as Saṅghabheda. (Cv. pp. 305).

Saṅghasāmaggi

'Communion of the Saṅgha'. When there arises any dispute in the Saṅgha and thereby the Saṅgha is likely to 'split', the Buddha has asked the monks to get themselves 'united'. For this purpose all the monks (leaving none, not even the sick) should assemble at a place and hold a Ñattidutiyakamma to this effect. Just after this an Upasatha (i. e. Sāmaggi Upasatha) should be held and the Patimokkha should be recited. (Mv. p. 389). This is known as Saṅghasāmaggi. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1485).

In case a Saṅghasāmaggi is held with no sincerity at all but only as a show to settle down the dispute (atthāpetāvyañjanupetā), it is regarded as Adhammika Saṅghasāmaggi. A Saṅghasāmaggi which is held with genuine intention to settle down the dispute (atthupetā ca vyañjanupetā) is considered as Dhammika Saṅghasāmaggi. (Ibid. p. 390).

If a genuine Saṅghasāmaggi is held, the monks state only the Dhamma as Dhamma, Adhamma as Adhamma, Vinaya as Vinaya, Avinaya as Avinaya, what is said by the Buddha as said, what is not said as not said, what is practised by the Buddha as practised and not practised as not practised, what is laid down by the Buddha as laid down and not laid down as not laid down, what is 'offence' as 'offence' and 'non-offence' as 'non-offence', grievous 'offence' as grievous 'offence' and light 'offence' as light 'offence', Sāvasesā 'offence' (other than Pārājika) as Sāvasesā and Anavasesā 'offence' (Pārājika) as Anavasesā 'offence', what is Duṭṭhullā 'offence' (Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa 'offences') as Duṭṭhullā and Aduṭṭhullā 'offence' (other than Pārājika and Saṅghādisesa) as Aduṭṭhullā. And they also hold the Upasatha or Pavāraṇā and other Saṅgha-kammās unitedly at one place, but never separately. This is known as 'communion of the Saṅgha' (Saṅghasāmaggi). (Cv. p. 306).

Saṅghāṭī

The upper robe of a member of the Buddhist Order to cover up the body. It is one of the three main robes (cīvaras) of the Buddhist monks. (Mv. p. 305).

If the material is new, it is usually made of two layers. (Ibid. p. 305). And in case the material is old, it may be made of four layers; and if the material is the Pamsukūla (rag), the layers may be of any number as according to the need. (Kkuddakasikkhā (M), Gāthā Nos. 52, 53).

The size of the Saṅghāṭī should not be equal or more than that of the Cīvara of the Buddha (Sugatacīvarappamāṇa); i.e. it must be less than nine Sugata-spans in length and six Sugata-spans in breadth (as this was the size of the Buddha's Saṅghāṭī). If it is so, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 92; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 166; Pāc. p. 231; Pm. (B), pp. 10 & 52).

In the Khuddakasikkhā (Gāthā No. 45) it is mentioned that the Saṅghāṭī and Uttarāsāṅga are of equal sizes. The smallest size as given there is four full-stretched arms and one close-fisted-arm in length; and in breadth it is two full-stretched arms and one close-fisted-arm.

A Bhikkhu is not allowed to live by keeping away any of the three Cīvaras (viz., Saṅghāṭī, Uttarāsāṅga and Antaravāsaka) even for a night. If one does so, he commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule Nos. 2 & 14; Pārā. pp. 291-295; Pm. (B), pp. 6 & 14; Pari. p. 16). When entering into a village, it is laid down by the Buddha that the Saṅghāṭī must be carried along with the other two *civara*s (the uttarāsaṅga and antaravāsaka); otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 313). Certain exemptions are also mentioned. For instance, when the monk is sick; or when it is 'rainy season'; or when crossing a river; or if the Vihāra is safe and well protected; or when the Bhikkhu has received the Kathina. (Gilāno vā hoti, vassikasaṅketam vā hoti, aggaḷaguttavihāro vā hoti atthataka-thinaṃ vā hoti.—Ibid. p. 313).

As it was the thickest robe of the monks, it was probably used mostly during the winter season for covering up the whole body from all sides (pārūpana); and the Uttarāsaṅga was mostly used during the summer and rainy seasons, although the Saṅghāṭī was also kept.

The Saṅghāṭī must be dyed with the Kasāya (yellow colour) and then 'disfigured' (dubbaṇṇakaraṇa) at one of its ends. (Ibid. p. 302; Cf. also p. 321; Pm. (B), p. 9; Kv. (M), p. 242; SP. Vol. II, pp. 888-889).

The Saṅghāṭī should be used very carefully. It should not be used for sitting in the Pallatthikā (squatting) posture. If one did so, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 225).

Saṅghāṇi

A kind of waist ornament. (Cf. Yā kāci kaṭūpagā.—Pāc. p. 472; SP. Vol. II, p. 989). A Bhikkhunī should not use it; otherwise an offence of Pācittiya was committed. (Rule No. 86; Pāc. p. 472; Pm. (B), p. 45).

Saṅghādisesa

The Saṅghādisesa is the second 'offence' in order of gravity, the first being Parājika. There are altogether thirteen Saṅghādisesa offences in the Bhikkhu Pātimokkha. Out of them the first five relate to sex; the next two, Nos. 6 & 7 are in connection with the construction of the cottages or Vihāras; Nos. 8 & 9 are concerned with the false accusation of an 'offence'; the next 10 & 11 are about the 'schism' in the Saṅgha and the last two (12 & 13) are in connection with the obstinacy of a monk who not minding the admonitions pollutes the 'faith' of a devout family. In the Bhikkhunī Pātimokkha however the number of this offence is seventeen, out of which seven offences, namely 7th, 8th, 9th, 14th, 15th, 16th and 17th are common to both, corresponding to the 5th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th & 13th of the Bhikkhu Saṅghādisesa respectively. Out of the remaining ten, the first deals with the behaviour of a quarrelsome nun; the second with those who admit that lady into the Saṅgha who is a thief or condemned to death; the third one is about those who go alone into the village or to the bank of a river or reside alone in the night; the fourth deals with those who 're-admit' the 'suspended' (ukkhitta) one without the sanction of the Saṅgha; the fifth and sixth relate to such actions which may give occasions to moral lapses; while the tenth and the eleventh concern to those who show disrespect to the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha or accuse the Saṅgha of favouritism. The remaining two, 12th & 13th forbid the nuns to associate too closely with the householders and to conceal the lapses of others respectively.

The first nine of the Bhikkhu Saṅghādisesa group are called 'Paṭhamāpattikā' and the rest four 'Yāvatatīyakā' because the former ones accrue the punishment at once while the latter after three admonitions. (Pm. (B). p. 5; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 114.; SP. Vol. II, p. 633). The punishment for these offences are Mānatta or Parivāsa (combined with Mānatta), as the case may be. (Parā. pp. 276-277). For the Bhikkhunīs only the Mānatta of a fortnight is given, and not the Parivāsa even if it is concealed for some period. (Pāc. 328).

It is called Saṅghādisesa because the infliction of the punishment (Parivāsa or Mānatta) and its revocation (Abbhāna) both require the sanction of the Saṅgha in the beginning (Ādi) and also in the end (Sesa). Hence it is known as Saṅghādisesa. (Cf. Saṅgho ādimhi ceva sese ca icchitabbo assāti Saṅghādiseso—Kv. (M) p. 127; Also Saṅghādiseso ti saṅgho va tassā āpattiyā parivāsaṃ deti, mūlāyapaṭikassati, mānattaṃ deti, abbhett, na sambahulā na ekapuggalo. Tena vuccati Saṅghādiseso.—Parā. pp. 152, 276; Pari. p. 263; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 518).

It is also included in the most serious group of offences, the Duṭṭhulla-āpatti or Garukā-āpatti.

Saṅghādisesa-Āpatti

An 'offence' (āpatti) which has been committed intentionally with some motive. (Cf. Sacittakā āpatti saṅghādisesa.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1421; also Yato vitikkamasāññāya abhāvena muccati ayam saṅghādisesa.—Kv. (M), p. 112; Pari. p. 212).

Satavalika

A mode of putting on the under-garment arranged in many folds. (Cf. Dīghasāṭikam anekakhattum obhañjitvā ovalṭikam karontena nivattham.—Vāmadakkhiṇapassesu vā nīrantaram valiyo dassetvā nivattham.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). This fashion was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one put on his under-garment in this fashion, he committed the offence of Dukkata. (Cv. p. 227).

Sativinaya

A kind of procedure for the 'settlement' of a 'case' or 'dispute' (adhikaraṇa) concerning with an Arahanta monk. This is an appeal made by an Arahanta monk when he is being charged with some false 'offence' which he can never commit. The Saṅgha then formally approves of his immunity from committing any 'offence' as he is a Khīṇāsava (emancipated) and as also he is 'vigilant' enough not to commit any offence intentionally. The Saṅgha approves of it by holding a Ñatticatuttha- kamma. Thus, when so formally approved by the Saṅgha, no accusation against him can stand. (Cf. Ayaṃ pana sativīnayo khīṇāsavasassa dātabbo, na aññasa antamaso anāgāmino.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1271, 1460; Dinne pana sativīnaye puna tasmim̐ puggale kassaci anuvādo na rūhati.—Kv. (M), p. 290; Cf. Cv. pp. 184-185).

This procedure is applicable to only one kind of 'case', i.e. Anuvādhikāraṇa. (Kv. (M), p. 290; Cv. pp. 184-185).

This procedure requires five conditions, viz., (i) The monk being accused is 'pure' and free from any 'offence' (suddhassa anāpattikassa dānaṃ ekaṃ), (ii) the monk is actually being accused by another monk (anuvāditassa dānaṃ ekaṃ), (iii) the monk requests the Saṅgha to declare him immunity from committing any 'offence' (yācitassa dānaṃ), (iv) the Saṅgha is alone competent to grant such an immunity from 'offence' (saṅghena dānaṃ ekaṃ), (v) the immunity granted by the Saṅgha is just and unanimous (dhammena samaggena). (SP. Vol. III, pp. 1271-1272; Pañcimāni, bhikkhave, dhammikāni sativīnayassa dānāni. Suddho hoti bhikkhu anāpattiko, anuradati ca naṃ, yācati ca, tassa saṅgho sativīnayaṃ deti dhammena samaggena.—Cv. pp. 158-185). See also SAMATHA.

Sattabbhantara-Sīmā

In case the Bhikkhus living in a forest are to hold Uposatha or any Saṅghakamma, an area of seven abbhantarās (i.e. $28 \times 7 = 196$ hands) all around is regarded as the Sīmā or 'boundary' for the purpose. This is known as Sattabbhantara-sīmā. (Agāmake ca, bhikkhave, araṇṇe sattabbhantarā. Ayaṃ tattha samānasamvāsa ekūposathā.—Mv. p. 113; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 90; SP. Vol. III, p. 1109). It is also called Abaddha-sīmā as it requires no demarcations or signs nor the Ñatticatutthakamma is necessary for its fixation. (Mv. p. 113.). See also SĪMĀ.

Sattāhakarāṇīya

As a rule the monks are not allowed to wander during the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort); but if there arises some urgent business and movement from the residence becomes imperative, the bhikkhus are allowed to do so. But the period of absence from his residence should not exceed seven nights. This is known as Sattāhakarāṇīya. (Mv. pp. 145-155). The occasions for such a movement may arise on account of some personal urgent affair, or on account of a Bhikkhu, or a Bhikkhunī, or a Sikkhamānā, or a Sāmaṇerī, or an Upāsaka, or an Upāsikā, or parents, or brother, or sister, or relatives, or even on account of Saṅgha. The occasions may be the donation of a Vihāra, an aḍḍhayaga, a pāsāda, a hammiya, a cave, a pariveṇa, a koṭṭhaka, an uṇṇatthānasālā, an aggisālā, a kappiyakuṭṭi, a vaccakuṭṭi, a caṅkama, a caṅkamanasālā, a well, a roof for the well, a ḍantāghara, a ḍantāgharasālā, a pokkharāṇī, a maṇḍapa, an ārāma, land for the ārāma to the Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī Saṅgha, or to many Bhikkhus or Bhikkhunīs, or to Sikkhamānā, or to a Sāmaṇerī, or to a Sāmaṇera, or on the occasion when the above buildings are built for one's own use, or on the occasion of a marriage ceremony at the house of an Upāsaka or Upāsikā. On the above mentioned occasions a monk may go out if he is particularly invited with the purpose of offering Dāna, listening to the Dhamma or paying respects to the monks. (Āgacchantu bhadantā icchāmi dānaṃ ca dātum, dhammaṃ ca sotum, bhikkhu ca passitum—Mv. p. 146).

When a Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī or a Sāmaṇera or a Sikkhamānā or a Sāmaṇeri is sick or intends to disrobe (anabhirati) or has developed 'doubts' (kukkucca) or has developed 'wrong views' (diṭṭhigata) or has committed a 'grave offence' requiring punishment of Parivāsa or Mūlayapa-ṭikassanā or Mānatta or 'calling him' back (abbhāna), the Bhikkhu then should go out for the purpose even if he is not invited. Similarly a monk can go out without any invitation if he is to attend to any Saṅghakamma, such as Taijjanīya, Niyassa, Pabbājanīya, Paṭisāraṇīya, Ukkhepanīya, Upasampadā. But the period of absence must not exceed seven nights on any account. If his father or mother is sick and wishes him to see, he should go out uninvited. And if his brother or sister or any other relative is sick and wishes him to see, he can go out only if he is specially invited. Similarly on invitation, he can go out to see a Bhikkhugatika (one who stays in the Vihāra with the monks) if he is sick and wishes him to see. The Bhikkhus are also allowed by the Buddha to go out for a period of seven nights for any business of the Saṅgha, say for instance, construction of a Vihāra. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave saṅghakaraṇīyena gantum. Sattāhaṃ sannivatto kātabbo.—Mv. p. 155; Ibid. pp. 145-155; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1129-1130).

Sattāhakālika

Five kinds of medicines, viz., Sappi (Ghee), Navanīta (butter), Tela (oil), Madhu (honey) and Phāṇita (molasses) may be stored by the monks for a week. Hence these are known as Sattāhakālika. (Cf. Sappi ādi pañcavidhaṃ bhesajjaṃ sattāhaṃ nidhitabbo. Sattāho kālo assāti sattāhakālikaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 861). If a monk keeps them for more than a week, he commits an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25; Pārā. pp. 356-357; Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37).

Sattu (I)

Flour made out of baked barley or other kinds of grains is known as Sattu. (Cf. Sattu nāma sattadhaññāni bhajjitvā kato.—Kv. (M), p. 220; Cf. SP. Vol. II, 844). It is one of the five kinds of meals (bhojanāni), others being ḍodano (cooked-rice), kummāso (mixed-pulse & rice), maṃsaṃ (meat) and maccho (fish). (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 122, 129, 240, 243).

See BHOJANĪYA.

Sattu (II)

A kind of powder mixed with turmeric etc. in order to keep the needle free from stain or rust is also called Sattu. (Cv. p. 204; Cf. Haliddimissakena piṭṭha-cuṇṇena.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1287).

Satthaka

A small knife used for cutting the robe-cloth. It is usually kept in a case, called Namataka. Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 204). The Satthaka with the handle is known as Daṇḍasatthaka. (Ibid.; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1287).

Satthakamma

Surgery. The Buddha allowed the monks to perform the operation of a boil. (Mv. p. 224). But the operation of the pudendum is not allowed for the monks, even if a monk suffers from fistula (bhagandala). If one performs such an operation, he commits the offence of Thullaccaya. (Ibid. p. 233; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1157).

Satthakadaṇḍa

The handle of a knife. (Cv. p. 204). It should not be made of gold or silver; otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. It may be made of bone, ivory, horn, reed, bomboo, lac, fruit, iron or conch-shell. (Ibid.).

Satthalūkha (—Civara)

The robe of the monks, cut by the knife (and then stitched) to make it poor or undersirable for the people is called satthalūkha. Such a civara is prescribed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 304).

Saddhādeyya-vinipātana

Ordinarily a monk is not allowed to give away the things offered to him (by a person with 'faith' saddhā) to anyone except to his own parents. 'Giving away' of such things is known as Saddhādeyya-vinipātana. If one does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 313).

Saddhivihārika

The 'disciple' of an Upajjhāya (preceptor). He may be a Sāmaṇera or a Bhikkhu living with him for training. He known as Saddhivihārika. He receives preaching in the Dhamma and training in the Vinaya and other monastic rules necessary for the monk-life. (Mv. p. 48). It is, therefore, essential that anyone seeking admission into the Buddhist Order should first look out for an Upajjhāya. He should approach an 'able' and 'competent' monk; and after saluting he should request him to become his Upajjhāya. He should utter three times thus : “Upajjhāyo me bhante hohi”, i. e. “Venerable Sir, be my ‘preceptor’. And if he expresses his consent, he should be deemed as his Upajjhāya.

The Buddha has enjoined that a Saddhivihārika must live under the guardianship of an Upajjhāya. (Ibid. p. 43). The relation between the Saddhivihārika and Upajjhāya is like that of a son and father. It is laid down by the Buddha that the Saddhivihārika must treat his Upajjhāya as his father. (Upajjhāyo, Bhikkhave, saddhivihārikamhi puttacittam upatthapessati, saddhivihāriko upajjhāyamhi pitucittam upatthapessati.—Ibid. p. 43). The Saddhivihārika is expected to do all kinds of services to his Upajjhāya. For instance, he should provide him with the tooth-stick, water, Yāgu, arrange his robes, alms-bowl, seat, chair etc., wash his clothes, accompany with him if he wishes so, keep himself always behind when walking, etc. When the Upajjhāya falls sick, the Saddhivihārika should attend upon him till he is recovered. In case the Upajjhāya develops ‘anti-pathy’ towards the Dhamma, the Saddhivihārika must make every effort to dispel it, or arrange a Dhamma-kathā (religious discourse) for the purpose. If the Upajjhāya happens to commit any ‘grievous offence’ or the Saṅgha is meeting to pronounce an ordeal against him, it is the duty of the Saddhivihārika to make every possible endeavour to prevail upon his Upajjhāya to appear before the Saṅgha for the ‘expiation’ of the ‘offence’.

It is expected that the Saddhivihārika will take the permission from his Upajjhāya in almost all the matters. For instance, without permission, he can neither give nor take the bowl or robe from others; he should not shave nor get himself shaved by others; he should not do any service to others; he should not go behind any other monk for his alms (pacchāsamaṇa); nor should he take any monk to go behind him (pacchāsamaṇo ādātabbo); he should not bring meals for others nor cause others to bring alms for himself. He should not go into a village or to the funeral ground or to a journey without the permission of his Upajjhāya. (See Upajjhāyavattakathā, Ibid. pp. 42-47; Cv. pp. 328-332; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1025-1031).

In case a Saddhivihārika does not behave properly, he is liable to be ‘expelled’ by the Upajjhāya (Paṇāmanā). (Mv. pp. 51-52). If he commits any wrong, he should beg pardon; otherwise he commits the offence of Dukkata. (Ibid. p. 52).

In case the Upajjhāya is ‘lost’ and he still needs ‘guardianship’, he should find out an ‘able’ and ‘competent’ monk and take him up as his ‘Ācariya’ in place of his Upajjhāya. In the following circumstances an Upajjhāya is regarded as ‘lost’: If the Upajjhāya goes away somewhere; or disrobes; or changes his religion; or is dead; or the Saddhivihārika is ‘expelled’ by his Upajjhāya. (Mv. p. 67).

Saddhivihāri

Saddhivihārika-Vatta

Duties of an Upajjhāya (preceptor) towards his Saddhivihārika (disciple). It has been laid down that the Upajjhāya should treat his Saddhivihārika as his own son. The Upajjhāya should preach him in the Dhamma and train him in the Vinaya and in other monastic matters. He should also find out robe or bowl or any other requisite if the Saddhivihārika does not have with himself. When the Saddhivihārika is sick, it is the duty of the Upajjhāya to attend upon him and render all the services till he is recovered. In case the Saddhivihārika develops any 'wrong view' or 'antipathy' towards the Dhamma, the Upajjhāya should endeavour to his utmost to dispel it. In short, the Upajjhāya should instruct him everything essential for the monk-life. But if the Saddhivihārika does not behave properly, he should be 'expelled' (Paṇāmanā). (For details see : Cv. pp. 332-336; Mv. pp. 48-51; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1031-1032). Also see UPAJJHĀYA.

Santaruttara

Sa+Antara+Uttara=i.e. with the Antaravāsaka and the Uttarāsanga (and not with the third robe, the Saṅghāṭī). (Sahaantaravāsakena uttarāsaṅgenā ti attho.—SP. Vol. II, p. 656). The monks are not allowed to enter into a village with these two robes only, but the third one, the Saṅghāṭī also must be carried. Otherwise the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 313). Under the following circumstances a monk can go round in a village with his two robes only : When he is sick (gilāno), during the four months of rains (vassika saṅketam), when crossing a river, when the retention of the Saṅghāṭī is safe in the Vihāra under lock and key (aggaḷagutti-vihāro vā hoti), or when one has got the Kaṭhina privileges. (Ibid. p. 313; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 656-657).

Santhata

A spreading or mat made of wool by gluing together with some kind of sticky substance but not by weaving. (Cf. Santhatam nāma santharituṃ katam hoti avāyimaṃ.—Para. p. 322; Kv. (M), p. 172; SP. Vol. II, pp. 693-695). (It is something like Namadā in Hindi).

A Santhata made of mixed silk or black sheep-wool was not allowed for the use of the monks. If any monk used such a Santhata, he committed an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule Nos. 11 & 12; Pm. (B), p. 8). A Santhata should have half black wool, one fourth white and the rest one fourth in Gocariya colour' (pale, brown, reddish, yellow or blue). If it was not made so, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Rule No. 13; Ibid. p. 8). It is also laid down that a Santhata must be used at least for six years and no new should be taken up within this period. If a Bhikkhu wished to seek a new Santhata during this period, he was liable to commit an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya. (Rule No. 14; Ibid. p. 8; Cf. Para. pp. 321-329).

Sanniṭṭhānantikā

It is one of the eight occasions when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) of the Kaṭhina are forfeited or withdrawn. The Sanniṭṭhānantikā occurs when a Bhikkhu goes away from his Vihāra-sīmā and decides there neither to make his robe nor to return to his Vihāra. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1179).

Also see : KATHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Sannidhikāraṇaṃ

Storing of the goods, especially the eatables. The savoury things like Sappi (Ghee), butter, oil, honey and Phāṇita (molasses) may be stored as medicines for a week only, after which a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī is not allowed to keep them. If they kept for more than a week, the offence of a Nissaggiya Pācittiya was committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25). But some medicines may be stored for the whole life and can be used whenever necessary. (Pāra. p. 357, Pm. (B), pp. 9 & 37). Any food (Bhojanīya) or eatable (Khādaniya) (other than the above mentioned things) should never be stored even for one night. It must be eaten up before noon on the same day. If it is stored even for one night and taken next day, the Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 39; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 121; Pm. (B), p. 225; Pac. p. 122, Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 859-861),

Sapadāna-Cārikā

Going round for alms (begging) without leaving any house; an uninterrupted begging. It is regarded as one of the Dhutaṅgas (penances). (Mv. p. 227; Cf. Visuddhimagga, Chapter II; Pari. p. 339. Cf. Gharapāṭipāṭiya bhikkhāya pavisati.—SP. Vol. I, p. 198).

A Bhikkhu is expected to practise this type of begging the alms. (Bhikkhu Sekhiyā Rule No. 33).

A Bhikkhu who follows this mode of begging is known as Sopadānacāriko. (Pārā. p. 19).

Saparikkamana

The sufficiency of land for a proposed Kuṭī or a Mahallaka Vihāra, so that one can go round the building with 'yoked wagon' or 'can place the ladder' from outside without any difficulty is called Saparikkamana. (Cf. Yathāyuttēna sakatēna anuparigantum samantā nisseṇiyā anuparigantum.—Pārā. pp. 223 & 235. Saupacāraṃ.—SP. Vol. II, p. 569). It is laid down that the desirous monk should approach the Saṅgha for the formal 'approval' of the land (vatthudesanā) and after 'approval' the construction should be taken up. If this formal 'approval' is not taken prior to construction, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Pārā. pp. 223 & 236).

Sappaṭikamma—Āpatti

An 'offence' which can be redressed, i.e. all the 'offences' other than the Parājika. It is the same as Sāvasesa-āpatti. (Cf. Sāvasesādikasadisaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419; Pari. p. 211).

Sappi

Clarified butter, Ghee. It is regarded as a medicine allowed for the monks. (Mv. p. 218). The Sappi of cow, goat, buffalo or of any other animal of which the meat is permissible, can be used by the monks. (Pāra. p. 357).

The Sappi is also a kind of 'sumptuous food' and given in the list of Paṇita-bhojanāni. (Cf. Paṇitabhojanāni—Sappi, Navanītaṃ, Telam, Madhu, Phāṇitaṃ, Maccho, Maṃsaṃ, Khīraṃ, Dadhi.—Pāc. pp. 123-124). If a monk asks for it by himself and also uses it as 'food', he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 39; Ibid. p. 123; Pm. (B), p. 14). But in the case of a Bhikkhunī the offence would be Paṭidesanīya. (Rule No. 1; Pāc. pp. 482-483; Pm. (B), p. 52). It is also mentioned in the Samantapāsādikā that if a Bhikkhu asks for Sappi and uses it, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa; but if he asks Sappi to be mixed with food and taken it as his meal, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (SP. Vol. II, p. 862).

It is laid down that a Bhikkhu or Bhikkhunī can store it as a medicine for seven days only. If it is kept for more than seven days, an offence of Nissaggiya Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 23; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 25; Pāra. p. 356; Pm. (B) pp. 9 & 37; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 720-721). It is also regarded as a thing to be licked. (Paṭisāyaṇīya.—Pāra. p. 356).

Sabbakaṇha-Cīvara

A robe all in black colour. The Buddha has not allowed the monks or nuns to use a robe of black colour. If one uses such a robe, he (she) commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. 321).

Sabbatthapaññatti

Enactment of the ecclesiastical rules applicable to all places. (Cf. Sabbatthapaññattīti majjhimadesse ceva paccantimajanapadesu ca, sabbatthapaññatti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1396; Cf. Pari. p. 4).

Sabbanīlaka-Cīvara

A robe all in blue colour. A robe of such colour is not allowed for the monks or nuns. If one uses a robe of this colour, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Sabbapīṭaka-Cīvara

A robe all in yellow colour. A robe of this colour is not allowed for the monks or nuns. If one uses such a robe, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa (Mv. p. 321).

Sabbamañjiṭṭhaka-Cīvara

A robe all in crimson colour. A robe of this colour is not allowed for the monks or nuns. If one uses such a robe, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 31).

Sabbamattikamaya—Kuṭikā

Same as KUMBHAKĀRIKA-KUṬIKĀ

Sabbamahāraṅgaratta—Cīvara

A robe of bright red colour like the back of the centipede. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1146).

A robe of this colour is not allowed for the monks and nuns. If any one uses a robe of this colour, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Sabbamahānāmaratta—Cīvara

A multi-coloured robe, like dead leaves. (Cf. Sambhinnavaṇṇā hoti paṇḍupalā-savaṇṇā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1146)

The monks and nuns are not allowed to use this colour for their robes. If one uses so, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Sabbalohitaka—Cīvara

A robe all in red colour. This colour is not allowed for the robes of the monks and nuns by the Buddha. If one uses so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 321).

Samaṇuddesa

Same as Sāmaṇera. See SĀMAṆERA.

Samaṇakappa

Any thing formally made 'suitable' or 'acceptable' for the monks is regarded as 'samaṇakappa'.

This is usually necessary when a monk is to take a fruit having seeds. It is laid down that the destruction of a seeds or plants (Bijagāma, Bhūtagāma) by a monk is an act of an offence of Pacittiya. (Bhūtagāmapātabyatāya Pācittiyaṃ. Rule

No. 11; Pāc. p. 55; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 774-784). The monks are, therefore, warned by the Buddha not to eat any fruit having seed, even the mangoes, unless the seeds are taken out and the fruit is made 'suitable' (samṇakappa) for the monks. Such 'suitability' may be made by burning the fruit in fire (aggiparicitaṃ); or by taking out the seed by a knife (satthaparicitaṃ); or the seed is removed by nail (nakhaparicitaṃ). This should be done by an unordained person, i. e. by a layman.

But if the fruit is seedless (abījaṃ) or the seed is not yet ripe (?) (nibbattabījaṃ), it is however 'suitable' for the use of the monks. It is warned that a monk must be sure before taking a fruit that its seed is taken out and the seed is not being destroyed. This 'suitability' (samaṇakappa) must be ascertained beforehand. (Cv. pp. 197-198).

Samaṇakuttaka

An imposter who by putting on yellow robe lives in the vihāra for getting food; like Migalaṇḍika. (Pārā. p. 85; Cf. Samaṇavesadhārako, so kira sikhāmatthaṃ tthopetva sīsaṃ muṇdetvā ekaṃ kasāvaṃ nivāsetvā ekaṃ aṃse katvā vihāraṃ yeva upanissāya viḥāsādhāvena jīvati.—SP. Vol. II, p. 397).

Samaṇabhatta-samaya

An invitation for meals by a Samaṇa or a mendicant (paribbājaka) is known as Samaṇabhatta-samaya. (Cf. Yadā koci pabbajito bhatten nimanteti ayaṃ samaṇabhatta-samayo.—Kv. (M), p. 217; SP. Vol. II, p. 833). The Gaṇa-bhojana is allowed for the monks on such occasions. (Pm (B), pp. 13 & 47; Pāc. p. 107).

Samatha

'Settlement' of a 'dispute' or 'legal question' (Adhikaraṇa). (Cf. Adhikaraṇāni samanti vūpasamantīti adhikaraṇa-samathā.—Kv. (M), p. 289). Seven 'procedures' are followed for the 'settlement' of a 'case' according to the nature of the adhikaraṇa. The 'procedures' are : (1) Samnukkhavinaya, i.e. the 'settlement' should be arrived at in the presence of the Saṅgha (Saṅghasamukkhata), the case must exist (Dhammasamukkhata), the verdict should be according to the Vinaya rules (Vinaya-samukkhata) and both the parties should be present when the case is being discussed (Puggalasamukkhata) (Cv. p. 178; Kv. (M), p. 289). (2) Sativinaya; i.e. the 'settlement' is arrived at when an Arahanta monk makes an 'appeal' to the Saṅgha about his immunity from committing any 'offence'. The Saṅgha then formally approves of his immunity from committing any 'offence' as he is a Khīṇāsava and 'vigilant' enough not to commit any 'offence' at all. When it is so formally 'approved' by the Saṅgha, no 'case' can stand against him. (Cv. pp. 184-185; Cf. Ayaṃ pana sativinayo khīṇāsavasseva dātabbo na aññassa antamaso anāgāmino pi.—SP. Vol. III. pp. 1271-1272; Dinne pana sativinaye puna puggale kassaci anuṇḍo na rūhati.—Kv. (M), p. 290). (3) Amūḥhavinaya; i.e. 'settlement' of a case concerning with a mad person. The Saṅgha declares an acquittal in favour of a monk who had committed some offences when he was insane; and now since he has restored his sanity, he should not be charged with those offences committed during his insanity period, which he actually does not remember. A formal declaration is made by the Saṅgha to this effect at the request of the Bhikkhu concerned. (Cv. pp. 185-187; Cf. Kv. (M) p. 290; SP. Vol. III, p. 1272. (4) Tassapāpiyyasikā, i. e. the procedure adopted for the 'settlement' of cases against a 'problem bhikkhu' who always prevaricates when charged with the Pārājika or such grievous offences. He is then declared by the Saṅgha as a 'sinful monk' (Pāpabhikkhu). (Cf. Idaṃ hi yo pāpussannatāya pāpiyo puggalo, tassa katabbato tassapāpiyyasikākamman ti vuccati.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1273; Also Cf. Kv. (M) p. 290; Cv. pp. 177-178). After this declaration no charge against him should be brought before the Saṅgha, for he has now become incorrigible' one. The Saṅgha can take him back (Osāraṇā) only if he behaves righteously and requests the Saṅgha for pardon. (Cv. pp. 187-88; Kv. (M) p. 290). (5) Paṭiññātakarāṇa; i. e. to confess the offence by himself in the presence of a monk. This confession is a sort of 'pacification' of an offence and the Bhikkhu has then to assure that he would not commit the same in future. (Cv. pp. 188, 190; Kv. (M) p. 291). (6) Yebhuyyasikā, i. e. to arrive at a 'settlement' of a dispute by the majority of votes of the Dhammavādī bhikkhus (righteous monks). (Cv. pp. 182-184; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1272-1273). (7) Tiṇavatthāraka, i. e. the 'settlement' of a dispute by the method of 'covering up with grass' in order to avoid further bitterness. The charges and counter-charges are then 'covered up' by coming to a mutual settlement; and, therefore, the matter is not required to be placed before the Saṅgha for further discussion. As the filth, when it is disturbed, becomes a greater nuisance than before and the safest way is to cover it up by spreading grass over it, so also some matters should be dropped and shelved for good in the larger interest of the Saṅgha. (Cf. Yathā hi gūtham vā muttam vā ghaṭṭiyamānaṃ duggandhatāya bādhati, tiṇehi avattharitvā supaṭicchāditassa paṇassa so gandho na bādhati. Evameva yaṃ adhikaraṇaṃ mūlānumūlaṃ gantvā vūpasamiyamānaṃ kakkhalattāya bāḷattāya bhedāya samvattati. Tāṃ iminā kammēna vūpasantaṃ gūtham viya tiṇavatthārakena paṭicchannaṃ sūvūpasantaṃ hoti ti. Idaṃ kamman tiṇavatthārakasadisattā tiṇavatthārako ti vuccati.—SP. Vol., III, p. 1273). This mode of settlement is adopted only if the offence is light but never for grievous offences. (Cv. pp. 190-192; Cf. Kv., p. 291).

All the above mentioned seven kinds of Samathas are referred to in the Pāṭimokkha in brief; but in the Samathakhandhaka of the Cullavagga details are given (pp. 150-192).

Samānasamvāsa—Sīmā

The 'limit' or 'boundary' of all the residences of one area, fixed for the purpose of holding Upasatha and also for other Saṅgha-kammas. To determine the Sīmā or 'boundary' a Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the monks for the purpose. (Mv. pp. 109-113). Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1017-1102). See SĪMĀ.

Samānāsanika

A monk who is eligible to sit on the same bed or chair with any other monk, junior or senior by three years (either side from Upasampadā), is known as Samānāsanika. (Cf. Anujānāmi bhikkhave tivassantarena saha nisīditum.—Cv. p. 264). For instance, a monk of five years standing can sit with any who is three years old by Upasampadā.

This rule is applicable to a small bed or chair where only two or three persons can sit. But in the case of a big seat or chair it does not apply. A seat which can accommodate at least three persons should be regarded as big; and a monk can sit on it with any monk, senior or junior. But a monk should not sit with a eunuch, a woman or a hermaphrodite on such a seat. (Ibid.).

Samuṭṭhāna

Sufficient cause to originate an 'offence' (āpatti). An 'offence' may be committed by bodily action (kāya), or by speech (vācā), or by both (kāya+vācā), or by body and mind (kāya+citta), or by speech and mind (vācā+citta), or by body, speech and mind all three together (kāya+vācā+citta).

In the Parivārapāli, the 'offences' of Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs (as mentioned in the Pātimokkha) have been classified under 13 heads, not as the above six groups. This has been done by combination and permutation of the above six groups. This can be shown thus : (1) Kāya+citta (Paṭhamapārājikasamuṭṭhāna); (2) Kāya+citta, Vācā+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Dutiyapārājikasamuṭṭhāna); (3) Kāya, Vācā, Kāya+vācā, Kāya+citta, Vācā+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Sañcarittasamuṭṭhāna); (4) Kāya+vācā+citta (Samanubhāsanāsamuṭṭhāna); (5) Kāya+vācā, Kāya+vācā+citta (Kaṭṭhinasamuṭṭhāna); (6) Kāya, Kāya+citta (Elakalomasamuṭṭhāna); (7) Vācā, Vācā+citta (Padosodhammasamuṭṭhāna); (8) Kāya, Kāya+vācā, Kāya+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Addhānasamuṭṭhāna); (9) Kāya+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Theyyasatthasamuṭṭhāna); (10) Vācā+citta (Dhammadesanāsamuṭṭhāna); (11) Kāya, Vācā, Kāya+vācā (Bhūtārocanasamuṭṭhāna); (12) Vācā+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Corivuṭṭhāpanasamuṭṭhāna); (13) Vācā, Kāya+vācā, Vācā+citta, Kāya+vācā+citta (Ananuññātasamuṭṭhāna). (Pari. pp. 160-166).

Samodhāna-Parivāsa

It is that Parivāsa penance which is observed by combining with that Saṅghādisa offence which is committed during the earlier Parivāsa period or during the Mānatta period (i. e. up to the Abbhāna period). This in fact is to be observed when the Mūlāyapaṭiṭṭhāna is inflicted upon. (Cv. p. P02). See: PARI-VĀSA.

Sambādha

The armpit or any private part of the body. (Cf. Ubho upakacchakā, muttakaraṇaṃ.—Pāc. p. 354).

The hair of such parts should not be removed. If a monk does so, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 224). And if a nun does so, she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 2; Pāc. p. 354). If there is some wound, the hair may however be removed. (Ibid.; Cf. SP. II, p. 960).

Sambhāraseda

A kind of medicinal treatment of gout by producing profuse sweating. For this purpose different kinds of medicinal leaves are boiled for making steam. (Cf. Nānāvidhapaṇṇabhaṅgaseda.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1155). This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks when they suffered from Angavāta (gout). (Mv. p. 224).

Sammajjanī

A broom. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks to accept it when offered. (Cv. p. 219).

Sammukha-Vikappanā

A formal 'assignment' of the 'extra' robe or bowl by the monk who desires to keep an 'extra' robe or bowl. (The monks are allowed only three robes and one bowl. If one keeps more than the prescribed number, he commits the offence of Nissaggiya-pācittiya). The desirous monk approaches another Bhikkhu (usually known as Vinayadhara) and tells him thus: "Imaṃ cīvaram (pattam) tuyhaṃ vikappemi", i. e. "I 'assign' this robe (bowl) to you" The other monk accepting it soon returns the same to him telling thus: "Mayhaṃ santakam, paribhuñja vā chaḍḍehi vā yathāpaccayam vā karohi," i.e. "This is my belonging, (but) you may use it or throw it away as you like it." The desirous monk then takes that robe or bowl back (as not belonging to himself). And now he becomes entitled to use this 'extra' robe or bowl for himself without involving any offence. This is known as Sammukha-Vikappana.

There is another kind of Vikappanā, known as Parammukhāvīkappanā. In that case the desirous monk 'assigns' the robe or bowl to a Vinayadhara monk, not in his own name but in the name of another monk-friend. The Vinayadhara then returns it to the desirous monk in the name of the said monk-friend. He then takes it back and uses it. (Pāc. p. 166; Cf. Kv. (M), pp. 242-243).

It is laid down that no bowl or robe should be retained for himself if it is offered for the purpose of Vikappanā. If one does so, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 59; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 140. Pāc. pp. 165-166; Pm. (B), pp. 16 & 49).

Sammukhavinaya

A kind of 'procedure' of the settlement of a 'dispute' or 'case.' This procedure requires the 'presence' of four conditions for arriving at a settlement. These are : (1) The settlement should be made in the presence of the Saṅgha (Saṅgha-sammukhatā); (2) The case or matter actually exists (Dhamma-sammukhatā), (3) The settlement should be arrived at according to the Vinaya rules (Vinaya-sammukhatā); (4) Both the parties must be present when the case is being discussed (Puggala-sammukhatā). (Cv. p. 178; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 289).

The procedure of the Sammukhavinaya is applicable to all the four kinds of Adhikaraṇas (cases or disputes), viz., Vivādādhikaraṇa, Anuvādādhikaraṇa, Āpattādhikaraṇa and Kiccādhikaraṇa. (Cv. pp. 177-180; Kv. (M), pp. 289-291).

Sometimes when the Ubbāhikā method for settling the dispute is adopted, the Saṅgha then appoints a competent and able monk or monks to act on behalf of the Saṅgha. Since in this case the monk or monks represent the whole Saṅgha, it is also regarded as 'Saṅghasammukhatā.' Hence this is also regarded as a kind of Sammukhavinaya. (Cv. pp. 180-182).

In case a person reopens a settled matter, he commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Ukkotane pācittiyam.—Rule No. 63; Pāc. p. 171; Pm. (B), p. 16; Cv. p. 187).

Sammuti-Kappiyabhūmi

It is one of the four 'prescribed places' (Kappiyabhūmis) to store the food-stuffs for the monks. For this purpose the Saṅgha gives its 'sanction' (Sammuti) by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. It is, therefore, called Sammuti-kappiyabhūmi. (Mv. p. 254; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1164). See : KAPPIYABHŪMI.

Sarabhañña

Recitation of the Suttas loudly; but never like singing. (Cv. p. 197; Cf. Sarena bhaṇanam. Sarabhaññe kira turaṅgavattadhotakavattagalitavattādīni deattimsavat-tāni atthi Tesu yaṃ icchatī taṃ kātuṃ lubbhati. Sabhesaṃ padavyañjanam avināsetvā vikāraṃ akatvā samaṇasārūppena caturassarena nayena pavattanam eva lakkhānam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1284). Such a method was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 197).

Saritaka

Stone-powder or sand used as a preventive against rust or stain on the needle. (Pāsāṇacunṇam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1287). This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 204).

Saritakasipāṭikā

A piece of cloth applied with sand and bee-wax in order to remove rust or stain from the needle. (Madhusittakapilotikam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1288). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Cv. p. 204).

Salākaggāho

The collection-method of votes given by ballot-sticks (Salākā). The Buddha has laid down three methods for collecting the ballot-sticks; viz., (I) Secret collection (Gūḷhakaṃ); (II) By whispering in the ear the colours of ballot-sticks of different groups (Sakaṇṇajappakaṃ); (III) By open balloting (Vivaṭakaṃ). (Cv. p. 184). In secret balloting (Gūḷhakaṃ) the collector of the ballot-sticks (Salākaggāhāpaka) approaches every monk and informs the colours of the ballot-sticks of different groups and asks to pick up the desired ballot-stick without showing it to others. By distributing all the ballot-sticks, the Salākaggāhāpaka monk comes to know whether the 'righteous' monks (Dhammikā) or the 'unrighteous' monks (Adhammikā) are in majority. In case the 'righteous' monks are found in majority, he discloses the result; but if it is the otherwise, he is to postpone for re-voting (to the maximum of three times). (Cv p.184; Cf. Alajjussanāya parisāya gūḷhako salākaggāho katabbo.—SP. Vol. III, pp.1278-1279; Also Duggahitā salākāyo ti vatvā puna gahetvā yāvatatiyaṃ gāhetabbā.—Ibid.).

In the Sakaṇṇajappaka method of voting the Salākaggāhāpaka approaches every monk in the assembly and informs in the ears secretly the colours of the ballot-sticks and asks him to pick up one which he desires but not to speak to others. In case the Salākaggāhāpaka finds the 'righteous' monks in majority, he declares the result. But if the 'unrighteous' monks are found in majority, he should postpone it (to the maximum of three times) for re-voting. (Cv. p. 184; Cf. Bālussannāya parisāya sakaṇṇajappako..... Duggahitā salākāya ti vatvā puna gahetvā yāvatatiyaṃ gāhetabbā.—SP. Vol. III, pp. 1278-1279).

The Vivaṭaka Salākaggāho is the open balloting where the ballot-sticks are distributed openly. This method is adopted only when the majority of the monks positively consists of 'righteous' monks. (Cv. p. 124; Cf. Lajjussannāya parisāya vivaṭakaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1278).

There are ten types of valid collections of ballot-sticks (or votes) (Dhammikā salākaggāhā). These are : (1) The matter is not of inferior type (Na oramattakaṃ adhikaraṇaṃ hoti). (2) The collection is made for more than once or at places more than one (Gatigataṃ hoti. Cf. Dve tayo āvāse na gataṃ tattha tattheva vā dvattikkhattuṃ avinicchitaṃ.—SP. Vol. III, p.1272), (3) The colours of the ballot-sticks and also the matter are made known (Saritasāritaṃ. Cf. Dvattikkhattuṃ tehi bhikkhūhi sayam sāritaṃ va aññehi sāritaṃ vā na hoti.—Ibid. p. 1272), (4) The Salākaggāhāpaka knows well that the assembly consists of 'righteous' monks in majority. (5) Or he knows that probably the majority of the monks in the assembly consists of the 'righteous' monks. (6) He knows well that the Saṅgha will not 'disintegrate' if the voting is made. (7) Or probably the Saṅgha will not be 'disintegrated'. (8) He is sure that the ballot-sticks will be taken up according to the rule (i. e. only one stick by each monk, not more). (Cf. Adhammavādino evaṃ mayaṃ bahū bhavissāmāti dve salākāyo gaṇhanti.—SP. Vol.

III, pp. 1272-73). (9) All the monks of the assembly take up the ballot-sticks uniformly (Samaggā gaṇhanti). (10) The ballot-sticks are taken up according to their views (Yathā diṭṭhiyā ca gaṇhanti). (Cv. p. 164).

Salākaggāhāpaka

The monk appointed for collecting the ballot-sticks (Salākā) is known as Salākaggāhāpaka. He is to distribute different Salākās (the wooden strips) for the purpose of voting. This person must be just, honest and not be led away by favour, anger, indolence or fear and must know his job well. The appointment of the Salākaggāhāpaka is made by the Saṅgha unanimously, for which a Ñattidutiyakamma is held. (Cv. p. 164).

The appointment of the Salākaggāhāpaka is needed only when the matter has to be settled at by the method of a referendum (Yebhuyyasikā). (Ibid. p. 184).

The Salākaggāhāpaka monk is free to conduct the voting either by secret voting or by open balloting, as according to the situation. (Ibid. p. 184).

Salāka-Vātapāna

A window with bars. (Cf. Thambhākavātapāna.—SP. Vol. III, 1299). The Buddha allowed its provision in the Vihāra (Cv. p. 241).

Salākā (I)

A stick or strip of wood used as a ballot or for assigning the monks for a feast. This is a sort of ticket. (Cv. pp. 164, 182-183; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1347-1348). The Bhikkhu in-charge of distributing and collecting the ballots is known as Salākaggāhāpaka. (Cv. p. 164). For voting purposes different colours were used for the Salākās with a view to distinguishing different groups. (Ibid. p. 184).

Salākā (II)

A false-stick placed in between two layers of the robe with a view to avoiding them from being stitched together. (Cv. p. 205; Cf. Dupattācītarassa antare pavesanasa-lākaṃ.—SP. Vol. III. p. 1288).

Salākā-Bhatta

A meal allotted by the Saṅgha by the method of tickets (Salākā) or lot is known as Salākā-bhatta.

This method is followed when there are too many invitations; or when there is a possibility of getting a rich Dāna; or when the number of invitation is less than the number of the monks. For the purpose of assigning such meals, the Saṅgha selects a competent monk who is known as Bhattudesaka. (Cv. p. 272; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1347-1353).

The Buddha allowed this method for the monks. (Cv. p. 55).

Salākodhāniya

A stand for keeping the Añjanisalāka (Collyrium-needle). This was allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. (Mv. p. 222; Cf. Yattha salākaṃ odahanti, taṃ susiradaṇḍakaṃ vā thavikaṃ idā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1154).

Sahajīvinī or Saddhivihārini

Feminine of Saddhivihārika (disciple). It is the duty of Sahajīvinī to obey her Upajjhāyā or Pavattinī (preceptress); otherwise she would commit an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 69; Pāc. p. 448; Cf. SP. Vol. II, p. 984; Kv. (M), p. 344; Pm. (B), p. 43).

Sahubbhāra

It is one of the occasions when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) of Kāṭhina are forfeited or withdrawn. It occurs when a monk goes away from his Vihāra-sīmā and makes the robe there with the idea to return to his own Vihāra. But later on he changes his mind and decides to forego his Kāṭhina in favour of an other monk, who also agrees to his proposal. This is known as Sahubbhāra. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol III, pp. 1178-1179). Also see KATHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Sājīva

'Precepts' governing the monastic life of the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs. It is a synonym to 'Sikkhā'. It is so called because all the Bhikkhus or Bhikkhunīs lead one mode of life and also live together; and hence 'Sājīva'. (Cf. Nānājūti ādi bhedaḥhinna bhikkhū ārammaṇakaraṇavasena avitikkamitvā sahajīvanti, sikkhanti ethāti sājīvaṃ, paññatti sikkhāpadassa etaṃ nāmaṃ.—Pātimokkhapadatthanuvāṇanā (M), p. 66; Also Cf. Sājīva nāmayam bhagavatā paññattaṃ sikkhāpadaṃ etaṃ nama.—Pārā. p. 30; Cf. SP. Vol. I, 231).

Sāṭiyaggāhāpaka

A Bhikkhu appointed to accept the robes or robe-cloth on behalf of the Saṅgha is called Sāṭiyaggāhāpaka. The Saṅgha selects an 'able' monk for this purpose by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Cv. pp. 274-275).

Sāṇa

A kind of coarse cloth made out of the bark of hemp. (Sana in Hindi). It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks to use it as one of the six cloth-materials. The other materials are : Khoma, Kappāsika, Koseyya, Kambala, Bhaṅga. (Mv. pp. 55, 100, 298; Cf. Saṇaṃ ti sāṇavākausuttam.—SP. Vol. II, p. 735).

Sādhāraṇa-Paññatti

An enactment of ecclesiastical rules common to both, the Bhikkhu and Bhikkhunī Saṅghas alike. (Cf. Bhikkhūnaṃ ceva bhikkhunīnaṃ ca sādharmaṇapaññatti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1396; Pari. p. 4).

Sāmaṇ-Pakkam-Piṇḍam

Self-cooked food. No monk is allowed to cook his food by himself. In fact he is expected to live on alms. If one cooks his food by himself, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 253; Cf. Yaṃ kiñci āmisaṃ bhikkhu pacituṃ na vaṭṭati—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156).

Sāmaggi-Uposatha

That Uposatha which is held by the Saṅgha on any day, other than on Pañṇarasī or Cātuddasī, in order to grant confirmity to a quarrel which has already been made up, is known as Sāmaggi-Uposatha. This is a sort of 'reconciliation' Uposatha. (Mv. pp. 388-389; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1226; Kv. (M) p. 86). See UPOSATHA.

Sāmaṇera or Samaṇuddesa

A novice of the Buddhist Order. When a person desires to get himself admitted into the Buddhist Saṅgha as a Sāmaṇera, the ceremony of Pabbajjā is held. For this purpose the desired person approaches the Saṅgha having his head and moustaches shaved and by putting on the yellow robes. He undergoes the three 'refuges' (Tirsaraṇa), viz., the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha. He is then required to observe the following ten 'precepts' (Dasasikkhāpada). (1) Abstention from killing the living beings (Paṇātipātā veramaṇī); (2) Abstention from taking 'what is not given' (Adiṇṇādānā veramaṇī); (3) Abstention from unchastity (Abrahmacariyā veramaṇī); (4) Abstention from telling a lie (Musāvādā veramaṇī); (5) Abstention from the occasion on sloth (induced by) fermented liquor (Surāmerayamajjapamādaṭṭhānā veramaṇī); (6) Abstention from taking meals after mid-day (Vikālabhojanā veramaṇī); (7) Abstention from seeing shows of dancing, singing, music, etc. (Naccagītavādītavisūkadassanā veramaṇī); (8) Abstention from the occasions of using garlands, scents, unguents and wearing finery (Mālāgandhavilepanadhāraṇamaṇḍanavibhūsanatṭhānā veramaṇī); (9) Abstention from using high beds, etc. (Uccāsayanamahāsayanā veramaṇī); (10) Abstention from accepting gold-silver (coins), etc. (Āratarūparajatopatiggahaṇā veramaṇī). (Mv. pp. 86-87). After this formal 'undergoing' to the ten precepts the Pabbajjā is regarded as conferred upon.

There are as many as 32 types of persons who are not eligible for the admission into the Order as a Sāmaṇera. These are : A person whose hands are cut off; nose cut off, ears cut off, nose and ears both cut off; fingers cut off, nails cut off; the tendons of feet are cut off; who has webbed fingers; a hunchback; a dwarf; one who has goitre; one who has been branded (for a crime); one who has been scourged; one who is a 'registered' thief (notorious), one who has elephantiasis; one who is sickly; one who can 'disgrace' the assembly (for being too ugly); one-eyed person; one with crooked limb; one who is paralysed by one side; a cripple; one who is infirm due to old age; a blind; a dumb; a deaf; a blind and deaf person; a blind dumb and deaf person. The admission of such persons into the Saṅgha involves the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Ibid. pp. 94-95). Besides the above mentioned thirty two types of persons the following persons are also forbidden to get their admission into the Saṅgha. These are : One who has not obtained the permission from his parents to lead the life of a mendicant (Ibid. p. 87); one who suffers from any of the following diseases, viz., leprosy (kuṭṭho), boil (gaṇḍo), eczema (kilāso), consumption (soṣo), epilepsy (apamāro) (Ibid. p. 76); one who is in king's military service (Rājabhāṭa) (Ibid. p. 78); one who 'bears the emblem' of a thief (Dhajābandhacoro) (Ibid. p. 78); an absconder from jail (Kārabhedakacoro) (Ibid. p. 79); one who has been punished for caning; one who has been a debtor; a slave (Ibid. p. 79); a eunuch (Ibid. p. 89); an imposter who has entered into the Saṅgha by himself stealthily (without proper ordination) (Theyyasamboṣaka) (Ibid. p. 90); a matricide; a patricide (Ibid.); a murder of Arahanta; one who has seduced a nun; a hermaphrodite. (Ibid. p. 92).

The usual age for admission into the Saṅgha as a Sāmaṇera was 15; but later on the Buddha allowed to anyone who can manage his affairs by himself and also who can observe the ten 'precepts'. (Ibid. p. 82). After the Pabbajjā, the Sāmaṇera is required to live under the guidance of a Bhikkhu till he gets his 'higher ordination', the Upasampadā.

A Sāmaṇera is not permitted to attend the recitation of the Pātimokkha nor can he take part in any Saṅghakamma as he is not yet a fulfilled Bhikkhu. (Ibid. p. 141; Pm. (B), p. 11).

The Pabbajjā (ordination) of a Sāmaṇera is cancelled if he commits the followings, and then he ceases to be a member of the Saṅgha. These are: Indulging in killing; stealing; unchastity; telling lie; drinking fermented liquor; deprecating the Buddha, Dhamma and Saṅgha; keeping 'wrong views' and seducing the nuns. (Ibid. p. 89).

In case a Sāmaṇera is found of improper behaviour, such as, attempting for the 'loss' of the monks, harming the monks, trying to create trouble in the living of the monks; abusing and chiding the monks or creating 'dissension' amongst the monks, he should be penalised (Daṇḍakamma) by disallowing him to live in the Vihāra where he has been residing. (Anujānāmi bhikkhave, yattha vā vasati, yattha vā paṭikkamati, tattha āvaraṇaṃ kātum ti.—Mv. p. 88).

Sāmaṇerapesaka (—Bhikkhu)

A monk made in-charge to supervise the work of the Sāmaṇeras allotted by the Saṅgha. The Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma to select an 'able' monk for this purpose. (Cv. pp. 274-275).

Sāmaṇerī

A female counterpart of the term Sāmaṇera, a female novice of the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha. This is the first stage, preceding to Sikkhamānā, towards the Bhikkhunīhood.

The rules for admission are the same as that of a Sāmaṇera. See: SĀMANERA.

Sālūkapāna

A sweet-drink prepared out of the root of the waterlily. It was one of the sweet-drinks (Pānāni) allowed for the monks by the Buddha. (Mv. p. 260). It is regarded as Yāmakālika and so it may be taken at any time, even in the evening or in the night. (Pāc. pp. 117, 119, 121, 122, 234, 244, 245; SP. Vol. III, p. 1167).

Sāvajjapaññatti

The enactment of such ecclesiastical rules which are commonly connected with the monks, nuns (in particular) and also with the laymen at large. The violation of these rules makes one 'defiled'. For instance, the killing of a living being is a sinful act for the monks, nuns as well as for the laymen. (pari. p. 211; Cf. Sāvajjapaññattitī lokavajjā.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1419; also Cf. Yassa sacittakapakkhe cittaṃ akusalameva hoti taṃ lokavajjāṃ nāma.—SP. Vol. I, p. 219).

Sāva nantikā

It is one of the eight occasions when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) of Kaṭhina are withdrawn or forfeited. It occurs when a monk goes away from his Vihāra-sīmā with a view to returning. There he makes the robe also but in the meantime he comes to know that his Kaṭhina has been withdrawn by the Saṅgha for some reasons. This is known as Sāvanantika. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180). Also see : KATHINA—UDDHĀRA.

Sāvasesā—Āpatti

The six offences, viz., Saṅghādisesa, Thullaccaya, Pācittiya, Pāṭidesanīya, Dukkata and Dubbhāsita are grouped under Sāvasesā-āpatti. (SP. Vol III, 1368). The remaining offence, i. e. Pārājika is known as Anavasesa-āpatti. (Ibid. p. 115; Cv. pp. 170, 178, 306; Pari. p. 211). It is called Sāvasesā because the āpatti (offence) if committed can be done away with and monkhood is not cancelled; while the Anavasesa-āpatti, i.e. Pārājika if committed, cannot be atoned and monkhood ceases for ever.

Sikkāsammuti

Ordinarily the Sikkā or the strings to hang the bowl is not allowed for the monks; but if a sick monk cannot carry his bowl without it, the Buddha has asked the monks to permit him the Sikkā by unanimous decision of the Saṅgha, if so requested. This is granted by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma by the Saṅgha. This formal grant by the Saṅgha is known as Sikkāsammuti. (Cv. pp. 221-222; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1292).

Sikkhamānā

A female novice (having crossed her Sāmaṇerī stage) who is undergoing a training of two years (or probationary period) preceding to her higher ordination (the Upasampadā), is known as Sikkhamānā. During this period she has to observe the following six Sikkhāpadas (precepts), for which the Bhikkunī Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. The Sikkhāpadas are : (1) Abstention from killing (Paṇātipātā veramaṇī); (2) Abstention from stealing (Adinnādānā veramaṇī); (3) Abstention from unchastity (Abrahmacariyā veramaṇī); (4) Abstention from falsehood (Musāvādā veramaṇī); (5) Abstention from intoxicants (Surāmerayamajjapamādatṭhānā veramaṇī); (6) Abstention from taking meals after mid-day (Vikālabhojanā veramaṇī). (Pāc. pp. 435-437).

The Upasampadā or the higher ordination can only be conferred upon when the Sāmaṇerī completes her two full years as a Sikkhamānā (unlike a Sāmaṇera who can get his Upasampadā without undergoing to any such probationary period). An offence of Pācittiya is committed if the Bhikkhunīs confer Upasampadā upon a Sāmaṇerī who has not completed her two years' probationary period as Sikkhamānā. (Rule No. 63; Pāc. p. 473; Pm. (B), p. 43).

If a married girl becomes a Sāmaṇerī and undergoes the training as a Sikkhamānā, she is known as Gihīgatā-sikkhamānā. The age of such a Sikkhamānā should not be less than ten years. If an unmarried girl gets her Pabbajjā as Sāmaṇerī and undergoes a training of Sikkhamānā, she is called Kumārībhūtasikkhamānā or Mahā-sikkhamānā. The age of this trainee should not be less than 18 years of age before undergoing the training. Thus, the Gihīgatā-sikkhamānā and Kumārībhūta-sikkhamānā must be twelve and twenty years of age respectively prior to Upasampadā. If it is not followed, the Pācittiya offences are committed. (Rule Nos. 65 & 71; Pāc. pp. 441 & 450; Pm. (B), pp. 43 & 44; SP. Vol. III, pp. 982-943).

A formal ceremony is held for allowing a Sāmaṇerī to undergo the 'training' as a Sikkhamānā (Sikkhāsammuti). The ceremony is simple. The desirous Sāmaṇerī requests the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha to allow her to undergo the 'training' of a Sikkhamānā. A Ñattidutiyakamma is held by the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha for this purpose. The Sāmaṇerī acknowledges it and promises before the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha to observe the above mentioned six 'precepts' scrupulously. (Pāc. p. 436).

Sikkhā

Training (in the Vinaya (discipline) and in the Dhamma). Generally it is of three types., viz., Adhisīla, Adhicitta and Adhipaññā. The Adhisīla-sikkhā relates to the training in the Paṭimokkha precepts. (Adhisīlasaṅkhātā sikkhā. Paṭimokkhasaṃvarasīlam adhisīlasikkhā nāma.—Kv. (M), p. 107). The Adhicitta-sikkhā is the training of 'higher thought', meditation. The Adhipaññāsikkhā is the training of higher knowledge, the Vipassanā. (Ibid.).

Sikkhāpaccakkhāna

Abandoning the 'precepts' of the Pātimokkha, i.e. abandoning the Bhikkhuhood. In the Kv. [(M), pp. 107-108] it is explained thus: Cittakhetta-kālapayogapuggalavijānanāvasena sikkhāya paccakkhānaṃ; i. e. the person has the genuine intention to abandon his monkhood (citta); utters (khetta) one of the twenty formulas (viz., Buddhaṃ paccakkhāmi, Dhammaṃ..., Saṅghaṃ..., Sikkhaṃ..., Vinayaṃ..., Pātimokkhaṃ..., Uddesaṃ..., Upajjhāyaṃ..., Ācariyaṃ..., Saddhivihārikaṃ..., Antevāsikaṃ..., Samānaupajjhāyakaṃ..., Samānaācariyaṃ..., Sabrahmacāriṃ..., Gihī maṃ dhārehi, Upāsakoti, Ārāmikoti, Sāmaṇeroti, Tittihiyoti, Tittihyasāvaki, Assamaṇoti, Asakyaputtiyoti maṃ dhārehi); utters the above 'formula' in the present tense (kāla); utters by speech not by writing or gesture (payoga); the person (puggala) is sane and the other person who is listening to his utterances is also sane and sensible and is in his presence. and understands the meaning and intention of the person who is abandoning the monkhood (vijānana). The Sikkhāpaccakkhāna is regarded as complete and final if the above six conditions are evident and thereafter the person is to be treated as one who has 'abandoned the Bhikkhuhood'. (Parā. pp. 30-35; Cf. SP. Vol. I, pp. 243-249; vol. II, p. 496).

The person who has abandoned the Bhikkhuhood is known as Sikkhāpaccakkhātaka.

If a Bhikkhunī disrobes, she is not entitled to become a nun again. (Cv. p. 401).

Sikkhāpaccakkhātaka

The person who has abandoned the Bhikkhuhood. Such a person is not allowed to attend any Saṅghakamma because he is regarded as a Vajjanīya-puggala (prohibited person). (Mv. pp. 141, 187; Parā. pp. 30-35).

See: SIKKHĀPACCAKKHĀNA.

Sikkhāpada

The set of 'precepts'. All the Pātimokkha rules for the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs (except Adhikaraṇa and Samatha) are known as Sikkhāpada. Many other rules of conduct for laymen, Sāmaṇera, Sāmaṇerī and Sikkhamānā are also called Sikkhāpada. (Cf. Mv. p. 87; Pāc. pp. 435-436; also Cf. SP. Vol. I, pp. 214-215, 266; Vol. II, p. 1432; Vol. III, p. 932).

Sikkhāsammuti

The Bhikkhunī Saṅgha gives a formal 'sanction' to a Sāmaṇerī who wants to attain the stage of Sikkhamānā. For this purpose the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. This formal 'sanction' is known as Sikkhāsammuti.

After obtaining this formal 'saction', the Saāmaṇerī has to observe the following six Sikkhāpadas (precepts) scrupulously: (1) Abstention from killing (Pāṇātipātā veramaṇī); (2) Abstention from stealing (Adinnādānā veramaṇī); (3) Abstention from falsehood (Musāvādā veramaṇī); (4) Abstention from taking intoxicants (Surāmerayamajjappamādatthānā veramaṇī); (5) Abstention from unchastity (Abrahmacariyā veramaṇī); (6) Abstention from taking meals after mid-day (Vikālabhojanā veramaṇī).

The period of 'training' as a Sikkhamānā lasts for two years. After that the Sikkhamānā has to obtain the 'sanction' of the Bhikkhunī Saṅgha to get her Upasampadā or the 'higher ordination' (Vuttthānasammuti). If anybody gives the Upasampadā to a Sāmaṇerī who has not received the Sikkhāsammuti, she commits the offence of Pācittiya (Rule No. 63; Pāc. pp. 436-437, 442).

Siṅgilonakappa

To regard as 'proper' to carry salt in the horn (case) with a view to using it whenever necessary. It is one of the 'ten points' which the Vajji monks pleaded as 'proper' for the monks. In the Second Buddhist Council held at Vesālī, a century after the Mahāparinibbāna of the Buddha this matter came up. It was resolved as 'improper' (akappiya) for the monks since it involved an offence of Pācittiya. (Rule No. 38). Cv. p. 428).

Sitthakatela

A specially prepared oil used as cosmetics. (Cf. Madhusitthakaniyyāsādisu yena kena ci cikkhalena.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1282). The monks were prohibited to use it. If anybody used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Sitāloḷi

An antedote prepared out of the mud adhering to the furrow in order to get rid of the sickness caused by taking something given by a housewife to seducing him (Gharadinnābādho). This is a kind of mud-drink. (Cf. Naṅgalena kassantassa phāle laggamattikaṃ udake oloḷitoṃ pāyetum.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1156). The Buddha allowed it for the monks. (Mv. p. 225).

Sīpadī

One who has elephantiasis. Such a person is not eligible for ordination. If anybody ordains him, he is liable to commit the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 95; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1082). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, it need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya, Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1082).

Sīmā

‘Limit’ or ‘boundary’, determined by the monks residing at one place for holding the Upasatha and other Saṅghakammas, and also to allowing the monks to live there by ‘keeping away any one of the three robes’ (Ticivarenaviṭṭhapaṇṇasīma.—Mv. pp. 109-112). All the Vihāras and other residences of the monks of a region may come within one Sīmā. For instance, during the time of the Buddha there were as many as eighteen Vihāras at Rājagaha and they all came under one Sīmā for the purpose of Upasatha and other Saṅghakammas. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1106).

To determine the Sīmā the Saṅgha should hold Ñattidutiyakamma and the ‘signs’ (nimitta) should be fixed. The ‘signs’ may be of the following eight objects, viz., a mountain (pabbata-nimitta), a block of stone (pāsāṇa-nimitta), a wood (vana-nimitta), a tree (rukkhanimitta), a highway (magga-nimitta), an ant-hill (vammika-nimitta), a river (nadī-nimitta), a watery place (udaka-nimitta). (Mv. p. 109; Cf. SP. Vol. III. pp. 1091-1106; Kv pp. 87-90). A Sīmā demarcated by these objects is known as Baddha-sīmā. It is also known as Khaṇḍa-sīmā, Samānasamvāsa-sīmā, Aviṭṭhapaṇṇasīma. (Kv. (M) p. 90).

In case a Bhikkhu lives in the vicinity of a town or a Nigama (townlet) or a village, the boundary of them should be regarded as the Sīmā for the monks living there for all the purposes of the Saṅghakammas or Upasatha. This is also sometimes called ‘Gāma-sīmā’. In case the Bhikkhus have to perform a Saṅghakamma in a forest, an area of seven Abbhantaras (i. e. $28 \times 7 = 196$ hands) all around the residence should be regarded as the Sīmā of the Saṅgha. This is known as Sattabbhantara-sīmā. When a monk or monks are on a boat or ship in a river or sea or lake, the Sīmā for the Upasatha or any Saṅghakamma may be determined by throwing water by a ‘man of average strength’ to all the directions. The point where the water falls should be treated as the Sīmā. This is known as Udakukkhepa-sīmā. As these types of Sīmās are not demarcated by any object and also that no Ñattidutiyakamma is necessary, they are known as Abaddha-sīmā. (Mv. p. 113; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1107-1110; Kv. (M), pp. 90-91).

No Sīmā should be fixed across a river unless there is a permanent bridge (Dhuvā setu) or a perpetual ferry arrangement (Dhuvā nāvā). (Mv. p. 109).

The extent of a Sīmā should not exceed more than three Yojanas (one Yojana = 7 miles). If it exceeds this, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. The Sīmā however should not be too small not even sufficient to accommodate 21 persons. (Kv. (M), pp. 87-88; SP. Vol. III, p. 1520).

The Sīmā of a particular region should not overlap or envelope the other. If so happens, the offence of Dukkaṭa is committed. (Mv. p. 113).

In case an occasion arises to revise or abolish the Sīmā, the Saṅgha should hold a Ñattidutiyakamma for the purpose. This revision of the Sīmā is known as Sīmā-samūhana. (Ibid. pp. 113-114; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1091-1106).

The following Sīmās cannot be regarded as 'proper' to hold any Saṅghakamma. These are of eleven types; viz., Too small a Sīmā (Atikhudda-sīmā); too big a Sīmā (Atimahattī-sīmā); a Sīmā with 'broken' signs (Khaṇḍanimitta-sīmā); a Sīmā fixed by shade (Chāyānimitta-sīmā); a Sīmā having no signs (Animitta-sīmā); a Sīmā determined from outside the region (Bahisīme t̥hitasammata sīmā); a Sīmā fixed in the river (Nadiyā sammata sīmā); or in the sea (Samudde sammata sīmā); or in a natural pond (Jātassara sammata); a Sīmā overlapping the other (Sīmāya sīmaṃ sambhindantā sīmā) and a Sīmā enveloping the other (Sīmāya sīmaṃ ajjhottharantā sīmā). (Pari. p. 387; Cf. SP. Vol. III pp. 1520-1521; Kv. (M), pp. 87-88).

Sīmātikāntikā

It is one of the eight occasions when the 'privileges' (ānisaṃsā) of Kāṭhina are forfeited or withdrawn. It occurs when a Bhikkhu goes away from his Vihārasīmā to some other place. He prepares his robe there; but somehow or other he does not return to his residence and the 'period of Cīvāra' (cīvāṅkalasīma, i. e. the time limit for preparing the robe of one day) passes away. By this he loses his 'privileges'. It is known as Sīmātikāntikā. (Mv. pp. 267-282; Pari. pp. 313-314; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1178-1180).

Also see : KĀṬHINA-UDDHĀRA.

Sīmā-Samūhana

The 'abolition or revision of a Sīmā' (boundary or limit) of the 'residences' of the monks which had earlier been fixed for the purpose of Upasatha or other Saṅghakammās. This 'abolition' or revision of the 'boundary' may take place on two occasions: (I) If the Sīmā is too small and the Saṅgha desires to have a bigger one; (II) If the Sīmā is too large and the Saṅgha desires to have a smaller one. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1108).

In case the Avippavāsasīmā (the Vihāra area as declared to live without any one of the three robes) is to be 'abolished', then the Samānasamvāsasīmā (the 'limit' of the Vihāras of one region for the purpose of holding Upasatha or other Saṅghakammās by the monks) should be 'abolished' simultaneously. (Mv. pp. 111-113).

Silavipatti

That 'offence' which causes to create a 'danger' for the observance of 'morality' (Sīlā) of a monk or nun. These 'offences' are of two kinds, viz., the Pārājikas (Bhikkhu Pārājika 4 + Bhikkhunī Pārājika 4 = 8) and the Saṅghādisesas (Bhikkhu Saṅghādisesa 13 + Bhikkhunī Saṅghādisesa 10 = 23). (Pari. pp. 4, 299; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1397, 1454).

Sugata-vidatthi

The span of the Sugata, the Buddha. It is always referred to in the texts as a standard measurement for making the robe, a hut or a residence of the Buddhist Order. The Atthakathās inform us that one Sugata-vidatthi is equal to three spans of a middle-sized person (majjhimapurisa) or one and half hand of a 'carpenter' (Vaḍḍhakīhattha). (Kv. (M), p. 134; SP. Vol. II, p. 567; Kaṅkhāyojanāmahātīkā (M), Vol. II, p. 236).

Suttuddesa-Uposatha

'The same as Saṅgha-Uposatha which is performed by the whole Saṅgha in which the Sutta, i. e. the Pātimokkha is recited. (Pari. p. 237; Cf. Kv. (M), p. 93). See: UPOSATHA.

Suttalūkha

Patching up any torn part of the robe by threading like net (not by stitching a piece of cloth); darning. (Cf. Suttana aggalaṃ kātum ti attho.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1198). It is usually done on a rag (paṃsukūla) or on a heavy robe. The Buddha allowed it for the monks. (Mv. p. 312).

Suddhanta-Parivāsa

In case a monk neither remembers the number of the days he has concealed the Saṅghādisesa nor the number of the Saṅghādisesa offences that he has committed, he is then required to observe the Parivāsa penance for the period he himself thinks approximately correct. This is known as Suddhanta-parivāsa. It is called Suddhanta simply because he himself has to determine the last date up to which he was 'clean' (suddha). The period of this Parivāsa is counted from the last day of him being 'clean' to the day he is going to take up the Parivāsa penance. (Cv. pp. 122-124). See also PARIVĀSA.

Supaṭicchanna

'Well-covered'. It is desired that a Bhikkhu or a Bhikkhunī should dress with the Uttarāsaṅgha or Saṅghāṭī in such a manner so that the neck and hands are fully covered and the robes hang properly and evenly and also the buttons are well fastened. (Cf. Supaṭicchanno ti, suṭṭhu paṭicchanno. Gaṇṭhikaṃ paṭimuñcivā anuvātantaṇa gīvaṃ paṭicchādetvā ubho kaṇṇe samaṃ katvā paṭisaṅgharivā yāva maṇibandhanaṃ paṭicchādetvā ti paṭicchannaṃ.—Kv. (M), p. 279; Also Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 922-923).

It is laid down that the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs when entering into a village or into a house or sitting there must dress themselves properly. If not so dressed, the offence of Dukkata is committed. (Sekhiyā Rule No. 3; Pm. (B), pp. 21 & 53; Pāc. p. 246).

Surā

Liquor, alcohol. It may be made of flour (piṭṭhasurā), of sweets (pūvasurā), of rice (odanasurā), of other ingredients (kiṇṇapakkhittā) or of mixed ingredients (sambhārasaṃyuttā).

All kinds of intoxicant are prohibited for the members of the Buddhist Order. If a monk or nun drinks Surā or any other alcohol, he or she commits an offence of Pācittiya. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 53; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 132; Pāc. p. 151; Pm. (B), pp. 15 & 48).

Abstention from taking any intoxicant is one of the ten Sikkhāpaḍas (precepts) which have to be observed by a Sāmaṇera (novice) or a Sāmaṇerī or a lay devotee. (Mv. p. 87).

Sūkarantaka

A kind of belt, as allowed by the Buddha for the use of the monks. It is made in the style of a pig's tail, hence this name. A buckle (vidhā) is also fixed at its one end. (Cv. p. 226; Cf. Kuñcikākosakasaṅṭhānaṃ hoti. Ekārajjukam pana muddikāya bandhanaṃ ca sūkarontakam anulometi.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294).

Sūci

A needle. It is one of the eight 'requisites' (parikkhāra) of the monks. The Buddha allowed it for the monks for stitching their robes. (Cv. p. 204).

Sūcikā (I)

A small bolt for the door. (Yatha tīṇi cattāri chiddāni katvā sūciyo yojenti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1289). Its use was allowed by the Buddha for the monks living in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241).

Sūcikā (II)

A key, to open the lock (yantakam). It was allowed by the Buddha for the monks when living in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 241; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1299)

Sūcighara

A needle-case, same as Sūcināḷikā. The needle-case should be made of ordinary materials, but never of ivory or horn. If it is made of ivory or horn, an offence of Pācittiya is committed; and that must be destroyed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 86; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 162; Pāc. p. 222; Pm. (B), pp. 19 & 51).

Sūcināḷikā

A needle-case, same as SŪCIGHARA.

Sekhiyā

A group of 'precepts' (sikkhāpaḍas) found in the Pātimokkha which consists of 75 'instructions' divided into the following seven 'sections', viz., Parimaṇḍalavagga, Ujjagghikavagga, Khambhakatavagga, Sakkaccavagga, Kaḍḍavagga, Surusuruvagga and Pādukāvagga. All these rules are meant for maintaining good habits and regulating good behaviour and 'conduct of the Bhikkhus and Bhikkhunīs'. As the meaning of the term indicates, the Sekhiyā rules are to be 'cultivated and practised' in order to maintain good habits. (Cf. Sekkhassa sikkhamānassa ujumaggānusārino. Ādi cetam caranam ca, mukham samyamasaṃvaro sikkhā etādisi natthi, tenetam iti vuccati.—Pari. p. 264).

The first two rules of the Sekhiyā are about proper dressing. The next twenty four rules (3-26) are the instructions as to how to enter into a village, into a town or into a house. (Antaragharo = antare antare gharāni ettha, etassāvāti antaragharo, gāmo.—Pātimokkhapadatthavaṇṇanā (M), p. 290). The next thirty rules (27-56) are the instructions regarding taking meals. Rules from 57 to 72 are connected with the preaching of the Dhamma (Dhammadesanā). The last three rules (73-75) are the instructions connected with toilettes, etc. (Pm. (B), pp. 21-25 & 53). The number and the contents of the Sekhiyās are the same in both the Bhikkhu and Bhikkhunī Pātimokkhas.

If a monk or nun transgresses any Sekhiyā, he or she commits the offence of Dukkaṭa, as mentioned in the Pācittiyapāli. (Pāc. pp. 245-280; Cf. SP. Vol. II, pp. 921-932; Kv. (M), pp. 276-288). But no mention of the āpatti (offence) is found in the Pātimokkha.

Sekkha-Sammuti

Declaration of a particular family of a lay-devotee as 'learner', because this family is developing in saddhā (faith) but is diminishing in bhoga (wealth) by giving away too much donations to the Saṅgha. For this purpose the Saṅgha holds a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Pāc. pp. 237 & 239-240). It is a sort of unanimous agreement arrived at by the monks not to go to this family for the alms unless particularly invited or the lay-devotee is sick and desires to see the monks. If a monk pays visit to this family for alms, he commits an offence of Pāṭidesanīya. (Rule No. 3; Ibid. pp. 237-241; Pm. (B), pp. 20 & 53). In fact, this restriction is followed with a view to avoiding any hardship which may cause to the lay-devotee by giving Dāna to the Saṅgha.

Seṇī

A tradesmen's guild, such as of the perfumers, weavers, etc. (Cf. Gandhi-kasenī dussikasenī ādikaṃ.—SP. Vol. II, pp. 946-947; also Cf. Gandhavikatikārako gaṇo gandhikasenī, pesakārādigaṇo dussikasenī.—Vimativinodanīṭikā (M), Vol. II, p. 72).

If a lady comes for her ordination and the nuns find her a thief, this matter must be reported to the Seṇī (if there prevails a Seṇī form of government). And if the nuns ordain her without reporting the matter to the Seṇī, they commit an offence of Saṅghādisesa. (Rule No. 2; Pāc. p. 302; Pm. (B), p. 29).

Sedakamma

A kind of treatment for gout (aṅgavāta) by sweating the body. This was allowed by the Buddha for the monks. (Mv. p. 223). Another treatment for gout was known as Mahāseda or Sambhāraseda. (Ibid. p. 224).

Senāsana

Literally it means 'the place for sleeping or sitting'. Thus it includes the Bhikkhus' or Bhikkhunīs' residence, Vihāra, furniture, beds, seat, pariṇeṇa and other buildings, etc. (Cf. Vihāro, Adḍhyogo, Pāsādo, Hammiyaṃ, Guhā, Maṇḍapo, Rukkhamūlaṃ, Velugumbo senāsanāni.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1313) In the Cullavagga [pp. 239-271] a full chapter is devoted to the Senāsana.

A monk in-charge of allotment of seats or Vihāra in an Ārāma is known as Senāsanagāhāpaka. (Ibid. p. 262). One who arranges seats for the guests is called Senāsanapaññāpaka. (Parā pp. 240-241).

A Senāsana in the forest is known as Āraññakasenāsana. This should be located at least five hundred dhanus (a measurement) away from human habitation.

Senāsanagāhā

The allotment of lodgings in a Vihāra particularly during the Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) or even after the Vassāvāsa is called Sanāsanagāhā. (Utukāle ca vassāvāse ca.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1308). The allotment of lodgings may be made by the beginning of the first Vassāvāsa (Purimikā) (i. e. after the full-moon day of Āsālha) or the second Vassāvāsa (Pacchimikā) (i. e. one month after). But those who wish to stay further, the allotment for them may be made even after the Pavāraṇā (antarāmuttako). (Cv. p. 263; Cf. SP. Vol. III, pp. 1308-1314).

Senāsanagāhāpaka

A monk in-charge of allotting the lodgings (seats, Seyyā) in a Vihāra for the monks during the first Vassāvāsa (rainy-season-resort) or the second or even after the Vassāvāsa. For this purpose an 'able' and 'competent' monk is selected by the Saṅgha by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. Only that monk should be selected who cannot be led away by greed, anger, indolence or fear and who knows the method of allotment well. (Cv. p. 262; Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1315). The allotment of the Senāsana (seats, etc.) should be made by the beginning of the first Vassāvāsa (Purimikā) or second (Pacchimikā) or just after the Pavāraṇā (antarāmuttako). (Ibid. p. 263).

Senāsanapaññāpaka

A monk in-charge of the arrangements of seats, etc. (seyyā), particularly for the guests is known as Senāsanapaññāpaka. He is like a receptionist; and so he is expected to look after the convenience of the guest-monk. A 'competent' and 'able' monk is selected by the Saṅgha by holding a Ñattidutiyakamma. (Parā. pp. 240-241).

Senāsanavatta

The rules that to be followed while living in a Vihāra, with regard to the lodgings, seats, rooms, beds, etc. In order to live in a disciplined manner and to keep the Vihāra neat and tidy, the Buddha has laid down certain rules for the monks. For instance, the dwelling place should be kept clean if found dirty; the walls should be cleaned if they have become black; if the floor is broken, it should be plastered and levelled; the rubbish should be thrown at suitable place, etc. The monks should not clean their beds, etc. by thrashing near the Vihāra or near the drinking or washing water or in the courtyard against the wind. It should be done to leeward. The monks should keep their coverings, couch, chairs, mattresses, squatting-mats, spittoons, reclining boards, bowls, etc. clean. When the dusty wind blows, the windows should be closed. If the cell, the porch, the meeting-hall, the fire-room or the privy, etc. become soiled, these should be neatly swept and cleaned. If there is no water in the pitchers, it should be fetched and the pitchers should be filled. When residing with a 'senior' monk, the junior should not deliver any 'recitation' (uddesa) or 'interrogation' (paripucchā); should not preach or speak the Dhamma; should not put on or put off the lamp by himself; should not open or close the windows without the permission of the senior monk. While pacing up and down, the junior should not touch him, even by the corner of his robe. (Cv pp. 323-325).

Seyyā

The bed, mat or mattress is called Seyyā. Ten kinds of Seyyās are allowed for the monks by the Buddha. These are: (1) Bhisi (mattress); (2) Cimilikā (a kind of mat to protect the cleaned floor. This may be made of rags, etc.); (3) Uttara-ttharaṇa (a spreading used as a bed cover); (4) Bhummattharaṇa (a carpet or mat to spread over the Cimilikā or on bare ground); (5) Taṭṭikā (a mat made of palm leaves, bark, etc.); (6) Cammakhaṇḍo (a spreading made of an animal's skin, such as lion's skin, tiger's skin, leopard's skin, bear's skin, etc.); (7) Nisīdana (a mat or spreading used for sitting); (8) Paccattharaṇa (a spreading on the couch); (9) Tiṇasanthāraka (a grass-mat); (10) Paṇṇasanthāraka (a mat made of leaves). (Pāc. pp. 64-65; SP. Vol. II, p. 792; Kv (M), p. 203).

The Seyyā belonging to the Saṅgha must be properly used and kept properly after use. If not so done, an offence of Pācittiya is committed. (Bhikkhu Rule No. 15; Bhikkhunī Rule No. 111; Pāc. p. 64).

Sopāna

A staircase. This may be of brick, stone or wood. The Buddha allowed its provision in a Vihāra. (Cv. p. 245).

Sobhaṇa

A kind of edging on the girdle. (Cf. Veṭhetvā mukhavatṭisibbanam.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). The Buddha allowed it for the monks if the belt was found worn out. (Cv. p. 226).

Ha

Hatthacchinna

A person whose hands or any part of the hand are mutilated. (Cf. Yassa hatthatale vā maṇibandhe vā kappare vā yattha kattha ci eko vā dve hatthā chinnaṃ honti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1080). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 94-95). In case such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled; but his Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all the those who took part in his ordination are not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086).

Hatthattharaṇa

A kind of spreading usually used on the elephant's back. (Cf. SP. Vol. III, p. 1149). This was a costly spreading and so regarded as Uccāsayanamahāsayana. The monks were not allowed to use it. If anybody used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. p. 211). It could however be used for sitting only but never for sleeping even if it belonged to a layman. (Cv. p. 258).

Hatthapallatthikā

A posture of squatting or sitting by joining both the hands round the knees. (Pāc. pp. 255, 273).

See : PALLATTHIKĀ.

Hatthapādachinna

A person whose hands and feet are cut. (Cf. Yattha catūsu hatthapādesu dve vā tayo vā hatthapādā chinnaṃ hoti.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1080). Such a person should not be ordained. If anybody ordains him, he commits the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Mv. pp. 94-95). But if such a person happens to get his ordination, this need not be cancelled. His Upajjhāya and Ācariya and all those who took part in his ordination ceremony are of course not free from the offence of Dukkaṭa. (SP. Vol. III, p. 1086)

Hatthābharana

An ornament of hand. Its use was prohibited by the Buddha for the monks. If anybody used it, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 195).

Hatthisoṇḍaka

A special mode of putting on the under-garment where the edges are so arranged as to look like the trunk of an elephant. (Cf Nābhimūlato hatthisoṇḍasaṅṭhānaṃ olambakaṃ katvā nivatthaṃ, colikitthīnaṃ nivāsanaṃ viya.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1294). This fashion was not allowed by the Buddha for the monks. If one did so, he committed the offence of Dukkaṭa. (Cv. p. 227).

Hammiya

A large multi-storeyed mansion with an upper chamber at the top, but without a dome. (Cf. Upari ākāsatale patiṭṭhitakūṭāgāro, pāsado eva.—SP. Vol. III, p. 1298; Also, Muṇḍachadanapāsādo.—Ibid. Vol. II, p. 660). It was one of the five lodgings approved by the Buddha as fit for the monks; the others being Vihāra, Aḍḍhayoga, Pāsāda and Guhā. (Cv. 239).

Hammiyagabbha

The main chamber built in the upper storey of a Vihāra. (Cf. Ākāsatale kūṭāgaragabbho vā muṇḍacchadana gabbho vā.—SP. Vol. III, 1303). In a big Vihāra it may be constructed in the middle, but in a small Vihāra it should be at one side. (Cv. p. 245).
